HARDING TIES UP KNOX PEACE

U.S. AT EUROPE COUNCIL HALTS VOTE IN HOUSE

Administration Plan May Split Senate.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—On the heels of President Harding's decision to resume limited participation in European councils, it was authoritatively stated today that the restoration of peace with Germany would be held up pending the outcome of the reparations controversy.

The Knox peace resolution, passed last Saturday by the senate, has been sidetracked indefinitely in the house, and it was learned that house leaders are acting in accord with the desire of the administration in deferring action on the resolution which the senate made such haste to adopt.

Dissatisfaction among Republican senators, particularly the irreconcilables, over the President's note to the allies yesterday increased to a feeling of intense but carefully repressed indignation when they learned that administration influences were at work against the Knox resolution in the house. Consequent elation prevailed among the Democrats.

Administration's Plans Uninterrupted.

Notwithstanding rumblings of dissatisfaction, the administration went its way unperturbed by any senatorial criticism that may have found its way to the White House or state department. The state department prepared instructions to Ambassador Wallace at Paris, and Roland W. Boyden to resume their posts as unofficial observers for the American government at the conference of ambassadors and reparations commission respectively. George Harvey, ambassador to Great Britain, who will sit as the American representative on the allied supreme council, will receive his instructions when he arrives in London next week.

Clash Is Forecast.

There were no Republican senatorial outbursts for publication. Senators felt their hands tied in more ways than one. The Johnson-Borah faction didn't want to set off the explosion because they feared it would be said they were hunting for trouble with the administration. Old guardsmen were restrained by their traditional adherence to party unity. Furthermore, they realized that the senate, at the present moment, was entirely powerless, and that nothing could be said or done to change the situation.

It was predicted, however, that the policy mapped out by yesterday's note must inevitably lead to a clash between the senate, or at least a portion of it, and the administration. One of the most prominent of the Republican leaders of the conservative wing declared that the participation outlined by the President would entangle the United States in the broils of Europe as certainly as if the Versailles treaty, with the league covenant included, had been ratified.

See U. S. Entanglement.

In this connection they recalled President Harding's own vigorous support, while a member of the foreign relations committee, of the Fall amendment to keep the United States out of the reparations commission. Sooner or later, they thought, the American participation in the reparations controversy must produce a development that would require the United States to take an affirmative stand and bring the whole issue of international policy again before the senate.

Some resentment was felt that President Harding had not consulted the senate before accepting the allied invitation to resume participation in their councils, although all admitted that the President was acting entirely within his authority. So far as could be learned, no senator knew anything of the President's intentions until the note was given to the press for publication yesterday afternoon. The belief was widespread among senators that the President had been influenced largely by Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary of Commerce Hoover, both of whom have been contending for months that the United States must take part in the world-wide economic readjustments growing out of the war.

Taunted by Democratic Senator.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, Democrat, brought the President's note into the debate before the senate today by taunting the administration with sarcastic references to its "oft changing position" and predicting it would soon be in the league of nations.

"The Republican leadership is following the course of the man they have been condemning and criticizing for eight years and following his poli

BEAUTY PRIZE WINNER CHOSEN FOR WISCONSIN

Marie Scarcliff First in Tribune Contest.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

To Janesville goes the honor of housing the most beautiful girl in Wisconsin, Miss Marie Scarcliff, who was awarded the first prize, $1,000, in THE TRIBUNE $20,200 beauty contest by the three artist judges, Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds. Her photograph appears on first page of today's rotogravure.

Not only is Janesville the present abode of Miss Scarcliff, but it boasts her birthplace and the birthplace of both her mother and her father, thereby making her a local product that will bring pride to the heart of her townsmen.

Complexion All Her Own.

Miss Scarcliff, who is 21, has nut brown hair, lovely violet blue eyes and long brown lashes, a lovely complexion plainly and distinctly of home-brew character, and a mouth whose corners turn up most happily. She is small in stature, about five feet two, and has, as the judges described in their choice of her for first prize, "a certain sweetness of expression, a pensiveness, a fine structure of the head, spirituelle eyes and a general piquancy" that weave a spell of loveliness.

Miss Scarcliff is a home girl, although she has done a few turns in the business world. Her father, who died last November, had a meat market and grocery store and Miss Marie helped him for awhile with the bookkeeping.

Prize Winner in Other Things.

She won a prize one time soliciting subscriptions for the local paper, and was rewarded to the extent of $250 and an offer of the society editorship, which she worked at awhile.

"She likes to cook, though," her mother confided. "She makes the best puddings and salads, and also is my right hand helper on the preparation of the other foods. And she helps me with the housework generally. She sews, too! And has quite a knack for designing."

Her home is hung with paintings from her mother's brush. And Miss Marie has inherited a certain talent along that line.

How She'll Spend It.

"What I would like best to do," she told me, "is to take a course in an art school. Perhaps I shall now with this prize money. I would like to illustrate or be an art designer of dress."

"Haven't you some pet extravagance you would like to indulge in with the money?" I queried.

"Yes," she laughed. "I'd like a diamond ring and a roadster and a good riding horse. But I guess I'll wait and see if they won't all come at once with——"

"A man," I guessed.

"I love to ride horseback. That's the one form of exercise I like best in the world—O yes, and I like to toddle, too," she added.

Disposition Matches Looks.

"It is wonderful, isn't it," she reflected, "to be chosen for such an honor. I am sure I appreciate it deeply. But it is quite a responsibility, don't you think? And it is kind of embarrassing, too, you know! I suppose by this time next week I will have thought of twenty different ways of using this money.

"She won't squander it," the mother interposed; "she has a good little business head on her for all that, and she is a dear, good girl, with the nicest kind of a disposition."

Miss Scarcliff has two brothers and two sisters, and she is next to the youngest of the family.

TEN GIRLS WON BANKER'S LOVE, "FIFI" CHARGES

Bitter Fight to Clear Her Name Planned.

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Affairs of ten women, including "Mrs. Florence Leeds," and James A. Stillman, will be dragged into the divorce case by Mrs. "Fifi" Stillman.

This is her answer, revealed today, to what she called Stillman's "frame-up" testimony of Canadian witnesses, and the so-called unethical testimony of Dr. Hugh Russell, her Buffalo physician.

Mrs. Stillman is going to fight back with all the fury of a woman scorned and driven to desperation to protect her own name and the future of her son, Guy Stillman.

Census of the Women.

The ten women in Stillman's affairs are described tonight as follows:

[No. 1, Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, mother of Jay Leeds, 2½. Mrs. Leeds' present residence was said to be unknown to Mrs. Stillman's attorneys, all trace of her having been lost since she left Miami, Fla., where investigators had located her.

No. 2, a beautiful dark haired and dark eyed woman, believed to be in society or on its fringe. Proof was said to have been obtained that this woman was a frequent visitor on his yacht Modesty.

No. 3, the "woman of the west side apartment" said to have been rented by Mr. Stillman in 1917, 1918, and 1919. The first name of this woman was said to be "Mabel" and the information concerning her, as well as concerning "No. 2," was described as specific.

The $6,000 Queen.

No. 4, the woman known as the "$6,000 girl." This woman is said by persons friendly to Mrs. Stillman to have obtained $6,000 from Mr. Stillman on the representation that she was in delicate health. Evidence of Mr. Stillman's acquaintance with this woman was described as "clinched."

No. 5, the woman heretofore referred to as "the woman of mystery." This woman is said to be a dancer and to have preceded Mrs. Leeds as an acquaintance of the banker.

Nos. 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10—these are described by a friend of Mrs. Stillman as of the "Broadway butterfly type" and to be singers, dancers, chorus girls, or in some way connected with the stage, either at the time Mr. Stillman is alleged to have known them or preceding that time.

Five "Definitely Known."

Definite information concerning Mr. Stillman's acquaintance with these young women was said to be in the possession of Mrs. Stillman's attorneys, but it was stated that it was not as specific in character as the information concerning the first five.

In addition to this information, Mrs. Stillman's attorneys were said to have located a series of letters believed to have been written by Mr. Stillman to one of them in intimate vein.

They will be introduced by the defense at the proper time as an offset to the letters alleged to have been written to Mrs. Stillman by Beauvais.

How Kelly Got Letter In.

It was learned today just how Referee Daniel J. Gleason came to admit one of the so-called Beauvais letters in evidence. Bernard Kelly, former superintendent of the Stillman estate at Pleasantville, N. Y., who identified all seven of the letters as being in the guide's handwriting, gave additional identification to the letter marked as "Exhibit B."

Kelly testified that Miss Mary L. Kelly, a maid in Mrs. Stillman's employ, found the letter in a desk drawer in Mrs. Stillman's room and, after opening the unsealed envelope and reading the letter, called Kelly, who also read it.

He testified that the letter submitted to him at the hearing on Thursday was the same letter he had read at the Stillman country home at Pleasantville. Miss Kelly, the maid, was said to have disappeared, despite the attempt of both sides to get her as a witness.

Says Note Was a "Plant."

It was learned that Mrs. Stillman would contend that the letter had been "planted" in the drawer of her writing desk. Friends of Mrs. Stillman intimated that they would show that she had discharged a servant and that this servant seemed well supplied with money at the time.

Another incident, which Mrs. Stillman's friends believe may lend strength to her assertion that the testimony of some of the French-Canadian witnesses was "framed" and purchased, was an alleged attempt to install a

POTOMAC SUNSET INSPIRES FIRST LADY OF THE LAND

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—The Marine band was playing this evening in the park along the Potomac. The sun, blazing red, was sinking into the river, tinging it opalescent. The parkway was lined with motors in which were hundreds of persons in Washington official and diplomatic life.

Among them were Mrs. Harding, wife of the President, and her secretary, Miss Laura Harlan. Impressed by the brilliant setting for the occasion, Mrs. Harding sent a message to Lieut. Santleman, leader of the band, asking him to play "The End of a Perfect Day."

As the band complied with the request, Mrs. Harding and her secretary alighted from the car and stood at attention. When the selection was finished, Mrs. Harding led in the applause which swelled into a din contributed by every auto horn in the vicinity.

Harris Iselin and Friend Drown Off Breton Coast

PARIS, May 7.—Harris Iselin, 22, son of Henry Iselin, American banker residing in Paris, was drowned yesterday off the coast of Brittany. A companion also lost his life. The drowning occurred while they were crossing from the Isle St. Michael to the mainland. The young men undressed as the tide rose and attempted to swim, but were unable to save themselves. Young Iselin served in the British army during the war.

MILK 4 CTS. TOO HIGH, CITY SAYS

Farmer Gets but 3 Cents, Consumer Pays 14.

A reduction of 4 cents a quart in the retail price of milk is possible without working any hardship upon either the farmers or the distributors, according to a report made yesterday by Russell J. Poole, secretary of the city council committee on the high cost of living, to Ald. Sheldon W. Govier, chairman of the committee. The report points out that under present conditions the farmer gets only about 3 cents a quart for milk which is delivered to the consumer at 14 cents a quart.

Uses Milkmen's Own Figures.

"According to the testimony of the distributors when we took up the situation with them last October," says the report, "they were paying the farmer $3.70 a hundred pounds for milk, and selling bottled milk for 16 cents per quart and 10 cents per pint. They said in order to reduce the price of milk 1 cent a quart it would be necessay for the wholesale price to drop 45 cents a hundred pounds.

"Taking their own figures and allowing them the same overhead—although most of the items, such as gasoline, tires, and feed, have been reduced—there should be a reduction of 4 cents a quart, now that the present price a hundred pounds is only $2.05. By their own figures the distributors should now be selling milk much cheaper than at present.

Assails Marketing Company.

The report then takes up the activities of the Milk Producers' Cooperative Marketing company. It declares practically all the farmers sell their milk through this company. Originally, the report says, the company took 1 per cent of the price obtained for its expenses. Now, it says, the charge to the farmers is 10 per cent of the amount realized from the sale of their milk.

Mr. Poole charges farmers have told him they have been threatened and coerced in many ways to join the company. He says after the company has taken off its 10 per cent and freight has been paid, the farmer receives only $1.47 a hundred pounds for his milk, or approximately 3 cents a quart.

"The farmer is dissatisfied with his 3 cents a quart," he says, "and the consumer at having to pay 14 cents a quart for the same milk, and the result is the farmer is losing interest and enthusiasm. Who can blame the farmer for getting a grouch?"

ALL MEN IN ARMY URGED TO WRITE TO MOTHER TODAY

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Tomorrow is Mothers' day, so designated by congressional resolution adopted in May, 1914, and Secretary of War Weeks wants every man in the United States army to write a letter to his home as an expression of reverence to the mothers of the country.

Secretary Weeks put his suggestion in the form of telegraphic instructions to all army headquarters in the following message:

"You are directed to bring to the attention of every officer and enlisted man in your command the desire of the secretary of war that each officer and enlisted man write a letter to his home on Mothers' day, May 8, as an expression of the love and reverence we owe to the mothers of our country.'

WIDOW SHOOTS MAN SHE ACCUSES OF ANNOYING HER

Edward Clancy was shot and perhaps fatally wounded last night by Mrs. Bert Hunter, 6044 Blackstone avenue.

Mrs. Hunter's husband was killed last January by Jack Linzy. Clancy, who lives at 2727 Cottage Grove aveue, was a witness for Linzy, and at the trial met the dead man's widow.

It is said he has been annoying her frequently. Last night he took his sister-in-law, Mrs. Nelly Clancy, with him to call on the widow. He told Mrs. Clancy he had left some phonograph records with Mrs. Hunter. Mrs. Hunter denied it and slammed the door in his face. Linzy kicked the door and threatened to break it in, police say.

He is at the county hospital, a bullet in his right lung. The women are held as witnesses.

VOICE HE LOST ON EARTH FOUND 12,500 FEET IN AIR

Washington, D. C., May 7.—H. A. Renz Jr., an overseas veteran of this city, who recovered his voice during an airplane flight here some weeks ago, made another flight today and again regained his voice, which failed him on April 25. When Renz reached Bolling field today he was unable to speak above a whisper, but after flying for half an hour at an altitude of 12,500 feet he could talk freely and without difficulty.

Public health service officials who arranged for the tests are not certain that the flights will effect a permanent cure, but plan to continue the experiments if necessary.

LEADERS OF BAR WARN OF CITY HALL BENCH RAID

Ballots Out for Lawyers' Referendum on Circuit Court Candidates.

The board of managers of the Chicago Bar association yesterday emphatically urged its membership to indorse and support the nonpartisan coalition judicial ticket as a unit.

Upon the recommendation of the committee on candidates, which consists of nine former presidents of the association, the board of managers, which includes the present officers and eleven other members, submitted to the full membership a referendum to determine the sentiment of the organization as a whole.

With the ballots in the mail went the report of the committee on candidates which was concurred in by the board of managers. This report follows:

"The public and the bar, at this time, face a situation unprecedented in this county. Twenty judges of the Circuit court are about to be chosen at one election. It is plain that if any one party or any one faction should be able to control, for ulterior purposes, the election of the entire Circuit bench, the result would be disastrous. Control over the judiciary is of itself a public menace, the baneful effect of which is not destroyed by the character of an individual judge.

"The situation at this time is especially ominious. The Circuit bench controls the number of employes in important county offices, and this power has always been regarded as a great political asset. But more important and far reaching than this is its power to appoint the members of the South Park board.

"The South Park district is about to embark on a vast construction enterprise; $20,000,000 in bonds have already been voted, and the consummation of the plan will demand further bond issues, the enormous sum of which will approximate $70,000,000. The expenditure of this vast sum will be in the hands of the board selected by the new Circuit bench.

City Hall Ignores Invitation to Conference.

"Viewing the situation as unprecedented, your committee sought to confer with the managers of all parties and factions, but at no time could we induce the dominant, or city hall, faction of the Republican party to participate in any conference. We learned that this faction planned to exclude from its ticket fifteen or more of the twenty sitting judges.

"From these facts we were forced to the conclusion that that organization, which had already acquired complete control of the sanitary district, with its great bonding and taxing power, had set out to control also the Circuit bench for its own purposes. Your committee looked upon this attempt as a direct assault upon the principles on which the Chicago Bar association is organized—namely: the maintenance of the purity and independence of the bench and the proper administration of justice.

"Having ascertained that the other factions of the Republican party would support a plan for a coalition ticket, your committee requested the Democratic managers to recommend to the Democratic county convention that it place in the Democratic column the names of all of the sitting judges who would accept the nomination, whether Republicans or Democrats.

Fourteen Sitting Judges on the Ticket.

"We were satisfied that all of the sitting judges who were likely to accept such nomination were satisfactory to a great majority of the bar; that the bar and the public well recognize that satisfactory service on the bench should be rewarded by re-election, and that the return of a great majority of the present sitting judges would more surely than any other means prevent the domination of the Circuit bench by a political faction for any improper purpose.

"Our efforts to that end have been effective. Fourteen of the sitting judges have been renominated by a coalition of the Democratic party and the factions of the Republican party opposed to the city hall. In our judgment, the ticket as a whole merits the support of the bar. If this ticket prevails the Circuit bench will not be the tool of any party or any faction; nor will it submit, in either South Park board or jury commission appointments, to the dictates of any ring, nor will it, in the discharge of its judicial duties, bend to the will of any official power.

"We believe that these considerations are more weighty at this moment than the retention in office of two or three judges, however satisfactory their services may have been, who, nevertheless, would be in a hopeless minority in voting for the selection of South Park commissioners and jury commissioners.

Urge a United Fight on Bench Raid.

"Regardless of questions of personal preference and party affiliation, we believe that all who appreciate the vital importance of free and independent judges should unite to resist this assault upon the judiciary. The plans of the powerful faction now striving, for its own purposes, to gain control of the bench cannot be defeated except by a unity of purpose and action.

"We believe that this assault cannot be defeated unless the coalition ticket be supported as a whole and the city hall ticket be defeated as a whole. We therefore recommend that the members of the association now record their judgment upon this matter and their choice between these two tickets by voting upon the ballot in the form submitted herewith."

The committee on candidates, which prepared the report after devoting several weeks to the judicial election problem, is made up of a group of nine ex-presidents of the Bar association, as follows: Amos C. Miller, chairman, Horace Kent Tenney, Frank J. Loesch, Thomas M. Hoyne, Edgar B. Tolman, John T. Richards, Silas H.

Strawn, Mitchell D. Follansbee, Charles S. Cutting.

The officers of the association are the following: John R. Montgomery, president; William T. Alden, first vice president; Roger Sherman, second vice president; William S. Miller, secretary; Walter H. Jacobs, treasurer; John M. Cameron, librarian.

The board of managers, which concurred in the report, are the above officers and the following: James M. Sheean, Francis X. Busch, Archibald Cattel, Elwood G. Godman, Martin J. Isaacs, George H. Peaks, Louis J. Behan, Edwin H. Cassels, Edmund S. Cummings, Kemper K. Knapp, William H. Sexton.

Two Questions on Ballot.

There are two questions on the official ballot. The first is to determine whether the association shall indorse as a unit one of the two tickets in the field—the coalition ticket or the Lundin-Thompson ticket. The second, which will be of no effect unless the first is answered by a decision that the organization should get behind one ticket, is which of the two tickets shall be indorsed.

CHIEF ORDERS INQUIRY INTO HAYES' KILLING

An investigation of the death of Frank Hayes, 22 years old, 4537 North Paulina street, who was shot and fatally wounded Friday night by Policeman Leo C. Hammersbach of the Town Hall station at Malden street and Montrose avenue, was ordered last night by Chief of Police Fitzmorris.

Hammersbach, who was not on duty at the time, made conflicting reports of the shooting. He first told Lieut. Sylvester Coter he had mistaken the boy for a burglar. Later he said he had seen the boy burglarize several homes.

It was learned yesterday that young Hayes, a graduate of Loyola university, a lieutenant in the army during the war, and a son of John J. Hayes, a member of the board of education under Mayor Carter H. Harrison Jr., left his home about 10 o'clock Friday evening for a walk.

Hammersbach, seeing him at 4222 Malden street, ordered him to halt. Young Hayes, evidently mistaking the policeman for a holdup man, ducked into an alleyway. Hammersbach, following him, shot when the young man continued running.

PHONE CENTRAL HARDER TO 'GET' THAN IS BERLIN

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—It is easier to get Berlin "on the wireless" than it is to get "central" aroused in New York at 12:30 o'clock this (Sunday) morning.

At midnight, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE bureau received a wireless message, relayed here by telegram from the Marconi station several hundred miles away. The message was from Berlin.

Half a dozen words were "lost" in wireless transmission, and as the message was an important one, efforts were turned to having the Marconi office here hasten a repetition of the message to "catch" the "lost" words.

It took the TRIBUNE correspondent seven minutes to get a telephone call through to the Marconi offices.

Fifteen minutes later the Marconi supervisor telephoned back a repeated and corrected copy of the wireless message.

Macon, Mo., May 7.—[Special.]—Ginger is a large dog belonging to Mrs. Safronia Hisel. When Ginger finds anything lying around loose he takes it home. The other day he spied a neat bundle lying on a porch not far from home. As there was no one about to claim ownership, Ginger took it home. Mrs. Hisel discovered the bundle was a baby, alive and kicking. Mrs. Hisel lost no time in finding the mother, who by that time had the whole town searching for the "kidnaped" child.

The ballot was accompanied by the warning that the association's investigation had revealed that the Thompson-Lundin organization "had set out to control the Circuit bench for its own purposes." Regardless of how the voter may answer the first question, he is urged to answer the second also. This is because a majority of all the members may ballot in favor of indorsing one ticket or the other as a whole.

'NOBODY OBJECTS TO TEACHING, SO GIRLS HATE IT'

Romance, Adventure Sought, Says Leader.

"Nobody objects to a girl going into the teaching profession; that's why she hates it," Miss Helen Bennett of the collegiate bureau of occupations told the central council of high school teachers yesterday at a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle.

"An interesting job" is what the girl college graduate is looking for. When mother tells her daughter that teaching is a "good, legitimate, respectable profession," daughter concludes every boost's a knock and turns away disdainfully. For daughter, like Magellan, Peary, Napoleon, and Jack Dempsey, desires a career of romance and adventure.

"It is up to us," Miss Bennett said, "to 'sell' the teaching profession to the young women of this city; to sell its romance, its adventure and its spirit of sacrifice."

"It's gone, all gone," interrupted a voice from an adjacent table—the voice of an ex-teacher, "Money is the only thing that can bring back the romanticism to teaching."

The paradox must have been true; the applause of the teachers was hearty.

Miss Margaret Sleezer of Nicholas Senn High school spoke in favor of legislation pending in Springfield for a $20,000,000 distributive fund for Illinois schools.

Amending of the Juul law as regards its application to the Chicago schools was urged by Miss Lillian Herstein of Crane High school. The law, admirable in its general interpretation, in its local enforcement, scales down the Chicago educational fund to $1.62 on each $100, she pointed out, against Blue Island's $4.80, Oak Park's $4.60, and Evanston's $4.05.

Miss Grace Abbott of Chicago and Miss Josephine Colby, field secretary for the American Federation of Teachers, also spoke.

He Wanted Souvenirs So He Took Hotel Towels

Harry Karp, Norfolk, Va., on his way to Iowa to study medicine, stopped at the Drake hotel. The manager stopped him as he was checking out, and found in his grip some of the hotel's Turkish towels and a bath mat.

Detectives Prendergast, Daley, and McLaughlin gave him a free room at Chicago avenue station, without towels or mat.

"I just took them for souveniers," he said; "wanted to show the boys in Iowa I stopped at the Drake."

Motorist Fights Gun Battle with Police; Escapes

Policemen Henry Zadek and Albert Leddin of the Brighton Park station saw a man driving an automobile at Archer and Ashland avenues. A chase of a mile followed, in which numerous shots were fired on both sides. The man wrecked the car at Ashland avenue and 23d street. He escaped.

LONDON, May 7.—The Japanese warship Katori with Crown Prince Hirohito aboard arrived at Spithead at 11 o'clock this morning accompanied by the Kashima.

British warships, in gala dress, assembled to meet the prince. As the Japanese ships drew near the British and Japanese exchanged salutes. When the last gun was fired the bands of the British vessels played the Japanese national anthem.

Later the commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, the commander in chief of Portsmouth, and the Japanese ambassador were received aboard the Katori by the prince.

There will be a spectacular naval reception Monday when the Japanese will enter Portsmouth harbor, where they will be welcomed by the Prince of Wales.

An official connected with the Japanese embassy here explained that a great official banquet which had been planned for the royal visitor at Lancaster house, has been cancelled on account of the coal strike at the prince's request.

RECORDS SHOW "MASTER BRAIN" OF EXPERT FEES

Faherty Letter Suggests Rates to Be Charged.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Who originated the idea by which Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch have collected within one year $1,004,586 as city building experts and have gotten into a position to make a claim for $1,781,477 additional?

Who was the "master brain" that worked out the rates?

The city administrative officials have been busy recently in an attempt to place the responsibility upon the aldermen. There has been an effort to shove the blame upon the city council.

The letter file of the board of local improvements and of the council finance committee throws some light upon the question. They show that in December, 1918, the committee asked the board for certain information which was given, but at the same time the rates to be paid the experts were suggested in the reply.

Faherty Signs the Reply.

That reply is signed by Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, and addressed to the finance committee. The first part of the letter says:

"In reply to your letter of recent date asking for the names of the real estate experts, building experts and attorneys and their qualifications for work in connection with the Ogden avenue widening, I respectfully submit herewith a list giving you the information desired."

That is attached to the letter which goes on in regard to the building experts:

"Relative to compensation for the work involved . . . the building experts will render detailed itemized estimates, cost of buildings without plans for 1¼ per cent of the value of the building, and plans, diagrams and details for 2 per cent of the value."

Woodhull Gets Confirmation.

That indicates where the rate started, but Ald. Woodhull obtained its confirmation at a recent meeting of the finance committee. He asked of Faherty:

"Didn't that rate and the general proposition emanate from you? I mean, did it come to this committee as a communication from you?"

"Yes, after a very thorough and long discussion," replied Faherty. "We have been discussing the question of rates since Merriam was a member of this committee, and since the year we started 12th street, and a year ago—I may be wrong about it, but I thought I made the best bargain for the city of Chicago that has been made in all its history."

To show that he was qualified to make "the bargain," Faherty told the committee:

"When I came in to take charge of this department I had had some experience along the line of condemnations.

Connected with Yerkes.

"I was connected with Yerkes in the building of the Northwestern railroad—in the condemnation of property, the removal of buildings, getting rid of tenants, paying tenants, and all that kind of thing. I was at it for five years before the elevated roads were finally completed, so this work was not exactly new to me."

He gave no information regarding the size of his income in those five years, as compared with that of Mesce and Lynch in one year.

The committee approved of the rates submitted, and the city council gave its indorsement. So far as the fees in question are concerned, the council action was on Feb. 5, 1920, and again in the passage of the budget later.

The committee soon ascertained it had made a mistake in recommending the rates and recommended that they be annulled. The city council rescinded its former action establishing the rates on June 28 and on Aug. 26 of last year. Under the law, the mayor has until the next regular meeting to express his opinion of the council action. Accordingly, the mayor submitted his veto Nov. 10 of last year to the council actions repealing the rates. Thereby they remained in effect.

WASHINGTON NEWS
—IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.

Considerable dissatisfaction has arisen among senators because President Harding has agreed to send American representatives to European council for war adjustments and because they have learned that the delay in consideration of the Knox peace resolution is in response to President Harding's own desire.

The senate agricultural committee today ratified the subcommittee report on the Kenyon-Kendrick packer control bill.

Investigation into charges by Senator Johnson against David H. Blair, nominee for commissioner of internal revenue, was begun by the finance committee today.

The American Forestry association telegraphed William Q. Sutliff, adjutant of the Illinois American Legion, that it will register every memorial tree planted in Illinois on its national honor roll.

Republican support in the senate for the emergency tariff bill is not unanimous, Senator Moses of New Hampshire announcing that he proposed to attack the measure next week.

Representative Fordney, chairman of the ways and means committee, declared the American valuation plan for assessing imports must be adopted in the permanent tariff bill.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday by tending strictly to business.

Secretary of War Weeks says he will apologize to all men who actually served during the war if their names, through error, creep into the published slacker lists.

SERVANTS ANGRY AT TINY TIPS AT KAISERIN'S DEATH

SCRAVENHAGE, May 7.—The ex-kaiser is trying to sell part of his estate house at Doorn, one of the most beautiful pieces of wooded land in the neighborhood, but with a public path running through. His plan has aroused much protest in the neighborhood and surrounding country.

Considerable discontent has reigned in servants' quarters of the staff house at Doorn since the ex-kaiserin's death. All the people connected with the elaborate arrangements at the funeral, including servants, were dissatisfied with the meager gratuities distributed at the time. The servants also struck, threatening to return to Germany if they did not receive wages, which were finally granted.

QUERY: WHO WILL SPONSOR 'BOOST OF TAX AND HOW?

City Hall "Up in Air" on Springfield Battle.

The committee appointed by Mayor Thompson to get an increase of corporate revenue from the legislature is not certain what line of advance it will make upon Springfield this week. Some of the aldermen were inclined to question the wisdom of the mayor's choice in naming Aldermen Richert, Lyle, Agnew, Olsen and Byrne for these reasons:

Only one out of the five, Richert, is expert in city finances. Four out of the five—Richert again the exception—voted Friday against a suspension of the rules to take a vote upon the question of permitting the voters at the June election to say whether the legislature should be asked for an increase in the corporate taxes.

Three Not on Finance Committee.

In addition three of the five—Olsen, Byrne and Agnew—are not even members of the council finance committee, and Lyle has become a member only recently. He has had the opportunity to attend only two meetings as a committeeman.

But the committee has been appointed and will meet Monday—perhaps with the finance committee—to outline its program at Springfield. Several pertinent matters will properly come before that meeting.

The committee will make the trip to the capital at the invitation of Chairman C. A. Young of the house revenue committee. In his invitation he said:

"It is the desire of this [his] committee that it may have proof that such a raise in the tax rate is necessary before it gives its approval to this bill."

Bill Means Tax Rate Boost.

"This bill" refers to one which would boost the tax rate from $1.433 to $2.15, and Richert reiterated yesterday that he will not attempt to justify a rate of $2.15. He added that he will not ask a rate above $1.90, and may go down to $1.80, that he will ask a rate somewhere between. But what "proof" will the committee want that that rate is necessary? What should the committee take to Springfield to convince the legislators?

Also the invitation requested the presence of "the city officers and the members of the city council." It was evident that the committee wanted some city administrative officials, as well as aldermen, but none has been selected. Will Mayor Thompson himself go? If not, who shall he send?

Wants Some One to Sponsor Bill.

The invitation was addressed to City Clerk Igoe, and another sentence reads: "Therefore, point out the duty of the city council to instruct its finance committee to appear and sponsor said bill, or by its act officially place some one as sponsor."

Probably no one will sponsor the bill for a $2.15 tax rate. But who among the aldermen will represent the administrative officials and sponsor any tax increase after Mayor Thompson in an official communication to the city council—which has been transmitted to the house and senate—has declined to recommend any tax rate increase or other boost in taxes?

In view of the attitude of the mayor, how will the council committee "report" as requested to the house revenue committee "what legislation may be deemed necessary in order that the proper amount of revenue for the city may be raised?"

It is expedient that the committee decide its attitude on all these questions before it goes to Springfield. And no doubt some legislator will want to know why the city council refused to permit the voters to express their opinion of a tax increase.

MORTENSON BARS USE OF CHILDREN AS TAX BOOSTERS

Denies O. K.'ing School Bill Propaganda.

Principals of all schools were cautioned yesterday, in a special bulletin sent out by Supt. Mortenson not to permit the circulation among pupils of pamphlets and cards which call upon parents to urge legislators to vote for the school fund bills advocated by the Thompson régime.

The story of the handing out of the literature to the pupils, which was told in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, brought forth a denial from Mr. Mortenson that the distribution had his sanction.

His instructions yesterday read:

"I wish to call your attention to the rule which provides that no circulars or printed matter be distributed in the schools without authorization of the superintendent. In some instances circulars of a damaging nature and character, and ill-advised as to content, have been distributed among pupils. The superintendent feels it is extremely important that the rule be adhered to at all times.

"The only time pamphlets or circulars are to be passed among the children in order to enlist their attention or services is when they come from this office, and I have issued no such order."

Civic Body Fights Bills.

Although conceding some increase in Chicago school revenues is needed, the legislative committee of the Civic federation went on record during the day as opposing the three school fund bills now before the legislature. It took the ground that, if the bills pass, the money spending authorities of the board of education will get millions more than is needed and will be enabled to set up a precedent of expenditure that never will be changed.

The statement of the Civic federation in part reads:

"Sensible citizens and legislators alike will go slow in responding to the 'false alarm' propaganda being spread through the medium of Chicago school children by school authorities in an effort to obtain support of pending tax-increase, rent-increase measures which give the Chicago schools not what is needed to continue them upon an adequate and efficient basis, but millions more.

Assail "False Alarm" Tales.

"School children are coming home with the story that there is to be a four months' vacation unless enough money is given to run the schools. They bring pamphlets containing loosely applied statistics, lists of members of the Illinois general assembly, and a suggested form of letter urging enactment of bills which are not fully described.

"There is no danger the schools will not receive all the revenues they can legitimately use. No legislature would take any chance of crippling the schools, and no taxpayer would ask any such parsimony."

Bills Are Defended.

Delegates of various women's civic organizations met with the High School Teachers' council and discussed the school fund bills. Miss Lillian Hernstein said the running expenses of the schools exceeded the receipts for education by $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 a year. Miss Elizabeth Colby, organizer for the American Federation of Teachers, declared unless the school funds are increased persons unfit and too young to teach will have to be employed, as efficient instructors will take up other work if expenses are curtailed by reducing salaries.

Athletic Events Mark Second Day of Boys' Week

Seven hundred and sixty-two boys took part in a big athletic tournament in Douglas park yesterday, staged by the Boys of Woodcraft in celebration of "Boys' Week." There were pole vaulters, runners, jumpers, relay racers, boxers. A delegation from the Rotary club was present. Medals will be given the winners at a reception to be held later.

100,000 POLE INSURGENTS IN SILESIAN COUP

Five Nations Are Involved in Struggle.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

OPPELN, Silesia, May 7.—The Poles are reported to be digging trenches along the Prussian border. The British have telegraphed to Cologne for artillery.

BULLETIN.

MAIDSTONE, England, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Prime Minister Lloyd George declared in a speech here today that if Germany disarmed in accordance with the Versailles treaty she was entitled to ask that the allies insist on the disarmament of Poland.

OPPELN, Upper Silesia, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—French officials here report that the Poles are evacuating the Rybnik area and are showing an inclination to withdraw from other sections of the industrial region. The only serious fighting is going on at Kieferstadtl, thirty-six miles southeast of Oppeln, where German einwohnerwehr are attacking the Poles.

German requests that the frontier between Germany and Silesia be opened and that all political prisoners held by the allies in Upper Silesia be released have been granted by the interallied commission here.

Need 40,000 Soldiers.

Allied officials, frankly expecting an outbreak, say they would be unable to cope with an insurgent German populace. Prince Hatsfeld, German delegate on the interallied commission, declared yesterday that every effort was being made to hold back the Germans, but that the danger was increasing hourly.

"We have asked the allies to increase their forces here," Prince Hatzfeld declared. "From 30,000 to 40,000 soldiers are needed, and needed badly, if the most serious situation is to be avoided. We fully realize what the consequences of a fight between the Germans and French soldiers would be, and we will spare no efforts to stave off an incident which might lead to war."

He added that, according to German information, there are at least 100,000 Poles under arms in upper Silesia. They are declared to be led by former Polish army officers, and well disciplined.

Expect Battle at Rosenberg.

KREUZBURG, Silesia, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.] — German einwohnerwehr officers have assumed control of the Kreuzburg district and 2,000 army rifles have been issued and guards thrown about the town to defend it against a threatened attack by Poles, who are camped in front of Rosenberg. The Polish army is estimated at 5,000, with several scores of machine guns.

The interallied officials are helpless, the French troops having been withdrawn two days ago for service at Rybnik. The entente's representatives are seven French civilians, a British major, and an Italian civilian. The townspeople are highly excited and are angry with the French for having withdrawn their troops at a critical time.

Germans on Defensive.

The German leaders have informed the interallied commission that they have no intention of attacking Rosenberg, but would confine themselves to defensive actions.

The entente representatives have appealed to the Poles. In advance they were told that sooner or later the Poles would occupy Kreuzburg, probably Sunday. At that time the allied officials were negotiating for an exchange of eighty German police, held by the Poles in Rosenberg, for 170 prisoners held by the Germans.

The Germans received a shipment of arms and ammunition from the reichswehr depot at Breslau today, sufficient to equip 4,000 men. The officers say, however, that probably not more than 3,000 will be immediately armed, the remainder of the guns being issued when the Poles attack.

Men and boys with rifles, shotguns, revolvers, knives, and axes hold every village between here and Oppeln.

POLES HAVE FIXED PLAN

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

OPPELN, Upper Silesia, May 7.—[By Wireless.]—Here in a nutshell is a picture of the league of nations' battle to restore order in Upper Silesia, where Polish insurgents are terrorizing the district. Many illustrations of international confusion are evident today. The Poles alone seem to have formed any definite plans or policies.

The insurgents are advancing and consolidating their gains everywhere, being outfitted with full military equipment brought from across the border. Field kitchens are smoking and sentries posted along the route, while ammunition trains are slowly following up the infantry.

Then follow civilian propagandists, who, operating throughout the towns of the affected district, are setting up civilian administration.

The Polish lines pass near or through Kosel, Gross Strehlitz, Guttentag, Rosenberg, and Kreuzberg.

Judge Tells Lawyers of Soviet Courts' Tyranny

Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Municipal court yesterday told the lawyers' association at its luncheon in the City Hall Square building of the operations of the soviet courts in Russia. "In the villages the judges are selected from among the poor peasants, most of whom are illiterate," he said. "These men have absolute power, without responsibility to anybody.

"Following the uprising in 1918, these courts took into custody every suspected man, every stranger who happened to be in the village where the court sat, and every enemy of the judges, and executed them the next day."

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE RULES TODAY

Today is Mothers' day. But the Woman's City club began its observance yesterday afternoon, when no member was admitted to its rooms unless she was accompanied by her daughter. The group, in which introductions were being exchanged, comprised (from left to right) Helen Hefferan, Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, Marigold Longworthy, and Mrs. B. F. Longworthy.

Gold Star Mothers will be honored guests today at the rooms of the Chicago Historical society, when the portraits of 1,500 Chicago heroes who died in France will be unveiled as a permanent war memorial. Miss Helen Schulze, Mrs. Paul Schulze, Mrs. Fred W. Bentley, Fred W. Bentley, and Eugene Summers, who are shown in the picture from left to right, were photographed yesterday at a preliminary inspection of the gallery.

FOUR MORE HELD FOR $800,000 BOND ROBBERY

The police today will turn over to federal officials four more men alleged to have been implicated in the recent $800,000 bond robbery at the Union depot. Nearly a score of men are now under arrest in connection with the case.

The men to be turned over are Nicholas Despenzie, 1028 Milton street, son of a prominent Italian banker who was killed by the Black Hand several years ago; John Fecarotta, 1341 West Grand avenue, a tailor, and his son, Joseph of 822 South Laflin street, and Ignacio Rizzio, 628 West Division street.

Attorney Henry M. Ashton, who was arrested when he tried to dispose of some of the bonds, told Detective Sergeants Carroll, Devito, Paldina, and Gasperik that he got the bonds from Despenzie. Despenzie's story led to the arrest of the others.

In Rizzio's home the police found more of the missing bonds. Rizzio's wife, with a baby in her arms, said she had bought them from a crippled man. Rizzio denied this, saying his wife was trying to save him. The bonds, he said, had come from Fecarotta, who was given a big package of them by four Irish boys.

Three of the "four Irish boys," believed to be the actual robbers, are being held. They are Tommy Shupe, John Rowe, 1215 West Madison street, and John Lafferty, 13 Ann street.

ALL U. S. KNEELS TODAY AT SHRINE OF MOTHERHOOD

Chicago Bows in Tribute at Special Rites.

Today America honors its mothers. Throughout the country Mothers' day is being observed, and millions of sons and daughters are paying tribute with letters, with gifts, in person.

In Chicago the day will be observed in practically all the churches and in many clubs and societies. Sermons will be preached on the subject of Mother by hundreds of ministers and public and private exercises will be held. Each year the observance of Mothers' day has increased and indications are that today will set a new record.

In addition to the services in the churches and the lodges, the Chicago Elks have provided a special program. It will be given in Powers' theater at 3 o'clock this afternoon, with Opie Read as the principal speaker. There will be appropriate music and Mrs. Lizzie Hudson Collier, now playing in "The Bat," will give a reading.

Wounded to Participate.

Yesterday the Woman's City club gave a Mothers' day program in its club rooms at 16 North Wabash avenue, all mothers with daughters being welcomed. The officers of the club, with their daughters, received.

The soldiers in the hospitals are not to be forgotten today. Working in coöperation with the Chicago Church federation, many churches have arranged to bring the wounded heroes into the city from the hospitals, so they may attend Mothers' day services and then have dinner with their own mother or someone else's mother.

Hero Shrine to Be Opened.

Three dedicatory services will be held—this morning, at noon, and this afternoon—in the rooms of the Chicago Historical society at 634 North Dearborn street, when a permanent memorial to the city's war heroes will be unveiled. It consists of the pictures of 1,500 men who died on the field of battle in France. The photographs have been mounted on swinging art frames behind glass, and from today always will be on exhibition.

Gold star mothers and fathers and other relatives will attend. Col. Abel Davis, Bishop Fallows, the Rev. Timothy Stone, former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, and others will speak.

DOORSTEP BABES FOR PASTOR AND JANITOR IN N. Y.

New York, May 7.—Mothers' day tomorrow has added significance in two homes here and for two mothers.

The Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, bachelor, pastor of the fashionable Church of the Ascension, is considering the future of a baby girl, about 2 weeks old, left at his door last Wednesday.

Over in Brooklyn, a janitor's family had a baby left on their doorstep Thursday. It is called the "good luck" baby, because the mother left a note saying she's a widow and, although ill, is trying hard to support six other children. "Keep the baby and you'll have good luck always," her note read.

The Rev. Grant tomorrow is going to preach on "Mothers' day." He admits he's now qualified to talk. "A nurse has been engaged to help take care of the youngster.

"When there's a baby in the house you have to watch it as a cat watches a mouse," commented the bachelor pastor.

BROTHERS FIGHT DEATH AS PLANE DIVES INTO LAKE

Strapped In, Sinking, Boat Saves Both.

Walter and Edward La Parle, brother aviators, narrowly escaped death in Lake Michigan off Waukegan harbor yesterday afternoon when their seaplane took a nose dive into the water. Strapped to the machine, the brothers were in danger of drowning. They were finally saved, however, by the crew of a fishing boat that happened to be within 300 yards of the place where the accident occurred.

WALTER LA PARLE.

The La Parle brothers were taking a new $9,000 seaplane from the Curtiss plant at Waukegan. They were flying low, only about 100 feet above the lake, and were about 1,000 feet off of the south pier of Waukegan harbor when the plane suddenly took its dive. The front end of the machine, in which the brothers were seated, sank, carrying them with it.

One Carried Under Water.

Walter, who was driving the machine, was carried entirley under water and was unable to loosen the straps which bound him to the machine. Edward was barely able to keep his head above the waves.

Fortunately for the brothers, a number of spectators had gathered on the pier to watch their flight, and the spectators called the attention of the crew of the fishing boat Yankee Boy, which was entering the harbor, to the plight of the aviators. The Yankee Boy was only 300 yards away from the spot where the La Parles were struggling in the water. Its captain, Louis Gamash, soon brought it alongside.

Save Captive Aviators.

A rope was thrown around the nose of the plane and the crew of the fishing boat, pulling upon it, lifted the front part of the aircraft out of the water. This done, Walter La Parle was soon released and resuscitated.

It was found Walter had broken his right leg. His face also was severely cut. He was removed to the Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan. His brother sustained only cuts about the face and was not obliged to go to the hospital.

The La Parle brothers are both aviators of experience. The plane they were driving was one of several with which it is proposed to establish seaplane service between the loop and the Edgewater Beach hotel.

KRYPTOKS—Two Pairs In One

The Kryptok does away with two pairs of glasses for those who need different lenses for near vision and for far.

And it does away with unsightly combinations of the two pairs in one.

It is a solid, seamless lens with the lower part for seeing things near by and the upper part for distance.

It gives clear vision for both, and no one guesses its double purpose.

Self Knowledge Most Important for Attainment

By Observer

Wednesday, May 4.—The greatest mistake in life is to pass all of one's time in studying the other man and his methods, according to Gordon J. Hargrave, prominent human analyst and vocational adviser, who spoke at noon today before the Character Analysis club in the West room of the Sherman hotel. While on the rostrum Mr. Hargrave spoke of the physical characteristics that mark various mental tendencies. It was after the lecture that he mentioned the futility of using character analysis purely in an objective way.

"To get the best results from character analysis it should be used first in a subjective manner," declared Mr. Hargrave to the writer.

Self Analysis

"The man who is dealing with other men should know himself through and through. He should determine what his own capabilities are before he attempts to measure those of other persons. Knowing himself will give him the best viewpoint in the world from which to study others.

GORDON J. HARGRAVE

"There are any number of individuals—executives, salesmen, and progressive persons in general—who give considerable time to studying the other man's methods and spend no time at all in studying and analyzing their own. They are in the position of the man who makes a business of crossing bridges before he comes to them.

Start with the Student.

"Character analysis, as I interpret and teach it, starts with the student. Every man who wants to get ahead will find it necessary to make a balance sheet of himself. The individual in that respect is like a business, and no man would think of operating a business without first learning its assets and liabilities. Therefore, no man should think of attempting to influence another without knowing exactly what forces he has at his command to aid him in attaining the desired end.

"Know Thyself."

"The ancient philosopher who said, 'Know Thyself,' was absolutely right. My advice to ambitious men of today is, 'Know Yourself before you attempt to know the Other Fellow.' Fully one-half of all the unpleasant occurrences in the business world today are due to the poor knowledge most men have of themselves. The man who does not know himself allows his negative traits to creep into transactions and upset everything.

Ignorance of Self Is Fault.

"Ignorance of themselves is one of the greatest faults most salesmen have. In the one point of extreme volubility, many salesmen cannot see that they are wasters of the other man's time. They may see the same fault in the man they are trying to sell, but if they cannot see it in themselves, nothing is gained."

The course of instruction outlined by Mr. Hargrave for the Character Analysis club can be applied in every line of business endeavor. The club includes in its membership men and women who are engaged in managing, selling, and routine work.

Three Weekly Meetings.

The club meets three times weekly: Wednesday at noon in the West room at the Sherman hotel, Wednesday evening between 8 and 9 o'clock in Garrick hall, Garrick theater building, and Saturday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock in Mr. Hargrave's office, suite 820, Stewart building.

A cordial invitation is extended to all persons interested in knowing more about themselves and the persons with whom they come into contact.

A special invitation is extended to you.

NO IRISH PEACE POSSIBLE UNTIL AFTER ELECTIONS

Ulster and South Erin Are Equally Firm.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, May 7.—There will be no formal peace in Ireland until after the elections of May 24.

Whether there will be peace after the elections depends on the good will of the Sinn Fein on one side and Ulster on the other.

It will be a matter of negotiations between these two parties, with England as an interested third party, willing to endorse any agreement arrived at short of separation from the empire.

This is the net result of the conversation in Dublin on Thursday between Sir James Craig, premier designate of Ulster, and Eamonn de Valera, "president of the Irish republic."

Find No Avenue to Peace.

Each man confined himself to finding the other's point of view, neither pledging himself to anything. Sir James' speeches on his return to Belfast were a disappointment to many, who had hoped to see immediate results, but they were quite satisfactory to the leaders in the south, who see a germ of peace in them.

The situation, as it now stands, is that each side feels itself strong and respects the strength of the other. The Sinn Fein feeling is much firmer than it was a few months ago and the leaders are confident that they can hold their followers and that they will not be conquered by military force, but they are willing to make bargains with equals in the cause of peace.

GREENWOOD HOPEFUL.

DUBLIN, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, speaking today of the recent conference of Sir James Craig and Eamonn De Valera, declared the meeting was the most hopeful sign for peace in Ireland in 750 years.

"It is not only the best thing that has happened in modern Irish history," Sir Hamar said, "but the most hopeful thing in 750 years.

Praises Craig's Courage.

"In connection with it I must praise the courage of Sir James, who consented to accompany strangers whom he knew to be enemies in a motor car from my lodge to the meeting place. He went alone and unattended."

The chief secretary declared himself extremely optimistic over the outlook for a settlement.

When asked if there was any possibility of an Irish settlement before the parliamentary elections Sir Hamar said:

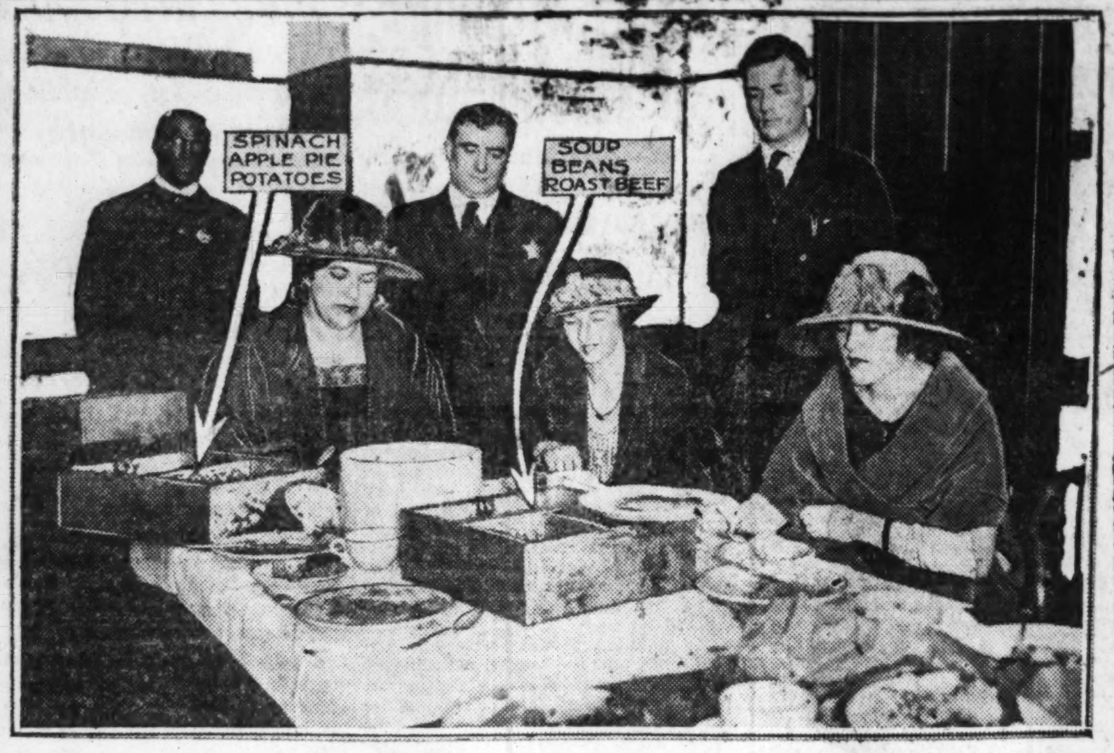
"The present British government has one virtue, its consistency, which will be followed first, last, and all the time.

Must be Home Rule Peace.

"There is no question as to the government going on with the elections. The Irish question must be settled through the home rule act. After the elections the atmosphere will be cleared, and we shall all be in a better position to discuss matters than now.

"The home rule act is no more a partition and plunder act, as it has been termed, than was the separation of West Virginia from Virginia, or North and South Carolina."

WHEN JUSTICE RINGS ITS DINNER BELL



"Chow" is the jurors' portion. The picture shows how that anomalous concoction will be served to women if they are called to serve on juries in the Criminal court building. Notice the antiquated containers still used for transporting the food from hotels to the courtrooms. Bailiffs say there has been no change in feeding jurors since the present building was first built. Slum hash or roast beef, whatever the cook sends, is carried in the aluminum containers. It is served to the jurors by the bailiffs. The picture was taken yesterday in Judge Joseph B. David's court, showing (from left to right) Bailiff J. C. Falcoman, Mrs. P. B. Wall, Bailiff James P. Kilgallen, Mrs. C. D. Pickett, Bailiff C. D. Pickett, and Miss Marion Coakley.

cies in toto," said Senator Harrison. "I am glad to see you opening your eyes and appreciating the conditions confronting this country, but it is worse than an insult for the administration to send there as this country's representative one who has insulted practically every one of those nations and who, because of the views he has expressed, is not in a position to properly represent the ideals of America."

New Defends Envoy Harvey.

"If it will afford any relief to the distress of the senator from Mississippi," Senator New of Indiana itnerrupted, "I should like to call his attention to a London dispatch in which Mr. Colby, the Wilson secretary of state, speaks in the most complimentary terms of the gentleman to whom the senator has just made reference. He refers to the new ambassador as an accomplished and educated gentleman."

"Could it not be said," asked Senator Stanley of Kentucky, Democrat, "that Lord Chesterfield and Aaron Burr alike were cultivated and accomplished? And if you would excuse treason, perfidy, and ingratitude, you might apply the term 'gentleman.'"

"I am glad to see that the new secretary of state is leading the Republican party back now so that we will gradually get into the league of nations," Senator Harrison persisted. "Of course it is going to arouse the ire of the distinguished senator from California, Mr. Johnson, and the distinguished senator from Idaho, Mr. Borah, and the list of irreconcilables, but the thing will finally come to pass all right."

PARIS IS HAPPY

PARIS, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Paris newspapers express much pleasure today over the return of the United States to the councils of the allies, news of the decision of the Washington government being prominently displayed.

The Journal Des Debats reviews the series of actions taken by the United States in connection with the peace settlement under the administration of President Harding and terms the return of the United States to participation "another proof of good sense and friendship toward the allies." The newspaper continues:

"Even if the United States' delegates attend only unofficially, their presence will be most useful. They can express opinions that can be taken into consideration, and they can inform their government at first hand. As we seek only justice, we can only be pleased at the reappearance in the allied councils of representatives of the country that made such great sacrifices for the triumph of right."

BUENOS AIRES, May 7.—Gen. Benavidez, former president of Peru, is President Leguia's latest addition to the political prisoners being held on San Lorenzo island. Gen. Benavidez had just returned from Europe, where he had been sent on a diplomatic mission by the government preceding Leguia's.

Deputy Prado, a member of the Peruvian congress, has also been arrested for political opposition to Leguia and sent to San Lorenzo.

REICHSTAG SPLIT OVER POLICY OF NEW MINISTRY

Majority Would Yield to Allied Demand.

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, May 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Ebert, the Vossische Zeitung says today, has asked Dr. Wilhelm Mayer, German ambassador to France, to form a new cabinet. Dr. Mayer asked that he be given time to consider the offer.

BERLIN, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The reichstag leaders admitted tonight that no progress had been made in the direction of solving the present crisis. This announcement was made after a day crowded with party conferences and discussions between the cabinet and the foreign relations committee over the ultimatum of the allies on the reparations terms. The German People's party and the Democrats alone of the present coalition block went on record as opposing any new cabinet which would accept the allies' ultimatum.

Treaty Signers Urge "No."

The Clericals and Majority Socialists were divided in their sentiments. Former Chancellor Hermann Mueller of the Majority Socialists, who, with Dr. Johannes Bell, former minister of transport, signed the Versailles treaty, was opposed to yielding to the entente. The deliberations today centered around financial indemnities, which were closely examined; the terms of the ultimatum and the Upper Silesian situation.

Industrials Balk.

The Federation of German Iron and Steel Manufacturers today adopted a resolution declaring that its members, "especially those in Rhenish Westphalia, would rather endure all the hardships and sacrifices threatened by the occupation of the Ruhr district than to accept conditions which not only are impossible of fulfillment but would sooner or later also result in occupation of the Ruhr district."

The resolution was intended as a denial of reports in circulation here that the members of the federation were not opposed to Germany signing the new ultimatum from the allies.

Belgium Calls Troops.

BRUSSELS, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The cabinet today approved the London reparations decisions and ordered the mobilization of one class.

M. Vandervelde, the Socialist minister of justice, voted against approving the decisions, while two other Socialist ministers abstained from voting. It is considered here that the crisis for the Socialist ministers has merely been postponed and will come to an issue if occupation of the Ruhr occurs. The ministerial crisis may be averted, however, if the Germans accept the allied demands.

Prenuptial Pact Goes Even if Wife Is "Stung"

Topeka, Kas., May 7.—[Special.]—Mrs. Sarah Burns had seven children by a former husband, and John T. Burns had four.

In a prenuptial agreement it was specified that if the husband died first the widow would receive one-fifth of the estate, but must treat his children as her own. If the wife died first the husband was to support her children.

When Burns died the widow found herself charged with the custody of eleven children, but entitled to only one-fifth of the estate. She attempted to break the will and the prenuptial agreement, but lost today in the Supreme court.

NO BUILDING STRIKE HERE

'GOT A MATCH?' UNCLE JOE ASKS ON 85TH BIRTHDAY

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[United Press.]—Uncle "Joe" Cannon, holder of all "marathon" records for congressional service, is 85 today. He is the oldest member of congress, both in years and point of service.

The veteran legislator celebrated his birthday by working with the house appropriations committee on the deficiency bill. Although the house was not in session, scores of friends called at his office to extend congratulations.

"Well, the calendar says I'm 85, but you will have to subtract a good many years if you want to know how I feel," he said, as he puffed on one of his famous black stogies. "I can still show some of these new members a few tricks."

One of his birthday presents was a box of the cigars.

"How many stogies have you smoked?" he was asked.

"Well, the figure probably would resemble some of these appropriations we have been passing recently," he replied as he pulled another one from his pocket.

"Got a match?"

Cut Rates or U. S. Will Take Roads, Capper Threat

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Unless the railroads of the country put traffic charges on a "live and let live" basis a return to government operation, if not ownership, is inevitable, Senator Capper of Kansas, asserted today in the senate.

"When railroads get more for hauling farm products than the producers are paid for producing them it is evident that freight rates are relatively too high," he said. "And that is chiefly what is the matter with the railway situation at the present time.

"Six months ago there was a shortage of half a million cars. At the close of April this year 500,000 cars were idle. Need there be a more convincing argument that lower rates must precede a business recovery?"

A LOVE NEST

The swan has the right idea—the "build your own home" hunch. Strikes and lockouts tie up construction work in Chicago. Thousands of worried humans dash hither and yon in search of apartments. Other thousands cool their heels in court rooms as they fight the landlord for their dwelling places. But a couple of sensible swans join forces, pool their labor, and behold, they have their love nest, all ready for the advent of perhaps half a dozen sooty-gray ducklings, which in a year will be great, beautiful, graceful swans.

The photographer happened by the Lincoln park duck pond just as this nest was nearing completion. Apparently Mamma Swan has had a hard day of it, for she was resting on the nest. Daddy Swan was still busy plucking twigs from the water to complete the nest.

It seems the daddy is the hod carrier in this family arrangement. He twists his neck all over the scenery, plucking twigs, which he tosses at the feet of his mate. She tangles them together, bit by bit, until she has a nest sometimes two feet high and as much as six feet in diameter.

In the center she leaves a hollow for her egges. Sometimes there are as many as nine of these eggs. Mr. Parker, whose job it is to guard the swans, says these eggs are worth $4 each nowadays. With the eggs so costly, park attendants have drawn a no-admittance line around the swans' quarters.

The incubating period is five or six weeks. The new swans are ridiculous little things, sooty-gray, and their first feathers are a sooty-brown. It takes about a year for them to blossom out in their white feathers, and during that year they acquire the grace and dignity which distinguishes the swan as the aristocrat of the duck family.

NICKY ARNSTEIN APPEALS.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—A motion for a new trial of Jules W. ("Nicky") Arnstein and others convicted here last Wednesday of conspiracy to bring stolen securities into the District of Columbia was filed today in the District Supreme court. Argument will be heard probably late this month.

APOLOGIES FOR MEN WRONGLY ON SLACKER LISTS

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Secretary Weeks said today that the war department would apologize to men who served in the military service whose names appeared on the lists of draft deserters now being published in some newspapers. A particularly flagrant case of injustice to a man carried as a draft deserter, who had served during the war as an officer of the navy, brought this statement from the secretary of war. The case was that of Stanley Harrison French of 81 Holland road, Brooklyn, N. Y. His name was contained on a war department list of draft dodgers which was sent to the navy department, but that department failed to identify him as Lieut. Commander Stanley Harrison French of the naval reserve corps.

The revision of the draft dodger lists by draft boards, the navy department and the war department has resulted in the elimination of thousands of names. The revision now in progress has brought the total number of names down to approximately 155,000.

No arrests of men for desertion whose names appeared on the slacker lists published in newspapers this week have been reported to the war department.

Judge Orders Bill Filed in Woman's $100,000 Suit

Judge Joseph Fitch yesterday ordered that a bill of particulars be filed before next Saturday in the $100,000 slander suit of Mrs. Erma Dean Conklin, 4826 Prairie avenue, against Louis H. Brink of Oak Park, head of a poultry commission house. Brink is the uncle of Mrs. Conklin's former husband, Walter Lindlar, from whom she was divorced nine years ago.

The bill of complaint states that in 1909 Brink made love to Mrs. Conklin, and when she scorned him, "spread gossip about her."

Brink declares the suit was provoked by his telling Mrs. Conklin to stay away from his office.

ECONOMY FIRST, BANKERS' VIEW OF TAX PROBLEM

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 7.—[Special.]—The board of governors of the Investment Bankers' Association of America adopted today a statement on the question of tax revision.

The first step and the most important one in tax revision is reduction of expenditure, it said. It added approval of "a federal budget sufficient in detail to disclose the actual purpose of expenditure and the benefits therefrom.

"Any system of taxation," it asserted, "should be designed to produce revenue and avoid, as far as possible, any arbitrary control of the flow of capital or the conduct and organization of business.

"That it should be the purpose of tax revision to remove existing impediments to the flow of capital rather than to continue to affect or control the distribution of capital and the normal economic course of business."

Coroner Says Country Folk Still Blow Out Gas Here

"Country people still blow out the gas." Coroner Hoffman ventured this comment yesterday when gazing over a report which showed 131 deaths from asphyxiation during the five months from Dec. 1 last to April 30. The suicides numbered 64. In the preceding five months there were 125 accidental gas deaths and 52 suicides.

The coroner suggested laws prohibiting the use of gas for illumination purposes in hotels and rooming houses.

BRITISH LABOR ACTS TO ASSIST MINE STRIKERS

Forbid Union Transport of Foreign Coal.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, May 7.—The coal situation took a more serious turn today, when the transport workers' federation and the railwaymen's union issued a joint manifesto calling upon all members to refuse to handle foreign coal, large quantities of which are due next week.

Glasgow harbor is at a standstill. The dock laborers struck last night because of the employment of nonunion men to discharge Welsh coal for the Caledonian railway. A number of coal bearing ships have been lying at the docks for the last fortnight. The docks are guarded by military and police and while no serious trouble has arisen yet the atmosphere is electric.

Coal Barges Choke Thames.

Glasgow conditions are reproduced on the Thames, where thousands of tons of coal have already been held up. Unlimited supplies are expected from America and the continent, which the authorities are determined to unload.

Isolated cases of trouble between the strikers and the owners are occurring throughout England. Reports of interference with safetymen come from Rhondda Valley and Stirlingshire and coal destined for a hospital in Nottingham was stopped by strikers, the motor lorry carrying it being smashed and the driver beaten.

Leader Forbids Violence.

Herbert Smith, the miners' president, speaking at Sheffield today, said:

"Let there be no riots. It is better to give up immediately than to attempt violence. The employers and the government have done everything to induce you to riot. Resist as long as you can.

"The miners are not prepared to accept reduction below the cost of living, but if the mine owners and the government forward a better scheme than the national pool, consider it."

The owners definitely refused to consider a national pool in an official statement, on the ground that it would bring disaster to the industry. They say that state pooling would involve a national organization and control and that the experience of the last few years has demonstrated that demoralizing results would follow.

Government Is Firm.

Lord Birkenhead, lord chancellor, indicated in a speech last night the present spirit of the cabinet when he said before the Primrose league:

"Shall a trade union be permitted to override the declared will of parliament? This government will not take orders from the miners.

"Any British government which accepted and carried out the miners' orders would shamefully surrender everything for which our soldiers died to win the war. It was a challenge unequaled in any civilized country."

He described the situation as being the most serious menace the country has confronted since the forces of industrialism were organized.

Further drastic reductions in the operation of trains, the tubes, and public services will occur Monday.

THIEVES IN AUTO KILL GIRL AND FLEE PURSUERS

Two Children Slain by Cars in Day.

Angelina Dangelo, 10 years old, 1743 Marquette road, and Rose Rosenbaum, 7, of 1134 Lytle street, were killed by motor cars yesterday.

Angelina was run down by a motor truck at Archer and Ashland avenues. While the police were arresting John Jacobson, the driver, the girl died on the way to the hospital.

Girl Killed by Stolen Car.

The Rosenbaum girl was killed by an automobile in Racine avenue near Roosevelt road. The machine, which contained two men, did not stop. Spectators jumped into other automobiles, and a long chase followed, the men finally abandoning their car at Maxwell and Peoria streets.

Joseph Kablec of 4629 West Nineteenth avenue, Cicero, reported his car had been stolen. The number corresponded with that on the vampire machine.

The story of how one brother gave his life to save another was told yesterday at the inquest over Herbert Phelan, a Yellow Cab chauffeur. Harry Phelan, also a chauffeur for the same concern, told the story.

Wrecks Own Car, Killed.

The accident occurred at Lake Shore drive and Schiller street Thursday morning. Herbert was driving east, Harry south. A heavy limousine suddenly appeared and it looked as if Herbert would have to hit either it or his brother's cab. Instead he drove his cab into a safety island and was crushed to death.

M'DONOUGH'S PAL, A BOY, MAY HAVE SEEN HIM SLAIN

Efforts of the Englewood police to clear up the murder of James McDonough centered yesterday in a search for a 15 year old boy, whose name was withheld. He is said to have been an eyewitness to the slaying. McDonough's body was found in a passageway between two south side buildings Thursday morning. He was at work delivering milk when he was slain.

"This boy used to ride with McDonough on the milk wagon every morning," Lieut. McCauley said. "We learn he rode with McDonough on the morning of the killing, then disappeared. We believe he saw the killing and is hiding from fright."

The police fear the boy may have been seized by the slayers.

MISS M'CORMICK FIRST WOMAN TO GUARANTEEOPERA

Turns In Five Pledges and Will Form Committee.

Miss Muriel McCormick, daughter of Harold F. McCormick, yesterday became the first woman guarantor of Chicago grand opera. Miss McCormick not only signed for herself from her own resources, but she also signed for four other members of her family circle.

A campaign to secure 500 guarantors was launched last Wednesday at a luncheon tendered Mary Garden at the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Will Form Women's Committee.

Backing her five subscriptions with $1,000 for each one, Miss McCormick has undertaken to form a committee of women to assist the men's committee in signing guarantors. Special delivery letters went out yesterday inviting fifty women to lunch with her Tuesday afternoon at her Lake Shore drive residence. Miss Garden will be at the luncheon.

"I am doing this," Miss McCormick said, "because I hope to see the day that the presentations of the Chicago Opera company will be appreciated by Chicagoans, and I believe that will only be when opera is popularized by support that fills every seat every night.

"My observation of opera in Europe is that it is generally badly sung and badly given, as compared with opera in Chicago, but the people get from their opera inspiration and education, despite these defects."

Women's Club Pledges Support.

Mrs. Leona Krag, president of the Illinois Women's Athletic club, also called at headquarters in the Auditorium theater and left a pledge for her club.

"This guarantee from our club, which is not wealthy, is an appreciation of what opera does for the people of Chicago, and is a compliment to the great accomplishments by one of our sex—Mary Garden."

The men's committee workers and the forty-six guarantors to date will be the guests of Miss Garden tomorrow noon at the Union League club.

Twenty Hurt When N. Y. Trolley Car Jumps Track

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Twenty persons were injured, one seriously, when an open trolley car jumped the rails tonight in the Bronx and crashed into a pillar of the elevated extension of the east side subway.

Hundreds of women and children from nearby tenements, believing that relatives were among the victims, fought with one another to get inside the car, and it was not until the police reserves had thrown a cordon around the wrecked car after fifteen minutes of strenuous efforts that the work of rescue was effected.

Following in Father's Footsteps

Miss Muriel McCormick yesterday was the first woman to sign the Chicago Opera company's new roll of 500 guarantors. Her father, Harold F. McCormick, was for years the company's principal financial supporter. Besides subscribing $1,000 each in behalf of herself and four other members of her family, Miss McCormick volunteered to form a committee of women to assist in obtaining the number of pledges sought.

ZION ELECTION SERENADE LEADS TO FINES FOR 3

Waukegan, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Paul Larose, son-in-law of Mayor W. H. Clendinen of Zion; Ted Neave, and David Anderson, all Voliva followers, today were fined $10 in Justice Walter Taylor's court here for having "serenaded" the Rev. Thomas H. Nelson, pastor of Grace Missionary church at Zion, one night after the city election.

They were declared to be the ringleaders of a crowd of 300 who surrounded Nelson's house armed with tin pans, drums and sticks and made a demonstration. When Nelson returned from a visit to the home of a neighbor his hat was caved in and his collar torn off, while Lester E. Swank, editor of The Independent, received a black eye and a battered nose.

The Zionites charged that Pastor Nelson tried to kick a hole in a drum, previously used only for religious purposes, and that they were on their way to serenade an alderman from Nelson's ward. They were unable to explain why they were found on Nelson's porch.

BOSTON HONORS BRONZE STATUE OF FRANKLIN

Boston, Mass., May 7.—Nearly 200 years ago a thoughtful boy printer named Benjamin Franklin ran away from Boston to Philadelphia. Today a bronze statue of Franklin was acclaimed by thousands in the city of his birth as it was driven in a parade over the streets the philosopher knew as a youth.

At exercises on the common a letter from President Harding was read in which he said:

"Even among the talented sons of Massachusetts, Franklin will always rank in the foremost group, and in honoring his memory you are honoring yourselves and the nation to which he so greatly contributed."

The statue will be taken overland to Waterbury, Conn., where it is to be permanently located.

RAILWAY CHIEFS DENY EMPLOYES' CLAIM OF WASTE

Answer Charges in Final Plea to Labor Board.

Presidents of seven western railways through a statement submitted to the United States railroad labor board yesterday categorically denied charges of mismanagement which labor union representatives have made from time to time during the wage dispute hearings.

The statement, while undertaking to repudiate these charges, contended they would have no proper bearing on the proposal to reduce wages even if substantiated. It was signed by S. M. Felton of the Chicago Great Western, Charles H. Markham of the Illinois Central, Hale Holden of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; H. E. Byram of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; W. H. Finley of the Chicago and Northwestern; J. E. Gorman of the Chicago Rock Island and Pacific, and W. T. Storey of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé.

Matter Desn't Concern Board.

"For some weeks," the rail executives' reply read, "W. Jett Lauck, an employé of the labor unions, has been presenting to the railroad board and giving to the press statements charging that large amounts of money are being wasted in the financial and operating management of the railroads.

"The statements have no relationship to any question before the board, or which it has authority to determine. The board itself has expressly stated that the interstate commerce commission is the only federal body having authority over the general management of the railroads, and that the board has authority only to fix reasonable wages and working conditions."

After referring to the charges as "bald propaganda intended to discredit private management and promote the Plumb plan," the railway chiefs' statement considered various allegations.

Holds Capital Isn't Excessive.

It denied that "the capitalization of railways as a whole is excessive," and maintained that, even if it were, "this would have no effect on passenger and freight rates, since the transportation act and the interstate commerce commission, in carrying it out, have specifically based the rates upon a valuation made by the commission itself."

The charge that railways and the concerns from which they buy fuel, material, and equipment are under the same financial management and that excessive prices are paid was called "absurdly untrue."

"Even if they were under the same control," the statement read, "this would not prove that the railways pay excessive prices, and indisputable facts regarding almost innumerable transactions of the purchasing departments of the railways could be presented to show that they do not pay, and have not paid, higher prices than other purchasers of the same things."

Improvements Depend on Income.

The railroads had a small portion of their locomotives repaired in outside shops last year, because their own shops were overtaxed, but they did not pay excessive prices for the work, according to the executives.

Capital for improvements can be obtained only when the roads show a net operating income, and to do this they seek wage reductions, it was pointed out.

As to waste accruing from loss and damage, it was contended by the rail presidents that in 1917, the last year before government control, this totaled $35,000,000, but increased to $106,804,000 in 1919, after two years of federal control. This was an increase of 205 per cent.

In conclusion, the statement maintained that when union officials charge that from $2,500,000,000 to $3,500,000,000 a year could be saved by better management and still oppose reducing the pay roll, "the inconsistencies and baselessness of their propaganda become apparent."

Demands Are Called Socialistic.

Railway employés, in fighting a reduction in pay and in asking the United States railroad labor board for a basic standard minimum wage, are advancing "an untried theory of state socialism," John G. Walber, secretary of the bureau of information of the eastern railways, told the board yesterday. Mr. Walber made the final rebuttal statement for the roads.

"The railroads," he said, "are not only desirous but eager and willing to pay to their employés just and reasonable wages in return for just and reasonable performance; in other words, a fair day's pay for a fair day's work."

CHASE NATIONAL BANK MAY TAKE METROPOLITAN

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—Announcement of the Chase National bank that for every share of Metropolitan Bank of Manhattan which it can purchase it will give one share of Chase National bank stock, one share of Chase Security company stock, and $10 in cash, has disclosed that the Chase National bank, through its security subsidiary, now owns 22,000 out of the 25,000 shares of the Metropolitan Bank of Manhattan.

At a reorganization in which it is expected the capital of the Chase bank will be increased, to take place during the year, the Metropolitan Bank of Manhattan, its six branches and its subsidiary, the Hamilton Trust company of Brooklyn, will be taken directly into the organization of the Chase National bank, giving it seven active branches in New York and one in Brooklyn.

The total resources of the combined institutions will be in the neighborhood of $600,000,000.

PLIGHT OF RAIL COMPANIES UP TO THE SENATE

Committee Will Start a Probe of Problems.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—With President Harding endeavoring through existing agencies to improve the condition of the railroads as the first important step in restoring commercial and industrial normalcy, Senator Cummins will inaugurate next Tuesday an investigation by the senate committee on interstate commerce into the cause and remedy of the present plight of the transportation systems. The President believes that freight rates must be lowered in order to revive business. A start in this direction has been made by the 28 cents per ton reduction in the rates on coal for great lakes transshipment. The conference to be held next week by the interstate commerce commission, railway executives, and shippers of building materials on the reduction of rates on such commodities is in line with the President's idea that business revival would be promoted by lowering the transportation cost of articles used in industry.

Executives First Witnesses.

Whether the Cummins-Esch transportation act is a success and whether the existing governmental agencies are equal to the task of solving the present railroad problem are matters upon which the senate committee's investigation is expected to shed much light. The first witnesses heard by the committee will be the railway executives.

Senator Cummins expressed himself strongly today to the effect that the railways would be able to readjust their finances, through higher efficiency in management and reduction in cost of material and labor, to a point where earnings would again cover expenditure, charges, and a reasonable profit. He ascribed present conditions to an industrial readjustment which had as yet proceeded unevenly, not yet affecting costs of production or operation as it had affected earnings. Recognizing the awkward period which with some of the railways might intervene before they had readjusted working costs to a point where net earnings would cover maturing charges on their debt, he expressed the belief that the creditors of such railways would be lenient in not enforcing their claims pending the period of readjustment.

Face Sudden Drop in Business.

"The railroads," Senator Cummins said, "are in no different situation from the other industries of the country. Like many other producing industries, they are confronted with a sudden and violent shrinkage of business which helps to make the selling price of what is produced lower than the cost of production. They will have to solve the problem in the same way the other producers are trying to solve it by the bringing of the cost of materials and the cost of labor into line with the proceeds of what they have to sell."

Senator Cummins was asked if it was possible for the railways to do this on a sufficiently drastic scale to cover both working expenses and charges on the debt. He replied that he had no doubt of it.

"To assume the contrary," he said, "would be to assume that a national transportation system cannot be self-supporting in this country. If that were so, there would be nothing to do but for the government to take it over and pay he annual deficit, however heavy, out of the treasury. The country must have its transportation system.

Materials Come Down.

"But there is no reason to imagine anything of the kind. There will be a large saving in cost of materials. Coal will be lower this year, ties are lower, steel and iron material is lower except rails, and rails will also have to come down. The question of the wage scale is in the hands of the labor board. I do not anticipate its decision or attempt to influence it, but even if basic pay is not changed economies aggregating hundreds of millions will result from the elimination of arbitrary overtime and duplicated service. I believe that $200,000,000 will be saved by those economies alone. Last year the actual railway gross revenues were the largest in the country's history, without allowing for any government guarantee. But the wage costs, which formerly were 40 per cent of gross revenue had got up to 70 per cent."

HATH MUSIC CHARMS TO SOOTHE CRIMINAL'S SAVAGE BREAST?

CHICAGO POLICE DEPARTMENT.

It may be. But for the time being scientific data are lacking because no census was taken at the central detail police station after the initial rehearsal of Chicago's new police band. The instruments were delivered on Friday. Tutored by Bandmaster Albert Cook, the musicians will practice every Tuesday and Friday morning until their first public appearance on Aug. 10, when they march to the railroad station to meet the New York firemen's baseball team.

Of all the forty-six lusty and artistic tooters who will entertain the public on such occasions as Chief Fitzmorris may select none are more artistic and lusty than these. If you don't think it takes wind to play one of the instruments in the picture you may receive convincing information to the contrary by interviewing any of the photographer's subjects.

COMMANDERS TO BE NAMED SOON FOR U. S. FLEETS

Washington, D. C., May 7.—Changes in the commanders in chief of the Atlantic and Pacific divisions of the United States fleet are to be announced shortly by the navy department. Both Admiral Henry B. Wilson, commanding in the Atlantic, and Admiral Hugh Rodman in the Pacific, have about completed their tours of duty with the fleets and are slated for shore service.

No decision as to successors to the two officers as fleet commanders has been reached, it was said today at the navy department, but Secretary Denby has the names of eligible officers under consideration and is expected to make a decision within a few days.

It was reported at the navy department that Admiral Wilson would become superintendent of the naval academy at Annapolis, but this was not confirmed. Admiral Rodman also was said to be slated for duty on the east coast, probably in the navy department.

Dreadnaught Florida to Join U. S. Asiatic Fleet

Washington, D. C., May 7.—A dreadnaught will be assigned to the American Asiatic fleet for the first time. It was learned today that the Florida will be sent to the far eastern station some time this summer, replacing the armored cruiser Huron as flagship of Admiral Strauss.

Hamlin Park Boys' Day Draws Crowd of 5,000

Hamlin park celebrated "Boys' day" yesterday with a field meet under the auspices of the Chicago Boys' league. More than 450 boys and men competed in track events, baseball, playground ball, tennis, and horseshoe games. About 5,000 parents and boys are estimated to have attended the athletic events.

MISERABLE PAY FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES BARED

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—The house committee on labor today heard testimony to the effect that the government pays 50,000 of its employés no more than $50, $60, $70, and $83 a month; that large numbers of the government positions at such rates are vacant for lack of qualified applicants willing to accept those rates; that the highturnover in the government service, due to low wages, is an expense to the government amounting to millions of dollars; and that both men and women employés at these low rates are obliged to work at night in other jobs in order to eke out a living. Of the 50,000 men and women in this lowest paid group, about 18,000 are in the District of Columbia, and 32,000 in the field.

This testimony was given at a hearing on the Nolan minimum wage bill for federal employés. The bill provides a minimum wage of $3 a day, $90 a month, or $1,080 a year for all adult full time employés, and a wage of 37½ cents an hour for part time workers, such as charwomen. The house has twice passed the bill, but the senate has not.

EXPLOSIVES BRING MISFORTUNE AND GOOD FORTUNE

Take Sergeant's Hand; Put Gold in Other.

Quebec, May 7.—[Special.]—Sergt. Maj. James Robert Bowen owes his ill luck and his good luck to explosives. Some used by Germans nearly blew off one of his hands; some used by himself, he declared today, uncovered gold at Kazubazua, about forty miles north of Ottawa in the Laurentian hills. After letting some of his army pals in on the ground floor, he is back here to "tell the world."

When His Luck Turned.

His rank in the old 224th battalion was the same as that of a "first sergeant" in the American army. Bowen, who has traded his khaki for the latest fashions, says his luck turned when he won $75 on a bet. His story from that point onward is as good as that of the "gentlemen adventurers trading into Hudson's bay."

At Kazubazua, he said, he found Indians who had worshipped in a rocky gully until some white men thought there was gold there. While that idea persisted, the Indians found the place unfit for a self-respecting Indian god, so they moved.

White Men Out of Luck.

Then the white men left and the Indians went back. The only nearby white men were Joynt Jr. and Joynt Sr., and that's all the Indians knew about them. Bowen went to the gully and said he wanted to blast a stump. He blasted, he says, and found traces of gold.

Bowen offers provincial assays that some of this district has "panned" $92 to the ton, with other samples down to $36 a ton gold, with varying amounts of silver.

The Rise of Joynt Jr.

Joynt Jr. is his partner now and several of his army friends are in the company, which is capitalized at $100,000, and, he says, there is no scheme to sell stock.

That, of course, has not prevented a rush of quick wealth seekers to the nearby land, which, by this time is said to be well staked out. Some of these persons are said to have done well and others, as usual, have not.

WOMAN RESCUED FROM GAS.

Mrs. Cora Mitchell, 30, a widow and clairvoyant, was found in bed with two gas jets turned on at 1250 North Clark street yesterday. At Passavant hospital she is expected to recover. Her door was double locked and the window was shut.

23 REALTY FIRMS LEFT WITH 212 VACANT FLATS

Inquiry Shows High Rent Is Hitting Agents.

Twenty-three real estate agents have 212 vacant apartments on their hands as the result of high rents. This was revealed yesterday in figures being compiled by the renting division of the Chicago Real Estate board.

A letter asking each firm how many vacant apartments it has was sent to the 125 members of the renting division Thursday. At noon yesterday twenty-three had relied.

The tenants' strike against profiteering landlords has poured 475 eviction suits into the Municipal court for trial tomorrow before Judges Swanson, Wells, Ehler, and Adams. Most of the defendants are expected to demand jury trials, after which the cases will be sent back to the office of the chief justice for reassignment.

157 Cases up Yesterday.

The first batch of writs of forcible detainer filed last Monday came up for action yesterday, when 157 cases were called. Forty-five defendants demanded jury trials. The others were settled by agreement or disposed of by the judges.

Demands for jury trials made before Judge Wells were ordered returnable by him before him. He is the first judge to take this action. Several months are expected to elapse before many of the cases will be tried.

Nearly 2,000 cases were filed last week in the office of James A. Kearns, clerk of the Municipal court.

Must Have Water, Robertson Says.

Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday threatened to bring manslaughter proceedings against landlords who have turned off water and heat in apartments occupied by rent strikers. From seven to ten such complaints were received each day last week.

"The health of the entire community is jeopardized," Commissioner Robertson said. "In many cases tenants are compelled to carry water to the fourth floor. There is no water for cleaning or bathing or to flush toilets. Some buildings in which water has been turned off are in a deplorable condition. An epidemic of typhoid fever is imminent."

BEG YOUR PARDON

Through a shifting of cuts THE TRIBUNE of May 7 printed the picture of Edward Gardner, air mail pilot who died as the result of injuries received in the wreck of his plane, as that of Jacob Gould Schurman, newly selected United States minister to China.

In a story of May 5, THE TRIBUNE stated Raymond Boesen was found asphyxiated in the bathroom of his home, 3420 North Paulina street, by his mother, and stated that Boesen had been despondent. Victor Boesen, 2519 McLean avenue, his brother, says a gas jet was turned on unknown to the deceased, causing death, and that he had no cause to be despondent.

An item in THE TRIBUNE of May 6 said Michael O'Sullivan, an ex-soldier, 5420 Aberdeen street, killed himself by jumping from a window of his home while despondent. The coroner's verdict held that death was accidental. The victim was not an ex-soldier.

U. S. Rubber Company Cuts Prices on Tires

New York, May 7. — The United States Rubber company today announced a reduction in the prices of automobile tires and tubes, ranging from 11½ per cent to 20 per cent. The changes are effective immediately, as follows:

Royal cord, 11½ per cent from schedule of last November; all chain and knobby tread tires, 17½ per cent; Usco fabric tires, 15 per cent; red and gray tubes, 20 per cent.

Oakland Cuts Prices.

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—[Special.]—Following recent reductions by several other manufacturers, the Oakland Motor company announced today a $250 cut on all models.

One-Handed Robber Raids Store, Spreads Terror

A one-handed bandit took $80 from the cash register in Michael Sadac's ice-cream parlor at 9600 Houston avenue yesterday after chasing the patrons and the proprietor into a rear room.

"HIGHER UPS" IN BUSINESS NAMED IN BUILDING QUIZ

30 Face Graft Bills When Grand Jury Acts.

Evidence upon which indictments may be voted against thirty persons was uncovered yesterday by the Dailey legislative committee in preparation for what promises to be the "big smash" in the building investigation this week.

The special grand jury which will seek to punish the guilty ones behind Chicago's building graft oligarchy will be completed tomorrow before Chief Justice McDonald and Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman announced he will lay the evidence before it as rapidly as it is turned over to him by Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the committee.

That a number of the "bigger fry" in the building conspiracy will be caught in the indictment net, as well as the smaller grafting labor agents, was predicted by Representative John P. Devine at the close of yesterday's session.

Pleased Over Results.

"I feel better over the results obtained today that at any time during the inquiry," he said. "When we started out on this investigation I have no doubt but the men back of the building conspiracy laughed at us. In fact, there was considerable doubt in my mind as to whether we would be able to punish more than a few small business agents.

"But today's session has convinced me otherwise. I know now that if some of the big fellows, men high up in Chicago's building world, are not punished it will not be the fault of the committee but of the prosecution."

"There is still some doubt in the committee's mind as to whether warrants should be issued at once for those known to be guilty," said Chairman Dailey. "Some of us think it would be better just to let the grand jury proceedings take their course. There is the possibility, however, that some men may skip town. What course we shall pursue will be decided upon by Monday."

Two Witnesses Bare Graft.

Details of the operations of a "graft ring" involving twenty five persons were revealed by two important witnesses during the day. This evidence came after Isaac Waixel, head of the Garden City Wrecking company and a member of the Wrecking Contractors' association, is said to have made unwilling but startling admissions hitting five business agents.

Three women witnesses were summoned to corroborate much of the evidence of "wrecking graft." Two of them were said to be stenographers or secretaries employed by the association and the business agents. The third was a telephone operator. One of them testified at length, but the other two were stubborn or gave such contradictory replies that Chairman Dailey announced both had laid themselves open to prosecution for perjury.

Women to Be Called Back.

"We are going to call these two women again on Monday," he said, "and give them a chance to talk. If they still maintain the same attitude it is possible perjury charges will be made against them as well as against a number of other witnesses we have had before us. Beginning next Friday we are going to hold open sessions and give a number of witnesses a chance to tell out in the open what they have held back at the executive sessions.

"One witness appeared before us this morning and demanded his constitutional right of having his attorney present. When we explained that under the law any witness who voluntarily appears before the committee and testifies cannot be punished for his admissions, the attorney was perfectly willing to permit his client to talk. Few persons seem to understand that any one is given immunity who appears voluntarily and tells what he knows."

Big Sums to Business Agents.

Waixel's testimony disclosed an ingenious form of graft whereby business agents obtained 20 per cent of the salvage of all wrecked buildings. This fund was known among the contractors as a "war tax," but when it reached the labor agents it became a "sick benefit fund." Waixel is said to have testified that the money was left in a desk drawer, and the business agents merely "took it" whenever they wanted it.

An owner of a forty-four apartment building admitted paying $100 graft, but became hazy about names when questioned by Representative Devine. He was sent out into an ante-chamber to refresh his memory, and reluctantly named two labor agents when he returned. He also will be called again tomorrow.

PACKERS TREND TO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—The senate agricultural committee today ratified the report of the subcommittee favorable to the Kenyon-Kendrick packer bill.

In its amended form the bill vests the authority to supervise the packing industry in the secretary of agriculture. As it was originally proposed, the bill created a federal live stock commission to regulate the packers. This change was made in accordance with the wish of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the packers themselves.

The bill probably will be reported to the senate Monday. Its backers expect to call it up within the next few weeks.

The house agricultural committee, having concluded its hearings on the packer bills, today took up the task of revising the measures. They referred all the bills to a subcommittee, which probably will report next week. Indications are that the house committee will follow the footsteps of the senate committee in charging the agricultural department with the administration of the act.

Army Lieutenant Uses Airplane as Ambulance

Lieut. Langhorne Motley, said to be the first officer to use a United States army airplane as an ambulance, returned yesterday from Fort Sheridan to Rantoul. He became ill at Rantoul and it was necessary that he come immediately to Fort Sheridan for an X-ray examination. An airplane was used to bring him to the hospital.

LANDIS, SHOWING MERCY TO YOUTH, SLAPS AT DIAL

For stealing a jeweled bag from a parcel post package entrusted to him for delivery, Herbert R. Shultheis, 15 years old, 151 South Albany avenue, was sentenced to thirty days in the Woodstock jail yesterday by Judge Landis.

The boy had pleaded guilty. The judge displayed leniency because Herbert already had spent fifty-six days in jail waiting for trial.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Landis took an indirect slap at southern cotton mill owners. He asked why the postal officials had hired Shultheis when he was only 15, knowing the law specifies employés shall be at least 18.

"Well, the boy said he was 18," an inspector replied.

"Huh, don't you know that the cotton mill owners in the south hire girls 12 years old after they make affidavits they are 22?" the judge asked.

Senator Dial of South Carolina, who censured Judge Landis for recent leniency to a young bank clerk, is a cotton mill owner.

CROWD IN LOOP JOINS IN "STOP, THIEF!" CHASE

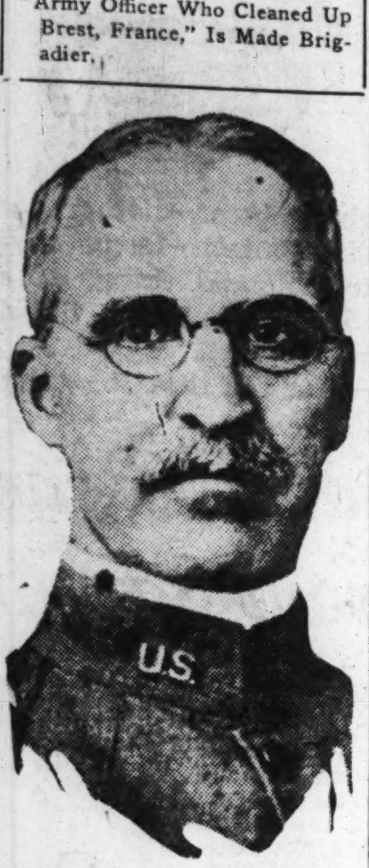
Hundreds of loop pedestrians witnessed a chase of several blocks and capture of Edward Turner, colored, 3100 Evans avenue, an alleged pickpocket, at State and Madison streets at noon yesterday. The pursuit began in the corridor of the First Trust and Savings bank, where Turner tried to pick the pocket of a woman patron of the bank, according to the detectives.

The chase was participated in by several hundred loop pedestrians who were attracted by the cries of the detectives to "stop that thief."

Turner denied that he had been in the bank.

PROMOTED

"Army Officer Who Cleaned Up Brest, France," Is Made Brigadier.



BRIG. GEN. ELI A. HELMICK.

EMPLOYERS ALSO USED SLUGGERS, UNION ASSERTS

Closing arguments for the defense in the upholsterers' union conspiracy trial before Judge Thomas Taylor were heard yesterday.

Attorney James R. Quinn charged it was a quarrel between the union and the employers' association and that the evidence had shown sluggers had been employed by both sides.

Clarence S. Darrow, attorney for the defense, will present his argument to the jury tomorrow.

HELMICK, FORT SHERIDAN CHIEF, NOW BRIGADIER

It's Brig. Gen. Eli A. Helmick now at Fort Sheridan. When news came from Washington yesterday confirming the promotion of Col. Helmick there was rejoicing at the headquarters of the 6th army corps.

Brig. Gen. Helmick is known throughout the army and in France as "the officer who cleaned up Brest," following a series of attacks upon conditions in that French debarkation port.

As chief of staff of the 6th army corps he is the senior officer at Fort Sheridan. Maj. Gen. George Bell, commanding officer of Camp Grant and in command of the corps during the absence of Gen. Leonard Wood in the far east, is his only superior in the middle west.

Veteran of Border and Two Wars.

Gen. Helmick was appointed to West Point from Kansas, was graduated in 1888, and was assigned to the infantry. He served in the west and northwest until the Spanish-American war, when he took part in the Santiago campaign as quartermaster, 10th infantry, and brigade engineer in the Philippines in reconstruction work.

Then followed two years in Alaska and a course of study at the service schools, Leavenworth, and the Army War college, Washington. He was in the inspector general's department and on the Mexican border until the world war. The first year of the war he spent in the inspector general's department as colonel and brigadier general, then was promoted to major general on Aug. 8, 1918, and assigned to command the 8th division. He went to France on Nov. 1, 1918, with part of the division, but was assigned to the command of Base Section No. 5, Brest, as a conference of officers decided his genius was needed there. He continued there until the last division of the American troops returned to the United States.

Passed on Warriors.

"In looking back over my service I consider the best of it was in the inspector general's department, which began in Chicago, alongside the Union League club," mused the general last night. "And I would include the 8th division and service at Brest."

In the first year of the war he inspected more than twenty training camps and more than half a million men, reporting on the capacity of higher commanders and the training and efficiency of the commands.

"My happiest days were those with the 8th division," continued Gen. Helmick. "It was a splendid organization, fit to fight when ordered to France, but too late to take part in the war. The fine division staff, its regiment of engineers, and one regiment of infantry—the 8th regulars—all of which were at Brest with me, were largely responsible for the successful construction and operation of the great port of embarkation, through which more than a million of our returning troops passed on their voyage home."

EX-OFFICIAL INDICTED.

Boston, Mass., May 7.—Thomas J. O'Daly, former city cashier, who was arrested on the eve of his promotion to the office of city treasurer, was indicted today on charges of larceny and forgery.

CHATEAU FLATS ON NORTH SIDE SOLD; $1,000,000

The Chateau apartments, including 1,150 feet of frontage on Sheridan road, Broadway and Clarendon avenue, have been sold by Albert Fuchs to the Chateau Realty company for a reported consideration of $1,000,000. The sale does not include the theater property on Broadway.

The sum of $150,000 earnest money has been placed in escrow with the Chicago Title and Trust company by the purchasers, together with warranty deeds. In the event the deal fails to go through by June 15 the realty company will forfeit the earnest money, it is declared.

William Mulholland was the broker effecting the sale, while the financing for the purchasers is being handled by David Lewis, vice president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank.

Thinks He Ought to Carry Gun to Protect His Money

"If the police and courts believed the same way you do about this matter of carrying concealed weapons the wildest wild west town would be tame compared to Chicago." Judge Howard Hayes in Stockyards court voiced this opinion yesterday when Walter Byron, 21, 4526 South Wabash avenue, was arraigned after being arrested with a revolver. Byron said he had collected a large sum of money Friday and did not believe he was violating the law by carrying a revolver for protection against holdups. The judge continued the case to May 13.

SHOOTS HUSBAND IN BACK; ONCE FLOGGED A RIVAL

New Orleans, La., May 7.—Frederick R. Levee of Los Angeles was shot in the back and killed on the street here today by his wife, who was seeking a divorce, according to the police. The shooting was witnessed by hundreds of persons and followed a brief talk from which Levee had turned away. Mrs. Levee gave herself up and refused to make any statement.

Mrs. Levee, police say, recently was in Baton Rouge, where she fruitlessly attempted to have Gov. Parker sign extradition papers so her husband could be returned to California.

Horsewhipped a Rival.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—The marital troubles of Frederick R. Levee, Los Angeles attorney and clubman, and his wife, Mrs. Matilda Levee, who shot and killed him in New Orleans today, have been recounted in the newspapers here at various times in the last two years.

Publicity was first given their affairs when Mrs. Levee publicly horsewhipped a woman in one of the leading Los Angeles hotels. A few months ago Mrs. Levee was freed from a charge of insanity after a hearing before the lunacy commission, and admonished to "cease her violent tactics and leave her husband alone."

At that time, she announced, she was a member of a wealthy family of Chicago.

SEIZE FIFTY-FIVE AS GAMBLERS.

Detectives headed by Lieut. William Schoemaker yesterday raided the pool room of Oliver Leonard, 1844 West Madison street, and arrested fifty-five men on gambling charges. It required four patrol wagons to transport them to the detective bureau.

FATE OF BEER TO BE DECIDED BY HOUSE BODY

Doctors Disagree on Its Value as Medicine.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The ghost of John Barleycorn will bob up in congress again next week at house judiciary committee hearings on Chairman Volstead's bill to keep him completely dead.

Every now and then the corpse stirs and creates excitement. This time enemies of the departed plan to deliver a final whack. Considering the dry composition of the house, members predict that the new Volstead measure, designed to prohibit sale of beer to the sick, will be put through.

A flood of petitions has reached Mr. Volstead for and against any added restrictions. Doctors, including the general practitioner, who still sticks to the old top buggy as a means of reaching the sick, seem to be divided, about fifty-fifty, according to the letters on the question of medical beer.

Divided on Question.

Some have written that it is not needed to help the ailing; others have protested that it was not right to keep the sick man from having a little beer with his meals, for his stomach's sake.

So the committee agreed to hear them all, beginning Thursday, and then, Mr. Volstead predicted, put through the bill designed to put medical beer in a place all its own in the Barleycorn family grave yard.

Aside from Mr. Volstead's tightening up measure, three of four others affecting prohibition are pending. The bill which would permit American ships to sell liquor beyond the three mile limit will be considered by the merchant marine committee, but the Volstead committee will pass upon the Hill bill to repeal the prohibition enforcement act, and also the Wood bill transferring actual enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice.

To Decide Jurisdiction.

There is wide difference of opinion on the question of putting the enforcement army under the attorney general, many prohibition leaders believing that there should be no change. The sale of liquor on ships, coastwise vessels excepted, is being urged on the ground that the American passenger fleet must be put on equal footing with foreign liners if congress hopes to develop its merchant marine.

Chairman Volstead refused to hazard a guess as to how long the beer hearings might run.

BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunates.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

MRS. LAURA DAINTY PELHAM.

What can you grow on an eighth of an acre? One thousand Chicago families were able to live on the vegetables they harvested from their eighth of an acre farms last year, and they paid an average of only $2 rent for each farm for the year. Some paid $1.50 and others $2.50.

They were able to do this because the Chicago City Gardens association, of which Mrs. Laura Dainty Pelham is president, provided the garden plots and supervised the tilling and planting of the "city farms" at a cost of $6 a year. The deficit on each plot was made up by members of the association, who subscribe a certain sum each year. The land is loaned by individuals and corporations and the expense of surveying and preparing it is borne by the association.

The association invites new members and applications may be sent to Mrs. Pelham at Hull House, 800 South Halsted street.

dictaphone in Mrs. Stillman's room in the Pleasantville home.

The story is that Mrs. Stillman returned suddenly one afternoon and found an electrician stringing a wire in her writing room, which adjoined her bedroom. She questioned the workman, it is said, and the latter finally admitted that he had been engaged to install a dictaphone.

This incident was said to have happened soon after Fred Beauvais came to Pleasantville from Canada to work on the Stillman estate.

Doctor's Story Worthless.

Mrs. Stillman's friends were greatly encouraged today at hearing that Referee Gleason had ruled that the testimony of Dr. Russell, the Buffalo osteopath, concerning Mrs. Stillmans alleged confession and the so-called Beauvais letters were not competent so far as the issue of the legitimacy of Guy Stillman was concerned.

Mrs. Stillman's friends said that in view of testimony which she will offer to show that she and Mr. Stillman were living together both at the Stillman city home and their country estate there was little chance of Mr. Stillman sustaining his charge of illegitimacy.

It was admitted by these friends that the divorce action might end in a deadlock and that the referee might decide, and the court approve, that with similar allegation of misconduct on both sides neither plaintiff nor defendant was entitled to a divorce decree.

BLACK HAND BOMB AT DETROIT.

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—Explosion of a bomb in Highland Park early this morning injured five persons and shook buildings for 100 yards from the spot. ADOPTED SON OF D. B. SWEET ASKS WILL SET ASIDE

Alleging his adopted father was in his dotage when he made a will leaving the greater part of his estate to his wife, Lawrence Sweet filed suit in the Circuit court yesterday asking that the will be set aside.

Dexter B. Sweet, formerly prominent in Chicago business affairs, drew up his will in 1915, leaving property valued at $5,000 to Mrs. Clementine Sweet, his wife, and only $100 to the adopted son. On Jan. 10, 1920, Dexter B. Sweet died in a sanitarium at Kalamazoo. Though the files of the Probate court here show the value of the estate to be only $5,000, Attorney Guy Guernsey, representing Lawrence Sweet, declares Dexter B. Sweet was worth $60,000.

Lawrence Sweet was sued for divorce in 1916 by Mrs. Lucile A. Kahlo Sweet, who charged he left her immediately after their marriage.

A whole Baby Lobster—hot or cold, with chili sauce or melted butter—for 65 cents is only one of the many splendid things to eat which is making the North American the most popular restaurant in Chicago.

Tonight—after the theatre—why not try it?

Important: Read What Our Patrons Say About Us—

Greatest Dining Place in Chicago

"You have the greatest dining place in Chicago, or, for that matter, in the entire country. In any hotel or restaurant serving food as good as yours, the dinner my wife and I ate would have cost not less than $3.00—here it cost only $1.60. Hereafter we are regular patrons of yours."

My Palate Tells Me You Use No Substitutes

"I have never been in your kitchens but I know from the taste of the food that you cook nothing but the best, and I am convinced that no substitutes of any kind are used in your establishment." That's what the Steward of one of Chicago's best Country Clubs said after dining here.

You Sell Food for Too Little

"You sell your food for too little money—how do you do it?" Hotel and restaurant men tell us this continually.

Your Advertisements Are Right—No Better Food Anywhere

"I have dined in the leading hotels and restaurants all over the country, and I am convinced that your advertisements are not exaggerated. I don't know any place where food as good as yours can be had for anywhere near the prices you charge."

Your Whole Lobster for 65 Cents Is Great

"I love lobster, but I cannot afford to pay $1.25 or more for one. The Baby Lobster you serve for 65 cents can't be beaten anywhere."

Your Big Portions Reduce Costs

"The extremely large portions you serve makes it possible to get a lunch or dinner at a very low price. I always come to the North American with a companion and we split the portions."

I Was Skeptical; I Tried It; Now I Know

"When I first read your advertising I was skeptical. I didn't believe it was possible for any restaurant to serve good food at the prices you advertised. I finally tried it and now I know. How you can do it is quite beyond me, but I do know your food can't be beaten anywhere at any price."

You Beat California

"We thought we knew something about restaurants in California, but the North American is far ahead of any restaurant we have there."

Your Food Gives Me an Appetite

"I have come into the North American Restaurant without an appetite but the sight of your good food always gives me one. And then you satisfy it. Your food tastes the way I like it to taste."

Breakfast Made a Big Hit With Me

"I don't think I ever had a better breakfast than one at the North American: A big waffle, real maple syrup, bacon and a pot of coffee—two cups—and its cost was 35 cents! Most places would charge that for the bacon."

Your Asparagus the Best in Chicago

"The Asparagus Salad you serve for 35 cents is an 'eye opener.' I am very fond of asparagus and I don't know any place where I can get better asparagus than yours. I might also mention that other places charge not less than twice as much."

I Have Compared Your Food and Prices and Know

"I have followed the suggestions in your advertising. I have compared your prices, food portions and food qualities with those of other good hotels and restaurants, and none that I know of can compare."

BLAIR-JOHNSON PRIMARY FIGHT BEFORE SENATE

Evidence in North Carolina Case Is Heard.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Investigation of Senator Hiram Johnson's charges against David H. Blair of North Carolina, recently nominated by President Harding to be internal revenue commissioner, was begun today by the senate finance committee behind closed doors.

The witnesses today were Senator Johnson, Mr. Blair himself, John Morehead, Republican "boss" of North Carolina, and officials of the income tax section of the internal revenue bureau.

Senator Johnson declared that Blair, a delegate to the Republican national convention at Chicago last June, ignored the North Carolina primary law. He also told the committee that the amount of mail he was receiving from North Carolina since he made charges against Blair indicates that the efforts of Mr. Blair's family to escape payment of income taxes were "a statewide scandal."

Denies He Broke Law.

Mr. Blair denied the charge that he broke the North Carolina primary law. He insisted that he never heard the results of the primary election in North Carolina while he was attending the Chicago convention. He admitted, however, that the North Carolina delegation went to the convention prepared to vote without regard for the outcome of the primary.

Mr. Morehead testified that the North Carolina delegation held a meeting at Chicago during the convention week to discuss the primary results. He contended that the action of the North Carolina delegates was not a violation of the primary law.

Income Tax Case Unsettled.

Treasury officials informed the committee that J. W. Cannon, Mr. Blair's father-in-law, had filed a claim with the income tax section for a refund of $350,000 on income taxes. This claim, they stated, would be denied. The incoming commissioner, they contended, would not pass on the case. They admitted, however, that the case was still in controversy before the bureau and that the new commissioner technically might have power to decide it.

The hearing will be resumed Thursday, when it is probable Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will be heard.

FOUR ILLINOISANS IN RACE FOR PRINCETON SENIOR COUNCIL

Princeton, N. J., May 7.—Two Chicagoans are included in the four Illinois men among the dozen juniors at Princeton university who have been nominated for membership in the Senior Council, the student self-governing body. Russell Forgan of Chicago, president of the Triangle club, and one of the best undergraduate actors; Donald Lourie of Peru, Ill., All-American quarter back and British broad jump champion; William B. McIlvaine of Chicago, baseball and soccer player, and Adlai Stevenson of Bloomington, one of the editors of the college daily, will compete in the annual election at which time five of the dozen nominated will be selected. Membership in the Senior Council is the highest nonathletic honor on the campus.

Gompers Exonerated on Nonunion Hotel Charge

Cincinnati, O., May 7.—[United Press.]—Samuel Gompers, who was charged recently by a Detroit labor union with having stopped at a nonunion hotel in Buffalo with his bride on their honeymoon trip, was officially exonerated today by the local joint executive board of Hotel and Restaurant Employés' International Alliance and Bartenders' League of America at Buffalo.

GRAIN EXCHANGE BILLS LIKELY TO LOSE IN SENATE

Farmers' Group in Final Effort This Week.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Illinois farmers will make their final drive the coming week to put through the senate the Lantz bills intended to eliminate the Chicago Board of Trade. Indications are multiplying that the effort of the organized group of grain producers is to fail and that the Lantz bills will not command the necessary twenty-six votes for senate passage.

Seven downstate senators already have served definite notice upon Senator Lantz and the Illinois Agricultural association, which is the chief support of the anti-board of trade measures, that they will not vote for them in their present form.

This group has taken the position that this is no time for Illinois to pass a state law that wrecks the marketing machinery, not only of Illinois but of the nation, and that the proper method of establishing necessary restrictions upon the exchanges is through federal legislation, applicatory to all of the states.

Vote Sure to Be Close.

The utmost pressure is to be exerted upon each of these seven, however, it is now known, through the county farm bureaus in each of their districts, and the indications are that it is to be a hair line finish when the test comes either Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning.

Technically, the Lantz bills stand on second reading in the senate and are ready to be called in that order Tuesday morning. If they are advanced to third reading, as they probably will be, the final roll call can be had either Wednesday or Thursday. It seems to be the general impression that once the bills get through the senate they will be passed by the house. Some of the ablest lobbying done for the bills in the senate has been accomplished by house members.

There is a possibility that the Lantz bills boosters, if they find they are up against a stone wall, will be willing to compromise and delay a final test until the week after next.

No May Adjournment.

There is now no chance that the legislature can adjourn sine die during May. The omnibus appropriations bill will not be reported to the house within the next two weeks, according to a statement yesterday by Chairman Smejkal. Only the first draft of the budget requests and estimates has been finished, and Tuesday the house committee begins all over again. There is not the slightest chance, therefore, that the assembly can "pass the appropriation bills and adjourn," as has been suggested in some quarters.

The condition in senate and house calendars requires a roll call on practically all pending third reading bills, most of which are of minor importance, the legislature thereby marking time while the appropriation bills are being whipped into shape.

The public utilities bill, introduced by the state administration Tuesday, now gives more trouble to the senate and house organizations than anything else. Discovery that the bill creates for Attorney General Brundage one of the niftiest political machines that ever operated in the state probably has killed the bill as it stands, and the leaders will have to begin all over again, according to present indications.

The forecast is that there will be nothing doing through the coming week as to public utilities or the mayor's 5 cent fare bill, which hasn't moved an inch within the legislature. The revenue bills in the house that fix the rates of the different taxing bodies may be moved slightly Tuesday and Wednesday in the house.

Missing 17 Year Old Girl Found in Rooming House

Following the arrest of William J. Murphy, 21 years old, 119 North Halsted street, last night, the Warren avenue police yesterday found Mildred Payton, 17 years old, who disappeared from her home at 3120 West Congress street last Tuesday night, in a rooming house at 228 South Wood street. Murphy is said to have told the police where they could find the Payton girl.

YOUNG BIDDING PLAN

SALE OPENS

8 A. M., WEDNESDAY, MAY 11

Continues four days

No Reservations! Every Picture Sold, However Little It Brings

What is the Young Bidding Plan?

A CATALOG stating the fair value price of each picture is issued. You select such pictures as you like. You can bid 5%, 10%, 15% or any multiple of 5% of catalog price on any picture.

This picture is sold to you at your bid, until a higher bidder comes, who must bid at least 5% higher.

His bid is then entered in the sale book above yours. You are notified that your bid is raised, and we give you name and address of bidder who raised you. You can raise the bid again if you so desire.

During Wednesday and Thursday the eighty-five pictures are offered to all bidders from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., but will not be sold unless full catalog price is bid on those days.

These eighty-five pictures are hung

Friday, May 13th

10 a. m.—Pictures having 95% of catalog price bid are sold
11 a. m.—Pictures having 90% of catalog price bid are sold
12 m. —Pictures having 85% of catalog price bid are sold
1 p. m.—Pictures having 80% of catalog price bid are sold
2 p. m.—Pictures having 75% of catalog price bid are sold
3 p. m.—Pictures having 70% of catalog price bid are sold
4 p. m.—Pictures having 65% of catalog price bid are sold
5 p. m.—Pictures having 60% of catalog price bid are sold
6 p. m.—Pictures having 55% of catalog price bid are sold

Saturday, May 14th

A similar 5% hourly reduction is made until all pictures are sold, even if they have only a 5% bid.

You find the pictures you like. You buy at your own offer.

Early Bidders Have the Advantage

They can place the low bids, which may not be raised.

After a picture has received a bid, no one can come near the closing hour, bid that hour's price and take the picture away from the former high bidder, who then has option to take the picture, at that hour's price. We thus protect early bidders.

Keep your bids high and you will not lose your favorite picture.

What Are These Eighty-five Pictures Like?

The collection includes works to please various tastes.

J. Francis Murphy, at his death, a short time ago, was America's foremost landscape painter. His "October" will draw bids from prominent collectors.

J. E. Bundy's "In the Edge of the Woods" will delight his host of admirers.

H. M. Kitchell's "Campfire" and his "Early Autumn" fill your eye with beautiful color.

William Wendt's "Peaceful Valley" leads you afield with him on a lovely day.

Charles Partridge Adams takes you to Estes Park in his "Autumn Storm, Mount Taylor."

O. E. Berninghaus shows you Taos Indians and their ponies.

Marian Blakelock echoes to us the mysteries of moonlight.

William Schmedtgen lures us to the haunt of wild duck or black bass.

Those who admire the very artistic in pictures will find much to like in Felix Russmann's still life, "Brass Pan," or his landscape, "Day Is Done." Connoisseurs are hard to please if not charmed with Glenn C. Henshaw's pastels and Florence Fairman's beautiful lacquer panels and silken decorations.

Claude Buck's "Fuchsias" are spirited and quaint.

The catalog describing each picture, illustrating 21 of them and fully explaining plan of sale, can be had at the gallery Monday.

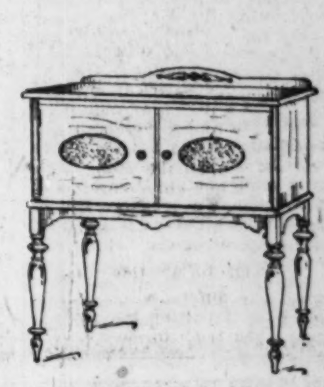
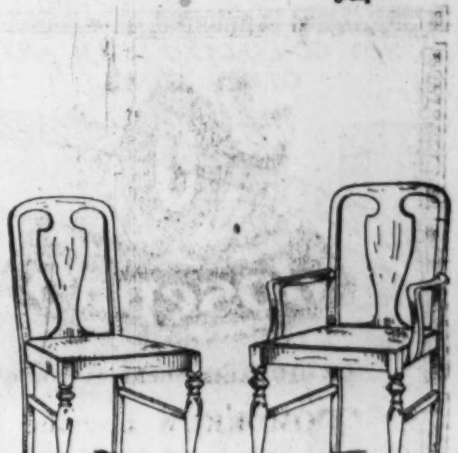
ONE of the great names among the artist-cabinet makers of the 18th century was that of George Hepplewhite. He dealt with furniture from an artist's standpoint; utility was a primary requirement, of course, but it was not permitted to overcome his sense of beauty and proportion.

His artistic ideas have influenced the making of furniture during the whole period of almost a century and a half since he first displayed his craftsmanship.



The dining room suite which we show is a good example of Hepplewhite influence; we think, and we are sure you will think, that it is a very beautiful suite. And we know that the prices, either for single pieces or for the whole suite, are extremely low. We were able to buy it at a very great reduction; and we are able to sell it in the same way.



It will be a pleasure to us to show it to every lover of beautiful furniture who cares to come and look at it. You may not want to buy it; or any other thing in the store. No matter; come and enjoy looking at it.

You'll see many other beautiful things; many other types of furniture; and if you care to ask the price of any of these things, you'll be surprised to find how very low the figures are.

Rugs for Every Taste

Not only for every taste, but for every purse. You can get good rugs here, costly or inexpensive—sometimes the costly ones are the least expensive in the end. We'll satisfy you in rugs; or money back.

ILLINOIS LEGION PRAISED ON TREE MEMORIAL PLAN

Certificates Will Be Sent to Nearest Relatives.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—In a telegram to William Q. Sutliff of Chicago, adjutant of the American Legion of Illinois, the American Forestry association today announces it will register every memorial tree planted in Illinois on its national honor roll and send certificates of registration to each post or next of kin, showing the date of the planting, by whom, and the post doing the planting.

There is not charge for these certificates. The association is registering memorial trees in one great honor roll from every state.

Text of Telegram.

The telegram to Adjt. Sutliff follows:

"Congratulations to the American Legion of Illinois on the great memorial tree planting plans, about which we have just read in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Illinois will lead the states and set a great example to the rest of the country under the leadership of yourself and Col. Milton J. Foreman.

"The American Forestry association will register every tree planted on its national honor roll and send without charge the certificate of registration to the post or the next of kin. Tree day programs will be sent free to any post asking for it. Depend upon our heartiest coöperation with the Legion which has issued bulletin No. 38 on memorial tree planting."

Programs Are Forwarded.

The association today sent fifty tree day programs to Adj. Sutliff. This program is being used in thousands of places throughout the country. One of the biggest ceremonies thus far held under the auspices of the Legion was when a memorial tree was planted on the grounds of Walter Reed hospital.

A hearty second was given today by President Pack to the letter written by President Harding to J. M. Patterson, editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in regard to memorial tree planting.

BLACKFRIARS PICK ONE GIRL TO AID THEM WITH SHOW

KATHERINE CLARK.
[Daguerre Photo.]

Miss Katherine Clark is the only woman who will serve on the Blackfriars staff at the University of Chicago. As head score girl she will pick the thirty girls she thinks are most popular among the students, most prominent in campus activities and the best looking, to assist her in selling the programs of the Blackfriars performance "The Machinations of Max" at the show on May 13, 14, 20, 21.

The Blackfriars, the men's dramatic club which puts on an annual show, has headed their cast this year with Jerry Neff and Donald Richardson. Among the others in the cast are Clarence Brown, Max Lambert, Robert MacDonald and Harry McCormick. Keith Kindred and Allen Holloway head the staff.

VANCE POISONING CAUSES INQUIRY ON NEW ANGLE

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—[United Press.]—A new investigation into the death, from nicotine poisoning, of Miss Marie Vance of Chicago was started here today, under the direction of J. M. O'Connell, southern California agent of the state board of medical examiners.

O'Connell asserted he wants to learn of events preceding the death.

When poison killed her at a bungalow, reported to have been purchased for her by an eastern millionaire, Miss Vance was in a serious condition. The alleged assertion of Dr. B. E. Ryder that an operation he performed was sanctioned by the city health department was denied today by health authorities.

FIRE PLUS HAY EQUALS $50,000.

Sioux City, Ia., May 7.—Fire, believed to have started in a pile of hay, destroyed a quarter of a block occupied by the Interurban Motor Express company, at 5th and Iowa streets, today. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

HOW MANY TREES WILL YOU PLANT FOR WAR HEROES?

Season Advancing; You Must Act Quickly.

The little tree I planted out,
And often muse upon,
May be alive to grow and thrive
And out into the sunlight strive
When I am dead and gone.

So it shall be my legacy
To toilers in the sun—
So sweet its shade, each man and maid
May be induced to take a spade
And plant another one.
ETHELWYN WETHERALD.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

How many trees are you or your organization going to plant? The American Legion has volunteered to plant the 10,000 trees the Cook county board has promised, and many more if it can get them. Contributions are asked to help the work along, to buy trees, and to defray expenses of planting.

Markers are designed by the national forestry bureau and made at a low price. Trees with names of those for whom they are planted may be registered with the forestry bureau without extra expense. Tree bulletins, with tree day programs, also may be had from the forestry association without charge.

In Marion, Ia., a memorial tree campaign headquarters has been established, and the plan is to establish a road of remembrance where the Lincoln highway enters the town.

How Many?

How many trees will your school plant?

Every woman's club in Chicago and downstate will want to plant trees. How many can your organization be counted upon to furnish?

Business men's clubs will plant trees. How many?

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will plant trees. How many?

The Buck Privates, one of the biggest and most enthusiastic of veterans' organizations, will want its own stretch of trees. How many will the Buck Privates plant?

The Trees to Plant.

Nurserymen advise for late spring planting, the ash, elm, both English and American oaks, any evergreens, black walnut, and butternut trees.

Organizations in a hurry to get their quota of trees installed along the roadside will have to do it at once, as the planting should be completed by Memorial day. If orders are placed at once nurseries will dig the trees and hold back their growth, so they will do well in spite of late planting.

Those to the memory of whose war service memorial trees will be planted along the country's highways are:

Men and women who served honorably and completely under military oath in any branch of the service, combatant or otherwise, of the army, navy, or marine corps, for any length of time between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918.

Men and women who served in the naval, military, or air forces of any nation associated with the United States in the war, provided that at the time of their entry into this service they were American citizens and that they have resumed their American citizenship.

This word comes from Whipple barracks at Prescott, Ariz., a public health service hospital, where over 600 veterans of the war are suffering from tuberculosis and gassing: "As a memorial to the men who gave their lives in service and to those who are now making the big fight for life, on April 15 5,000 beautiful spruce and fir trees were planted at the barracks in the city of Prescott. This was accomplished through the coöperation of the Association of Commerce, the United States forestry department, the citizens of Prescott, the members of the American Legion, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars."

Appeal by a Teacher.

Miss Helen C. Kavanaugh, teacher in Pope school, says: "We own a farm twenty miles from the loop, and it has eightly rods of frontage on Roosevelt road. We would be delighted to plant trees all along the front, and do anything we can to further the idea in our rural district."

Now if other farmers will show the same spirit they will beautify not only the country, but their own property as well and those whose farms border the great highway would show their gratitude for this boon of concrete road, which has greatly enhanced the value of their land.

NEW THIEF-PROOF MAIL CAR HERE; IS SPEED DEMON

A new type of railroad mail car, thief-proof, and capable of increasing the speed of mail transportation several times, arrived in Chicago yesterday over the New York Central lines. Postal officials believe its arrival signifies a new era in railroad mail service.

The car carried approximately 27,000 pounds of mail of various classes. Through its unique mechanical arrangement, however, it was unloaded in thirty-one minutes, one-fifth of the time ordinarily required.

The cargo space is divided into nine removable containers, each having a capacity of nearly three and a half tons of mail. A crane picks up each container and dumps the mail into trucks. In this way the labor of a score of men is dispensed with.

After fifty-five days of construction work the new Quincy street parcel post station was completed yesterday and the parcel post division moved in. The building is a four story structure, half a block long. As one of the results of the installation of efficient new machinery, postal officials are predicting the present twelve hour labor shifts will be displaced by eight hour shifts.

ABRAMS A JANUS AND LOVE PIRATE, WIFE DECLARES

Samuel Abrams, her husband, boasted of his conquests of beautiful women, Mrs. Florence Abrams of 4919 North Kedzie avenue asserted in her divorce cross-bill filed yesterday. Abrams, a member of the firm of Abrams & Sons, tailors, 105 South Dearborn street, she said also, was like the "two faced Roman god, Janus, his frowning face turned toward her and the face of smiles turned for all the world to see."

In his divorce bill six weeks ago Abrams charged his wife with appearing "like a doll, painted and dressed up." She declares he allowed her only $1 a day for herself and their son, and she had no money to spend on finery.

She also charges that her husband was too fond of a married woman. Once, she says, she discovered him kissing this woman while in the hallway of a friend's home. He explained it as a joke.

HO! 4 HORSEMEN! FOE BELABORS SENOR IBANEZ

His Books Are Improper, Teacher Declares.

Concerning the remarks of Charles Halle before the Association of Modern Language Teachers at the Hotel Sherman yesterday, it may be stated in advance that Mr. Haile is a teacher who abhors "preaching" and that he considers Vicente Blasco-Ibanez, the famous Spanish novelist, a "literary garbage man" who enjoys his occupation. It might be well to add that Mr. Haile is a Spanish instructor at the Austin High school.

Senor Ibanez Gets His.

Mr. Halle opened his remarks by stating that "preaching is the vice of American Latin instructors; they use this device because they do not know their subject thoroughly enough to teach it." Then he descended upon the unfortunate Senor Ibanez.

"I have gone through eight of the novels of Ibanez," he said, "and I do not hesitate to say they are not fit to be read. In most cases his chief characters are very dirty rascals; the endings of his books are sad, without being tragic, and their effect is painful and depressing insted of edifying.

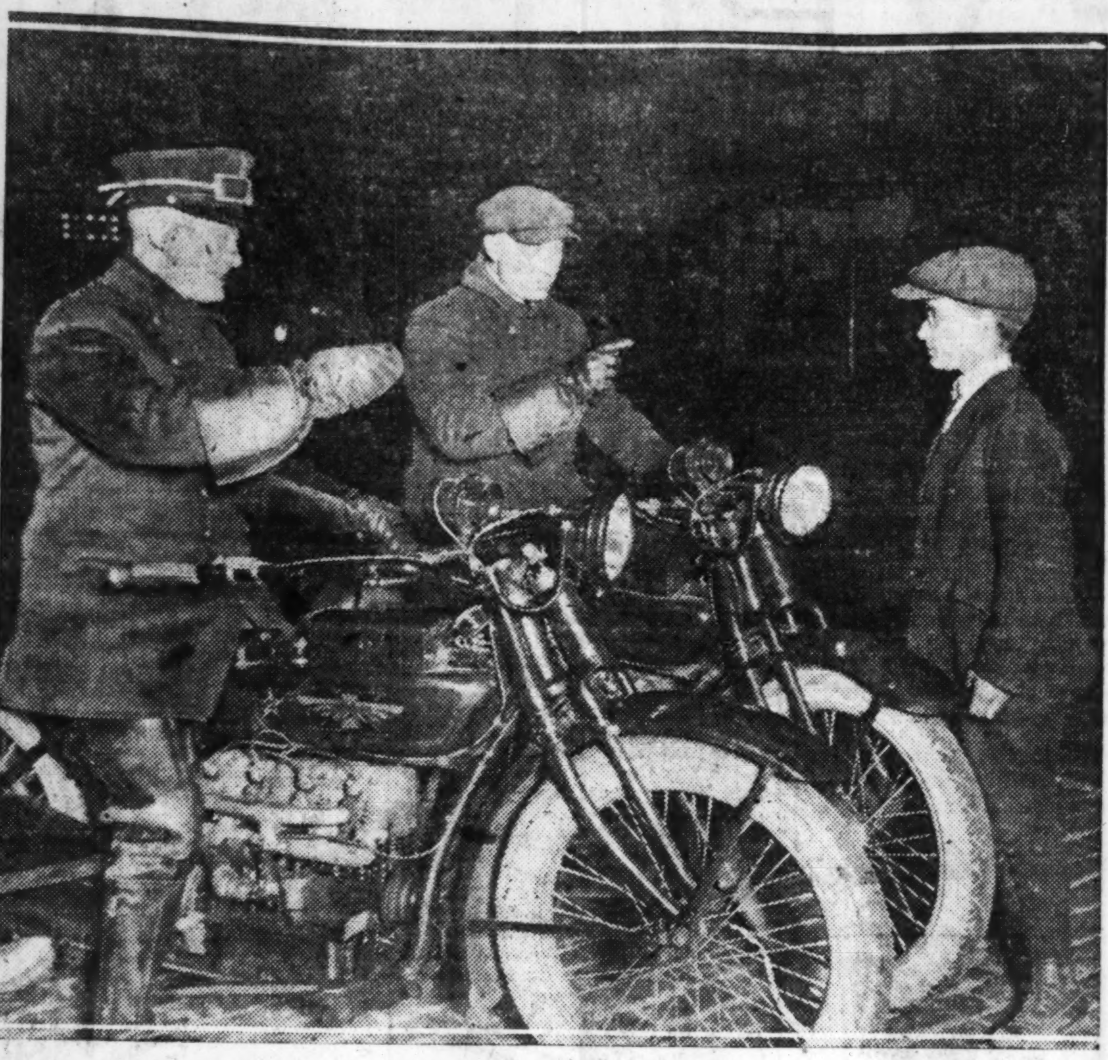
"Senor Ibanez seems to have a filthy imagination. The things he describes, while quite proper in the works of Dean Swift and the humorous plays of Shakespeare, are merely disgusting in his books. This is because he writes in a serious vein.

Garbage and Literature.

"Garbage is an essential element in the economy of life. The humorous author who treats of disgusting subjects is like one who sweeps up garbage and casts it forth again. The writer who treats of those subjects seriously is like one who sits down by the garbage pail to enjoy its smell.

"But," he hastened to add, "understand these characteristics of Senor Ibanez' works are largely attributable to French influence."

"AT THE RINGING OF THE CURFEW—"



In the poem the ringing of the curfew was to be the signal for the execution of the hero. Bartholomew Salvester, the youth shown in the above picture, is not in so serious a plight, although any one who looks at the stern faces of West Park Policemen A. H. Wilgen and W. T. Hogt, who are confronting him, might think that something terrible was about to happen to him. But they're only warning him that the next time he is out after the ringing of the curfew he'll be in a lot of trouble. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

U. S. Ship Mysteriously Tries to Sink at Pier

Newport News, Va., May 7.—The shipping board steamer Willimantic, loading here with coal, was discovered sinking at its pier today, fifteen feet of water in the engine room. Had the bulkheads not held, it would have gone down, the agents said, adding that they did not know whether the ship had sprung a leak or whether the seacocks had been left open. A wrecking tug has been ordered from Norfolk and the water will be pumped out today or tomorrow. Experts say the ship is in no danger.

GIRL TELLS OF TRIANGLE THAT LED TO MURDER

The story of the triangle which resulted in the death of an innocent bystander, was revealed yesterday when Miss Doris May Rodda described the murder of Leo Sharpe of 1749 Warren avenue in front of 707 North Dearborn avenue Friday night.

"I was going with Andrew Kuckey," Miss Rodda sobbed. "For a long time we were sweethearts. I loved him until one day he introduced me to Frank Pennell. I lost my interest in Knuckey then and fell in love with Frank. Recently I told Knuckey Frank and I planned to be married the last of May. He grew insanely jealous and sang a snatch of a song, 'He was my pal, but he stole my gal.' Then he said:

"'I'll cut his heart out and give it to you; you won't be so heartless then.' Then he went away.

"Last night we were standing in front of my rooming house, Mr. Pennell, and Mr. Sharpe, and I. Knuckey came up and fired a shot. In the dark he mistook Sharpe for Pennell."

The police are searching for Knuckey and the inquest has been continued to May 14.

Miss Rodda and Pennell were released after they had testified.

Negro, Saved by Negro from Negroes, to Hang

Clyde, Ga., May 7.—Israel Waters, a Negro recently saved by a Negro preacher from a Negro mob, following an attack on a Negro girl, was sentenced today to be hanged for the crime.

IBANEZ GLAD HE SAW AMERICA, MADRID IS TOLD

MADRID, May 7.—Vincente Blasco Ibanez, who has returned to Madrid, in an interview here today spoke enthusiastically of his reception during his visit to America, where, he declared, Spain and things Spanish occupied more attention than in Europe.

Señor Ibanez gave his impressions of Mexico, which he said should be left to work out its own destiny. The worst feature there was the militaristic spirit under illiterate generals, he stated. The novelist declared he would not publish his complete novel on Mexico, "The Eagle and the Serpent," because he did not wish to throw oil on the flames.

Señor Ibanez intends to devote himself immediately to writing. He also will start literary gatherings, where men can exchange views with women. He believes the separation of sexes in Spain is creating false conceptions of life.

Ammunition on Mexican Train Seized; Arrest Crew

El Paso, Tex., May 7.—Four thousand rounds of ammunition was seized and members of the engine crew on a Mexican Central passenger train were arrested near Chihuahua City last night, according to Rafael D. Davila, commander of customs guards in Chihuahua.

TEACHER FOUND DEAD ON ROAD; MURDER? SUICIDE?

St. Louis, Mo., May 7.—[Special.]—The body of Miss Vera Burkhard, 25, a school teacher at Fults, Ill., was found at 6 o'clock this morning lying in the center of the Weber road, St. Louis county, about ten miles from this city. Acid burns on her mouth and neck led some persons to believe she had ended her life. An empty bottle that had contained acid was found near. Her hat and handbag were in a patch of weeds 100 feet away. The body was found near the home of her aunt.

Persons living in the vicinity said they heard a woman scream at 1 o'clock this morning.

Miss Burkhard's relatives said she returned from Illinois to her aunt's home in Luxemburg, Mo., every Friday night and remained over Sunday. She went to the office of a dentist last night and returned to her home, apparently feeling well. She left a short time later and failed to return.

The inquest will be tomorrow morning.

Select Your Piano or Inner-Player
At Our Special
Convention Exhibit

THIS year and this week the great Piano Trades Convention is held in Chicago. Prominent piano makers and merchants the country over are assembling here for their annual meeting. As a special convention feature for wholesale and retail buyers alike, we have placed our many display rooms at the disposal of our factories for a complete showing of their products.

Scores of Pianos and Inner-Players — No Two Alike

This exhibit is the most complete and comprehensive display ever held under one roof. Here are the finest of Baby Grands, Parlor Grands and Studio Grands. Here, too, are the great Cable Inner-Player Pianos — more complete by far than any other Player line in America—for this is the home of "The Miracle Player" —the Solo Carola; the Conover Grand Reproducing Piano; Euphona Solo and reproducing uprights.

A Wide Assortment of Upright Pianos

Upright Pianos without number are here — the beautiful Conover, the new model Cable with its patented and exclusive "Tonarch" sounding board and frame construction, the Kingsbury and the Wellington in many styles and finishes.

These Exhibition Samples Are to be Sold

All of the instruments exhibited are for sale, but no deliveries will be made until next week—after the convention is over. Selection, however, may be made immediately. Naturally we have chosen for this special occasion our factories finest creations.

See and Hear These Pianos Side by Side

If you are contemplating the purchase of a Piano or Player Piano, either now or later on, visit this remarkable exhibit —see the many models, the many styles, the many finishes side by side. You are sure to find just the instrument that exactly suits your fancy and meets your approval from a price standpoint.

Exhibition Models Priced No Higher

The same low prices and big values prevail throughout our entire line. As wholesale dealers will attest, we were under the market during the war and our present prices are still the most attractive in the trade.

Small Initial Payment — Two Years to Pay

Don't let the fact that you can't pay cash deter you from making your selection now. We can arrange the payments on a weekly or monthly basis to suit your convenience.

This Exhibit opens tomorrow morning and continues during the week. Avoid disappointment by making your selection early.

CITY CRIME FOES FIGHT MOVE TO SAVE LOPEZ NECK

Friends Plan Plea for Executive Clemency.

Executive clemency for Antonio Lopez, sentenced to be hanged for murder next Friday, May 13, will be bitterly fought by Chicago crime officials when his plea is heard by the state board of pardons Monday morning.

H. B. Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission, will leave for Springfield tonight in pursuance of this plan.

"No Reason for Mercy."

"There is no reason why this man, who escaped the noose on April 15, when his companions were hanged, should receive consideration," said Mr. Chamberlin. "The Supreme court, in its review of the evidence against Lopez and his two associates, Sam Ferrara and Joe Costanzo, said the state had proved the three men were guilty of murder."

The men were sentenced by Judge Scanlan on May 20, 1920, for the murder of Antonio Varchetto in a delicatessen at 709 Forquer street. The execution was set for April 15.

Two Associates Hanged.

But Attorney James Barbour obtained a thirty day reprieve for Lopez on recommendation of the board of pardons, promising he would present evidence later that would absolve his client. Ferrara and Costanzo, however, went to the gallows, refusing to clear Lopez's name.

Attorney Barbour then appealed for a full pardon and will present his evidence Monday. It is said he will attempt to show it was one of Lopez's companions who did the shooting.

ARKANSAS TOLD TO BE CAUTIOUS BUILDING ROADS

Washington, D. C., May 7.—Progressive payments of federal aid road projects in Arkansas will be discontinued until existing considerations are corrected, the government of that state has been notified by Secretary Wallace.

In making this announcement today, the department of agriculture, Mr. Wallace said, acted on recommendations of engineers of the bureau of public roads who recently investigated the question of taxes imposed on agricultural lands as a result of "an overambitious" road program in Arkansas.

CHICAGO WOMAN IN RACE FOR PRESIDENT OF LADY GREETERS

MISS E. E. NEWLAND.

As a delegate and candidate for president, Mrs. E. E. Newland is attending the national convention of the Ladies' Auxiliary Greeters of America in New Orleans from Monday till Wednesday. Other Chicago delegates are Mrs. W. W. Major, Miss Mary C. O'Neill, Miss Gladys Born, Mrs. B. E. Weider, Mrs. Helen P. Wilbur, Miss Maud Morrow, Miss L. M. Smith, and Mrs. Luchey.

WEDDED 33 YEARS, PARTED 14 YEARS, THEY WED AGAIN

After fourteen years they kissed and made up, so Charles M. Burroughs, 67, of 3912 Lake Park avenue, applied a second time at the marriage license window in the county building to marry Clara M. Burroughs, 64, of 5969 Midway park, from whom he was divorced in 1907.

The couple were married in 1874 and lived together for thirty-three years. Mr. Burroughs was in the grocery business. In the panic of 1907 he lost his money and his wife obtained a divorce on grounds of nonsupport.

For ten years they have been the best of friends, Mrs. Burroughs said yesterday. He now has a good position and the couple will go to California on their second honeymoon.

CROWE SLEUTHS HUNT FOR BURNS, EX-SOX PITCHER

Seek to Arrest and Quiz Alleged "Fixer."

Detectives from State's Attorney Crowe's office yesterday searched the city for "Bill Burns," former White Sox pitcher and alleged fixer in the 1919 baseball scandals, who was discovered in Chicago Friday by a TRIBUNE reporter. The detectives did not find him.

Gorman Orders Search.

George E. Gorman, assistant state's attorney in charge of the baseball prosecutions, ordered the search. He said he had not been in communication with Burns for several days and to the best of his knowledge Burns was still in the south. The former Sox player will be arrested and questioned if found.

Burns was indicted with eight other White Sox players last fall by the Cook county grand jury.

Trailed to Law Office.

A TRIBUNE reporter saw Burns at Dearborn and Madison streets Friday and followed him to the Cunard building, where he entered the law offices of Charles V. Barrett, John Tyrrell, Aaron Andrews and James Q. Quinn. Mr. Barrett is attorney for Ban Johnson, president of the American league.

Attorney Tyrrell denied yesterday that Burns had been at his law office.

"If he is in the city I know nothing about it," he said.

SOCIETY WOMAN'S MOTHER IS KILLED BY HEART STROKE

The coroner's physician announced yesterday that no marks of violence had been found on the body of Mrs. Mary E. Trotter, 76 years old, found dead a week ago in her room in the North Shore hotel, Evanston, and that death was due to heart disease. Because of the clinical history of the case and the absence of any circumstances suggesting an unnatural death, no inquest was held.

According to the physician's report, Mrs. Trotter, the mother of Mrs. Robert P. Lamont, Lake Forest society woman, whose husband is president of the American Steel Foundries company, had been dead for two or three days when found. The death was reported to the coroner's office April 29.

(A Business Editorial)

DO BUSINESS.

Does it not appear reasonable that the sooner each and every business man cuts prices and gets a larger portion of his stock into the hands of consumers, the quicker the factories producing these goods will have good orders?

Manufacturers will have substantial gain by this. If they attempt to get higher prices they will be the losers. Unemployment must be checked by all fair means.

What you and I favor has nothing to do with prices. They are regulated by supply and demand

The people want goods. Many have money. Useful goods are more necessary to them than money. Pass the goods on at low prices. Then buy and continue the operation. It all helps labor—also the country—also you. Retailers are unwise who hold tight to goods, which to them look valuable but do not move.

And then as to labor leaders—are they going to help or hinder in the effort to bring back our industry and our country to as near normal as possible?

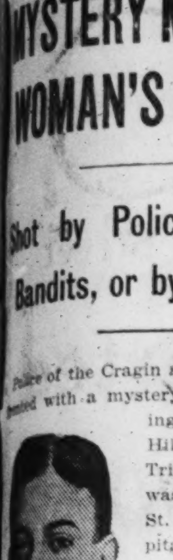
TRIPLE ANGLED MYSTERY MARKS WOMAN'S WOUND

Shot by Policeman, by Bandits, or by Whom?



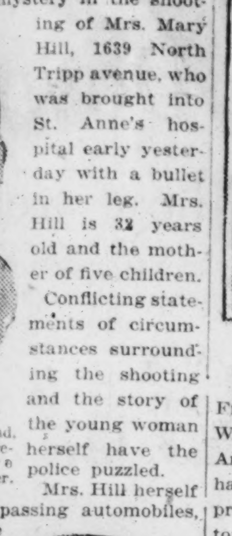
CLARENCE HILL, Mrs. Hill's husband, who is said frequently to have quarreled with her.

Police of the Cragin station are confronted with a mystery in the shooting of Mrs. Mary Hill, 1639 North Tripp avenue, who was brought into St. Anne's hospital early yesterday with a bullet in her leg. Mrs. Hill is 32 years old and the mother of five children.

Conflicting statements of circumstances surrounding the shooting and the story of the young woman herself have the police puzzled.

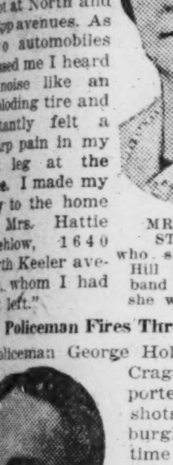
Mrs. Hill herself tells a story of passing automobiles, which the police believe may have been bandit cars. She said:

"I was returning home from a lake when I was shot at North and Tripp avenues. As two automobiles passed me I heard a noise like an exploding tire and instantly felt a sharp pain in my left leg at the knee. I made my way to the home of Mrs. Hattie Strehlow, 1640 North Keeler avenue, whom I had just left."



MRS. HATTIE STREHLOW, who says that Mrs. Hill met her husband shortly before she was hurt.

Policeman Fires Three Shots.

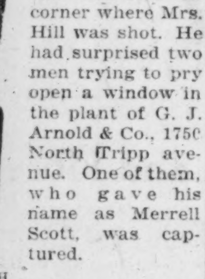


GEORGE HOLZBACH, the policeman who shot at a burglar and may have wounded Mrs. Hill. [Fox Photo.]

Policeman George Holzbach of the Cragin station reported firing three shots at fleeing burglars about the time and near the corner where Mrs. Hill was shot. He had surprised two men trying to pry open a window in the plant of G. J. Arnold & Co., 1750 North Tripp avenue. One of them, who gave his name as Merrell Scott, was captured.

The police are considering the possibility that one of Holzbach's bullets struck Mrs. Hill.

At the hospital the surgeons, however, say that Mrs. Hill was shot from a distance of not more than three feet. At the Hill flat the police found Mrs. Hill's five small children alone, and in another flat in the building was Mrs. Elizabeth Hill, mother-in-law of Mrs. Hill.



MRS MARY HILL, the victim in the triple angled mystery that is puzzling the police.

The senior Mrs. Hill declared her daughter-in-law and son have had many quarrels lately.

According to Mrs. Strehlow, Mrs. Hill said she met her husband, Clarence Hill, a railroad worker, just before she was shot. Mrs. Strehlow also said Mrs Hill objected to having the shooting reported to the police.

"She was nearer her own home than Mrs. Strehlow's home when she was hurt," declared one of the detectives. "I would like to clear up why she didn't go to her own home."

PLAN TO PROTECT WILD FLOWERS IN FOREST PRESERVE

MRS. F. W. BLOCKI.

Following a suggestion by Mrs. Frederick W. Blocki, an officer of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America, a system of "nature guides" has been inaugurated in the forest preserve. These guides will escort visitors through the forest preserve, instructing them in bird and plant life.

"I believe that when people learn to know and love flowers they will not ruthlessly destroy the plants and make their flowering another year impossible," said Mrs. Blocki. "The plan is similar to that instituted at the Yosemite National park last summer. I suggested to the Wild Flower Preservation society that the system be used here, and the society approved. The matter was taken up with the forest preserve commissioners, and they unanimously approved the plan."

JUDGE LISTS OUR CITY STREETS OF MARITAL WRECKS

Beware the North Side if You'd Avoid Divorce.

Are you married, or do you live on the north side?

After patiently listening to divorce testimony for eleven years, Judge Jesse Baldwin of the Circuit court believes he can almost describe a couple's marital status by their address.

If you live on the north side, look out—it's dangerous.

If you live south, avoid Ellis and Lake Park avenues.

If you are a died-in-the-wool native of the great west side, beware of West Monroe street.

Advice for Newlyweds.

Judge Baldwin yesterday declared divorces have a geographic significance, and that he had been able to map out districts in Chicago where domestic discord is rife. He said newly married couples should seek to make their homes in Englewood, Beverley Hills, Oak Park, or other places where residences outnumber one room apartments and apartment hotels.

"I have noticed," Judge Baldwin said, "that the fashionable and what you might call near fashionable districts furnish most of the divorces. Then there are the rooming house neighborhoods, where family harmony is maintained with difficulty because of the lack of home life and comforts.

"In the one room apartments and apartment hotels there is hardly room enough to raise a family properly. Congestion leads to irritation, and irritation, like the mole hill, becomes mountainous in marital contentions."

The Streets of Divorces.

Sheridan road, North Racine avenue, and Kenmore avenue are conspicuous among the north side thoroughfares for the number of divorces, according to the judge's observation.

On the south side he has noticed that a great number of divorces originate in Ellis and Lake Park avenues. On the west side Monroe street is prominent.

War Exile for 7 Years Killed in Lift Accident

Deprived of residence in the United States since 1914 because, when the world war began, he was in Hungary for the purpose of bringing his family to this country, Israel Teichman of 1247 North Washtenaw avenue finally arrived here with his wife and four children seven months ago. Yesterday he was accidentally killed by being crushed in an elevator shaft in the Michael Tauber & Co. offices at 317 South Market street.

CHEMIST, PLAYING CARDS AT I. A. C., DIES IN CHAIR

Alexander Harris, 59 years old, 4732 Michigan avenue, manager of Johnson & Johnson, manufacturing chemists, 180 North Market street, fell dead in his chair yesterday afternoon while playing cards with a number of friends in the card room of the Illinois Athletic club. Death was due to heart disease. The coroner's office and the police were notified. Detective Sergeants Teeling and Donahue were sent to the club to investigate. The detectives learned Harris had suffered from heart disease for several years.

Made in five sizes—one to five burners. Don't wait. Come in and see it work.

The dealers listed below are only those who during the coming week are conducting actual cooking demonstrations. Florence Oil Stoves are sold in the Middle West by hundreds of other dealers, one of whom is in your town. Watch for his advertising.

Beloit, Wis., May 7.—[Special.]—Scoring 38½ points, athletes representing the Oak Park high school today won the class A annual track and field meet at Beloit college. Woodstock, Ill., took first honors in the class B meet with 34 points. University High of Chicago was second in class A with 29½ points, and East Division High of Milwaukee third with 23½ points.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Who do you think will win the Dempsey-Carpentier fight and in what round do you think the fight will end?

Where Asked.

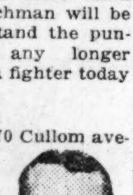
On La Salle street between Washington and Randolph streets.

The Answers.

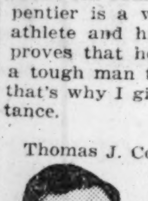
Timothy A. Hogan, 3023 Throop street, alderman—I saw Dempsey fight both Willard and Miske and I think that Carpentier will be able to last three rounds with the champion. Dempsey is too powerful a man for the French champion and he will knock him out in short order.

Oscar Gutter, 935 Cornelia street, boxing manager—Dempsey will knock Carpentier out in about five rounds. The reason is that a good big man is much better than a good little man. There is no doubt in my mind that Dempsey has the speed of a lightweight.

John J. Dohney, 7749 Aberdeen street, police officer—I think that Dempsey will be the winner and that he will knock out Carpentier in about five rounds. I don't think the Frenchman will be able to stand the punishment any longer than that. There is not a fighter today able to beat Jack.



Thomas R. Caspers, 1770 Cullom avenue, alderman—I think Jack Dempsey will defeat Carpentier, and I look for the fight to go about ten rounds. Carpentier is a wonderful athlete and his record proves that he will be a tough man to beat—that's why I give him such a long distance.



Thomas J. Courtney, 1215 Waveland avenue, assistant sergeant at arms, city council.—I saw the Dempsey-Miske fight at Benton Harbor and it is my opinion that the champion will knock out Carpentier in about six rounds. The Frenchman will not be able to stand up under the punishment.

"SPEED" MARTIN.

Elwood G. "Speed" Martin can hit as well as pitch. He proved as much yesterday, his pitching choking off the Reds after the first round and his hitting being a potent factor in an offensive that left the Cubs 4 to 1 to the good at the end of the regulation periods. It was the third defeat for Pat Moran in four games here.

Martin's contribution to the Cub attack was three blows, one a triple. Two of the hits drove runs across the plate. The other two tallies were shoved over by two of Bill Killefer's three swats. The battery men didn't corner all the glory, however, because Clarence Twombly got into the game to the extent of three hits and a pass, giving him a season's mark of 900. He has been at bat ten times and torn off nine safeties.

Puzzle After First.

Martin's pitching really was on a par with his hitting. A double by Bohne and single by See let a Red score in the first round, but thereafter "Speed" didn't have a great deal of trouble. He fell into evil ways in the fourth, but his mates saved him with a double play. They did the same thing in the ninth, when Deal stabbed a hard drive for a twin killing with two on the path. Altogether, the Red attack netted only seven hits, only one of them coming in the last five rounds.

In the course of the afternoon the Cubs looked over two hostile hurlers. The first was Lynn Brenton. He toiled for seven rounds, and, although in distress continually, he managed to escape in all but the fourth. In that session the Evers gang tore off four hits and scored twice. The other two markers were jimmied out of Adolpho Luque in the eighth and clinched what up to that time was anybody's game.

Double Play Averts Trouble.

For a few moments in the fourth it appeared as if the Reds were about to add to the run sent over in the opener. Paskert started that fuss with a one-baser after Fonseca had fouled out. Crane shoved a single through short. The spurt died an untimely death, Hargrave poking a bounder to short for a double killing, Hollocher to Terry to Grimes.

Maisel started the Cubs on the way to prosperity with a single to center in the home fourth. Twombly also hit safely, after which Deal popped out. Killefer then lined a one base smack over third and Maisel romped home. Next came Martin with one of his three hits, Twombly scoring.

Martin Poles Three-Bagger.

Moran stabled Brenton for a pinchless pinch hitter in the Red eighth, and this brought out Luque in the home half. He got the first batter and then walked Twombly, who advanced on Deal's infield out. He completed the circuit when Killefer peeled off a single to right center. Martin followed with a triple, scoring Killefer, but Flack lofted to right.

In the Reds' ninth Paskert singled with one gone. Hollocher then committed the only Cub error, letting Crane get to first on what should have been an easy infield out. A moment later Hargrave slammed a hard liner at Deal. The latter clung to the pill and heaved to Terry to catch Paskert off second for a double play that terminated the matinée.

ROY WILKINSON.

Cleveland, O., May 7.—The lowly but pure White Sox submitted to another shutout at the hands of the Indiass today and the score was a twin to yesterday's, 8 to 0.

Gleason's men were not able to offer much resistance to the world's champions and proved weak in all departments with two hurlers being batted all over the county. Roy Wilkinson was sent to the slaughter pen first and got hsi in three rounds during which the Indians scalped him for six hits and five runs with the aid of three walks.

Helpless Before Mails.

Shovel Hodge took up the lost cause in the fourth and was responsible for what happened thereafter. Nothing mattered after the opening round, however, for the Sox were helpless before the southpaw shoots of Walter Mails, world's series hero. He held them to four hits, two of which came closely together in the sixth and ought to have broken the row of goose eggs.

The support given all the pitchers was perfect and at times thrilling. The only slip was made by Mails when he soaked Hodge in the lumbago belt with a wild throw to first base without doing any damage either to the score or to his antagonist.

Mostil Poles Two Bagger.

John Mostil broke back into the lineup in Strunk's place to remove one left handed hitter from the Sox attack and made the hardest swat off Mails, a liner over first that was good for two bases in the sixth, with Hooper on first and two out. Although Smith retrieved the pill with alacrity, Hooper could have scored on it if he had been properly coached.

Interest in the combat ended early. Jamieson began on Wilkinson with a slash to right for two cushions. Johnston sacrificed and Speaker yopped a fly to short left. Johnson tried for it but lost the ball in the high sky and Spoke made to bags, scoring Jamieson. Smith sent a long fly over Mostil's head for three bases, giving Speaker a stroll to the pan. Gardner singled and Smith trotted home, then Wilkinson stopped them with the help of Schalk, who flagged Gardner stealing.

Singles by Smith and Gardner behind a pass to Speaker scored two runs in the third and again Schalk helped out by pinching an Indian for stealing. Hodge was touched for two singles with a sacrifice between them in the fourth, making the sixth tally.

A pass, a suicide and a single accounted for the tally in the sixth and two singles and a sacrifice made the final counter in the seventh.

Two Hits Up to Sixth.

Up to the sixth inning only two singles had been garnered off Mails and they were not near relations. In the sixth with one gone Hooper hit a slow roller to Stephenson and beat it out. Falk lined a drive into Gardner's hands but Hooper escaped a double play by hustling back to first. Mostil whistled a drive past Johnston for two bases but Hooper was stopped on third and Sheely rolled the side out.

In the Wake of the News

OUR FIRST BETTING.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.—[Special.]—Newcomers at a race track make many strange, at times humorous, mistakes in placing their wagers until they become sophisticated to turf ways. Presence at the Kentucky Derby brings back memories of our first wagering when we attended the Crescent City Derby won by Meadowthorpe at New Orleans in 1897.

My college roommate and the now Wake went south in the spring vacation period on a round trip railroad pass to stay as long as our limited funds permitted. After picking the Derby winners succeeding days were not so successful, so it became the part of wisdom to hold out enough money for sleeper and dining car returning.

Accordingly we divided the bank roll for a final shot, with the mutual promise to do nothing foolish. We became separated at the track, and on meeting my roommate in the evening I noted his crestfallen air. I inquired the cause. He said:

"I blew it all, but had terribly tough luck. In the first race I played to win and the horse ran second. Then I took what I had left and bet it on a horse to run second and it won."

"What did you do with the ticket?" I inquired hopefully.

"Why, I tore it up," he said.

He had torn up a ticket worth $37, and as my own roll had gone the way of his, we came home in the smoker and ate sandwiches while our small change lasted.

Louisville is not entirely devoid of touts, but the surveillance of track detectives is so strict that their field of operations is limited and, we would think, rather unprofitable. The days of "Let me borrow your lead pencil" and "Ask him what he likes, he's betting commissioner for Charley Ellison" have passed on the western turf.

"The Yellow Kid."

Joe Weil, "The Yellow Kid," on whom a prison sentence for fleecing an Indiana banker finally was hung after years of narrow escapes, was one of the nerviest, most resourceful, and most convincing of the operators who profited by their victim's cupidity.

When The Wake was secretary of the Western Jockey club he received telephone queries nearly every week concerning Weil's reliability from persons who had been approached or landed. In many instances they would not believe Weil was not all to the merry.

On one occasion Weil answered an ad from a man wishing to sell a farm at Fox Lake, drove out there in his own car with the intending seller, and casually broached the subject of a $500 bet on a sure thing.

When the seller mentioned us as a friend and asked Weil if he knew us Weil replied: "Yes, Harvey's a friend of mine, too. We'll meet in his office tomorrow when I pay over the money you will win."

Our friend asserted he did not intrust his $500 to "The Yellow Kid," but I was always doubtful, as he did not seem proud of his experience.

Phoney Tickets.

One method of the swindlers who secured a victim for a "sure thing" bet was to give a phoney ticket, supposed to represent a horse which the plotters thought had no chance. In reality it represented nothing.

Usually the horse lost, in which case there were expressions of regret and "come-ons" to get even—more money for the swindlers. If the horse by any chance did win then the swindlers disappeared.

Victims of these games and the supposed "wire tappings" disliked the publicity attaching to exposure, involving, as it did, their own acquiescence in something supposedly crooked, so the oily gentlemen frequently got away without trouble. Moreover, they so worked it was difficult to make a criminal case.

ANTI-BOXING MEN GATHER TO FIGHT BILL AT CAPITAL

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—The forces that oppose enactment of a boxing bill, framed along the lines of bills that have been introduced in the Illinois legislature, got into action this week. Their point of attack was Gov. Small.

REV. M. BOYNTON.
[Writers Photo.]

The Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton of Chicago has taken command of the field workers, who have been gradually assembling from over the state, as the prospect seemed to grow brighter for the passage of a boxing bill.

Dr. Boynton, coming as chairman of the legislative committee of the organized Chicago ministers and the affiliated church interests in Chicago, went directly to the top and presented the case of the 600,000 citizens that he says he represents directly to the governor.

Six Rounds; No Decision.

"I told Gov. Small what we will stand for and what we intend to oppose to the death," said Dr. Boynton. "We are for a boxing bill that protects the boxing game; that permits the boys to box on the square, and makes it a legitimate, respectable sport. We are against any sort of a bill that creates a boxing trust in which the stockholders are a few promoters who have only at stake their own financial interests.

"I told Gov. Small that we favor this sort of a bill.

"Six round bouts.
"Ten ounce gloves for all contests.
"No decision to be rendered by anybody.
"No admission fee to be charged for any contest.

Opposed to Pending Bills.

"Such a bill, we believe, puts boxing on the map as a legitimate and honest sport, and the proper sort of state machinery can be organized to keep the sport within such lines.

"We are utterly opposed to the bills that are now pending in senate and house. We shall fight them to the extent of our power. My own judgment, after talking with many senators and representatives, is that no one of them can be passed in its present form."

"Did Gov. Small indicate his wishes with respect to the type of bill that might become a law?" Dr. Boynton was asked.

"No, he did not. I believe that his mind is open. I hope that we were able to present to him an argument that precludes the possibility of the enactment of a wide open prize fighting bill."

Denvir Bill in Senate.

The Denvir bill providing for a state commission and ten round contests with decisions is now on third reading in the senate. The composite bill of the house committee on license that was agreed to by the sponsors of all pending house measures, is on second reading in the house.

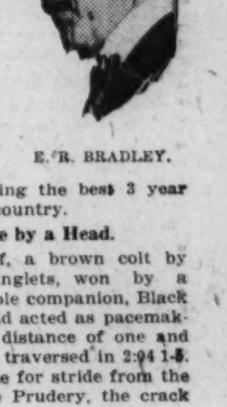
BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.



E. R. BRADLEY.

Louisville, Ky., May 7.—[Special.]—Behave Yourself!

Those words are not an exclamatory warning, but the name of the winner of the forty-seventh renewal of the Kentucky Derby, decided this afternoon at Churchill Downs before a crowd of 50,000 spectators, who vociferously acclaimed the victory of a Kentucky owned and Kentucky bred youngster in a field of twelve starters representing the best 3 year olds in the whole country.

Beats Mate by a Head.

Behave Yourself, a brown colt by Marathon-Miss Ringlets, won by a head from his stable companion, Black Servant, which had acted as pacemaker for the entire distance of one and one-quarter miles, traversed in 2:04 1-5. The pair ran stride for stride from the eighth pole, while Prudery, the crack filly of the Whitney stable, which, coupled with Tryster, was public choice at 11 to 10, was a distant third, six lengths behind the leaders.

It was a great day for Owner E. R. Bradley, whom we referred to familiarly as Ed when there was racing in Chicago, where he owned the Del Prado hotel and also sponsored a tailoring establishment on Madison street. The race itself was worth $38,450 net to the winner, with $10,000 to the second horse. No owner of a Derby starter allows his horses to run unbacked, and Bradley thought he had a chance.

Paid $19.30 for a $2 Bet.

Two dollar mutuels on the Bradley pair paid $19.50, $13, and $5.90 and vindicated the tradition that favorites do not win this race, which has been captured only seven of forty-seven times by public choices.

As showing the uncertainties of races, however, Black Servant was more fancied than Behave Yourself, both by his owner and the stable jockey. On Thursday the writer was discussing with Bradley the chances of his entry in a party which included the wife of a Chicagoan prominent in the sporting world. This lady had induced her husband to play a hunch for her in the winter book to the extent of $10 and stood to win $700 on Behave Yourself. Of course, in the winter book, entries do not go and you must name your horse.

Bradley Picked Black Servant.

Accordingly Mrs. Hunch Player wished to know first hand her chances and explained her wager to Bradley. He replied: "I think my entry has a chance, because favorites have been beaten before. We will, of course, win with either if we can, but I am sorry to tell you that I regard Black Servant as four lengths better than Behave Yourself. It might happen, however, that the pace would use up the others and Behave Yourself might come on and win.

Jockey Lyke shared his employer's opinion. He was given the choice of mounts, as the premier stable jockey, and was told a fee of $5,000 awaited him if he was astride the winner and a fee of $1,000 if he was on the loser, but the stable won. So Lyke chose Black Servant.

Bradley Horses Class of Field.

The race was truly run with the Bradley pair superior. Prudery turned wide into the stretch, losing some ground, but not enough to affect the result in any respect.

After a delay of ten minutes at the post, due largely to Leonardo II., which was the most impressive looking of the dozen aristocratic equines in the parade to the post, Starter Dade sent them away to a good start, with Black Servant, Muskallonge, and Leonardo II. in the van, and that is the way they came past the stand the first time, with Careful and Prudery in good positions and Behave Yourself in the second flight.

"Bud" Fisher's Colt Weakens.

Muskallonge, Cartoonist "Bud" Fisher's colt, soon faded, and Leonardo II. moved up almost to even terms with the leader, with Careful third and Prudery and Tryster, the Whitney pair, a couple of lengths back. This was the order down the back stretch when Kummer on Prudery began to challenge. Coming around to the quarter pole, the Whitney filly was only a length back and seemingly coming on.

As they swung into the straight for the stretch run Prudery went a bit wide, while another set of white, green, hoops, and cap, the Bradley colors, was seen moving up rapidly on the inside from about sixth position. This newcomer was Behave Yourself, which saved much ground on both the stretch turns, and how he did behave himself!

Entry on Even Terms.

About an eighth out from the wire Behave Yourself was on even terms with Black Servant and the rest of the field trailing. Nothing was coming fast enough to endanger a Bradley victory.

At first Black Servant responded to a shaking up and looked like the winner, but perhaps the early pace had told, for Behave Yourself, running strongly and unfalteringly, kept the lead he had assumed and passed under the imaginary wire winner by a head.

The thoroughly beaten field finished in this order: Prudery, six lengths behind Black Servant, then Tryster by a half length, Careful by four lengths, Coyne by four lengths, Leonardo II., which stopped after going a mile, by a length, Uncle Velo, Bon Homme, Planet, Star Voter, and Muskallonge.

Expected Faster Time.

Considering the early speed in the race and the condition of the track, in which three new records were set today, the time was not as fast as might have been expected.

As the horses cantered back to the judges' stand after the finish, Owner Bradley of the Idle Hour farm, near Lexington, was summoned to receive the customary floral offerings and the congratulations of Gov. Morrow on the victory of his Kentucky bred colt.

While the small betters had not played the Bradley entry more than a number of others—the big eastern money was mostly on the Whitney duo—they were legion enough for a notable demonstration.

Incidentally, it might be mentioned that in addition to the lady whose "hunch" forms part of this story, many Chicagoans were on the winner, persons who had known Bradley in Chicago.

RECORD CROWD SEES DERBY

What the management declared was the greatest crowd which ever saw the Derby, estimated at 50,000 paid admissions and a gate of more than $150,000, began arriving at the track when the gates were opened at 9 o'clock. Those fortunate few with box and reserved seat reservations were more leisurely.

Facing the landscaped infield with its floral information that Churchill Downs became a racing fixture in 1875—the year that Aristides, "the little red horse," won the first Derby—was a notable gathering. For three-eighths of a mile was a solid mass of sardined humanity, occupying clubhouse verandas and lawn, standing shoulder to shoulder on the sloping brick walk in front of the grandstand, half of which was devoted to boxes and the other half to those who first planted themselves in the limited number of seats.

Many Special Trains.

Railroad officials said that never before have so many special trains and special cars been engaged. All advance estimates were broken. From Chicago alone were 100 extra sleepers, many of which were private cars which pulled out tonight for Lexington and French Lick because of lack of adequate hotel accommodations here.

Attorney General Harry Daugherty and Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall motored here with a party from Cincinnati, stopping off at Lexington yesterday afternoon to take a slant at Man O' War—the horse, not the battleship. Governors Morrow of Kentucky and McCreary of Indiana occupied choice seats while eastern and western millionaires were so common as to attract no attention.

Some Racing Fans.

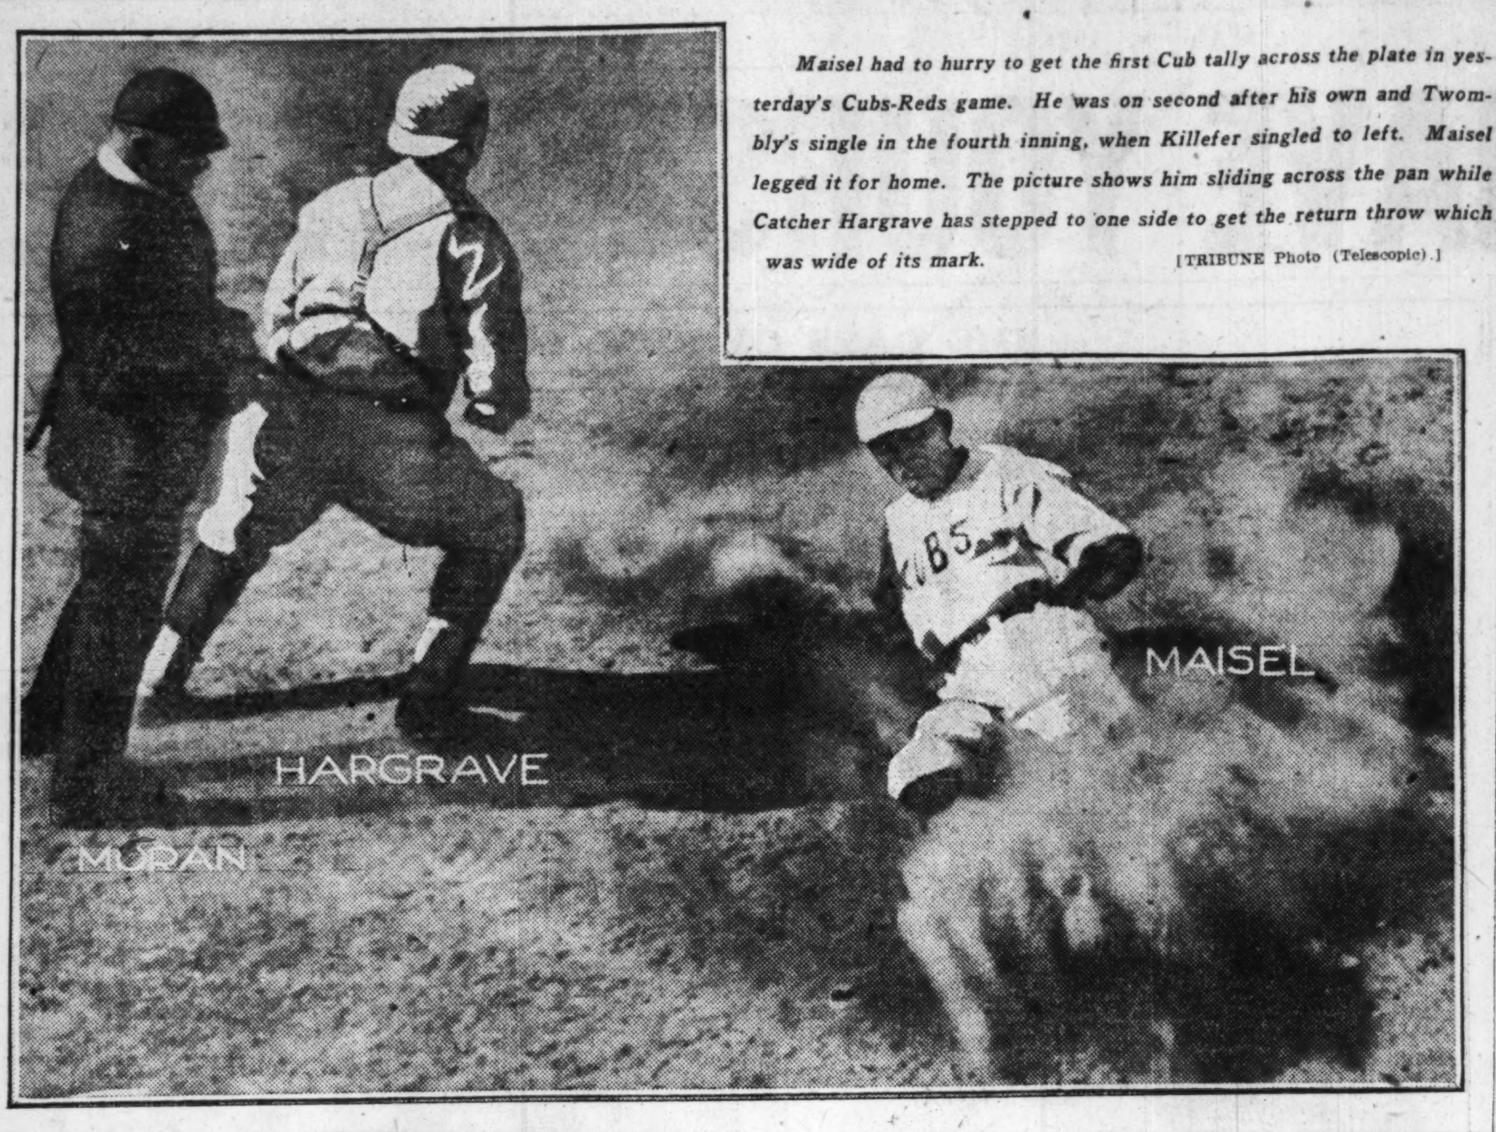
Among the boxholders were John R. Thompson Jr., Dan T. Murray, Otto W. Lehman, Thomas F. Keeley, Alfred Foreman, John Hertz of Chicago, August Belmont, J. L. Replogle, E. F. Sims, Harry Sinclair, Commander Ross, Harry Payne Whitney, J. H. Cosden, C. A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants; Jeff Livingston, T. T. Cavanagh, T. C. McDowell, E. R. Bradley, and Tom Taggart.

President Navin of the Detroit Tygers was host to a Detroit party. President Phil Ball of the St. Louis Browns had as his guests Board of Review Member Charley Barrett, ex-Judge Barrett, Ed Fleming, and others, the party leaving at night in a private car for a week at French Lick.

Chicagoans on Scene.

Other Chicagoans noted were Jack Lenfesty, Richard Fitzgerald, E. J. Carroll, Maclay Hoyne, Tom Cavanaugh, Charley Sullivan, Monty Stein, George A. O'Neal, Leonard Hicks, Harry Moir, Charley Weeghman, Ernest Byfield, A. McCulloch, Harold Foreman, Charles Fitzmorris, Jack Hendricks, and a party of state senators and aldermen.

A CUB STIRRING UP THE DIRT AT HOME PLATE



Maisel had to hurry to get the first Cub tally across the plate in yesterday's Cubs-Reds game. He was on second after his own and Twombly's single in the fourth inning, when Killefer singled to left. Maisel legged it for home. The picture shows him sliding across the pan while Catcher Hargrave has stepped to one side to get the return throw which was wide of its mark. "LONGEST HIT EVER" BY BAMBINO UPSETS SENATORS BY 6 TO 5

Washington, D. C., May 7.—New York finished strong to nose out Washington, 6 to 5, today in an exciting game marked by heavy hitting. Meusel and Ruth made home runs, that by Ruth his eighth of the season, clearing the wall in right center and being the longest hit ever made on the local grounds. It came in the eighth with the bases unoccupied. Doubles by Meusel and Ward followed to tie the score.

St. Louis, Mo., May 7.—Detroit was helpless before Bayne today and St. Louis won, 6 to 3. Bayne's wildness marred his performance. DOPESTERS FACE JOB IN SETTING ODDS FOR FIGHT

BY RAY PEARSON.

Pretty soon, when the fistic dopesters get into action to establish the betting prices for the world's championship tilt between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, who boasts the title of European champion, they are going to run into a snag. That snag is the development of Dempsey's failure to knock out Bill Brennan sooner than the twelfth round in his last bout, which was staged in Gotham.

Will or will not that Dempsey-Brennan twelve rounder have any material effect on the odds for the battle with Carpentier on July 2? This is a question which at the present time is annoying the gents who like to string along with a wager when there is anything big doing in the way of glove contests. The fellows who are sweet on Dempsey's chances naturally would like to see that Brennan bout "cut in" to such an extent that the Frenchman would not be too much the "under dog" in the betting odds.

Georges Has Many Supporters.

On the other hand, the fellows who think that Carpentier has a good chance—it is worthy of note here that there are a lot of them—are anxious to see the Frenchman installed a long shot. It would give them the opportunity to wager more and collect more in case of victory for Carpentier and the fellow that thinks Georges has a winning chance at even money, isn't very likely to change that opinion or lose his desire to wager, if Dempsey were made a 2 to 1 favorite. That's the fight fan, and you can't change him by a display of figures.

In answer to the question propounded a couple of paragraphs ahead, it should be stated here that fistic affairs of the past indicate that Dempsey's failure to knock out Brennan in an early round will serve as a boost for the figures quoted on Carpentier. It is a cinch that Dempsey will be the favorite. That is natural, as Jack is the world's champion. He might possibly be a 10 to 7 choice by ringtime, but this is merely a guess.

Discount Brennan Mill.

Dempsey might be even better than a 10 to 7 chance on July 2, according to some dopesters, who insist they would write their tickets regardless of what happened in the champion's last match. One fellow who is pretty well versed in fistic events says that a man with good judgment would throw out the last Brennan contest when doping out what is going to happen at Jersey City.

But why throw out the contest? Let the eye glance back through Dempsey's ring record, which is heavily spotted with one round knockouts, and one quickly discovers that this Bill Brennan gave Dempsey the toughest battles he has had since he hopped into the heavyweight spotlight. They fought twice.

Back about four years ago the record books will show that the first meeting was staged in Milwaukee. That initial clash didn't see Brennan knocked out in a round or two. He wasn't knocked out at all, and he traveled six rounds with the man who later was to become the champion. Brennan was knocked down a few times and an akle cracked, but he was still willing to go along when the bout was stopped.

No Other Lasted as Long.

No other fighter, Willard, Fulton, or any of them who made the play for the title, were able to stand six rounds before Dempsey and escape a knockout. So why shouldn't Brennan go six or better in their second clash?

Of course, we hear the story, and must give it consideration, that Dempsey did not fight "his" fight in the recent bout with Brennan. The champion admits it, but it is our opinion that there is nothing germane in that contest and the one with Carpentier.

On dope Dempsey should win over the Frenchman, and win much more quickly than he did over Brennan. That's dope, but dope in boxing is often upset, so the fellow who lays down his coin should do so with full knowledge of the upsetting business.

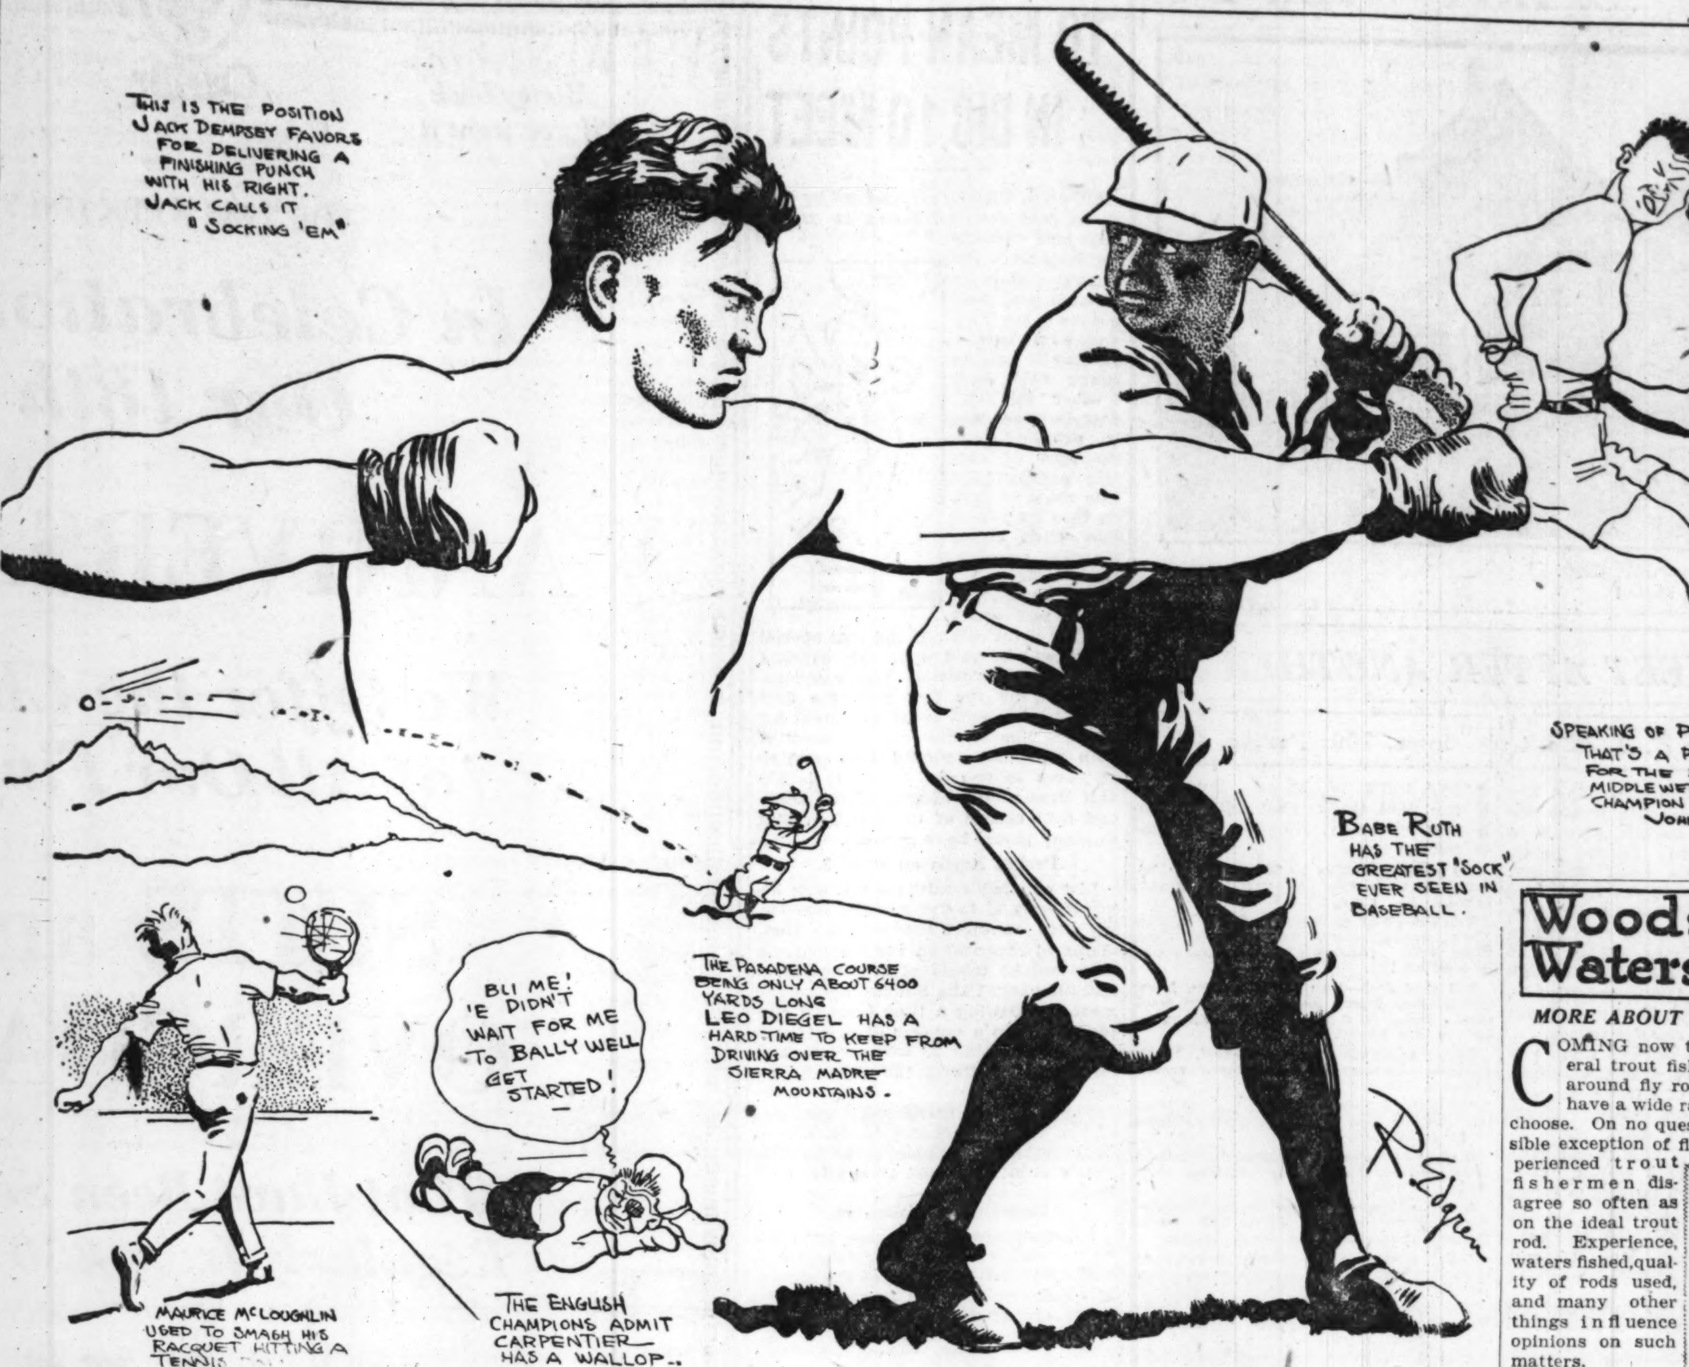
IT'S THE PUNCH THAT WINS



THIS IS THE POSITION JACK DEMPSEY FAVORS FOR DELIVERING A FINISHING PUNCH WITH HIS RIGHT. JACK CALLS IT "SOCKING 'EM"
SPEAKING OF PUNCHES – THAT'S A PRETTY LEFT FOR THE BODY PACKED BY MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION JOHNNY WILSON.
BABE RUTH HAS THE GREATEST "SOCK" EVER SEEN IN BASEBALL.
THE PASADENA COURSE BEING ONLY ABOUT 6400 YARDS LONG LEO DIEGEL HAS A HARD TIME TO KEEP FROM DRIVING OVER THE SIERRA MADRE MOUNTAINS.
BLI ME! 'E DIDN'T WAIT FOR ME TO BALLY WELL GET STARTED!
MAURICE MCLOUGHLIN USED TO SMASH HIS RACQUET HITTING A TENNIS
THE ENGLISH CHAMPIONS ADMIT CARPENTIER HAS A WALLOP..
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

THERE'S no denying it—the punch wins.

Not only in the ring, but in any sport it is the man with the punch who makes good.

Take golf, Bobbie Jones, who has been playing a remarkable game these last few months, is driving as far as any amateur in the country. The "punch" puts him near enough to the green to get in his skillful approaches and his well calculated putts.

I have often watched Leo Diegel, the great professional who has a habit of breaking course records wherever he plays. Diegel is a tremendous driver—perhaps the longest driver in America. He hits a tremendous iron, too, and drops his long approaches "dead to the pin." The punch wins many a match for him.

McLoughlin Breaks Raquets.

In tennis, Maurice McLoughlin, when at his best, was famous for the terrific punch he put into his service and returns. In nearly every game McLoughlin broke one or two raquets—smashing them by the tremendous power he put into hitting the ball.

McLoughlin has taken up golf instead of tennis this last year or two, and is playing a strong game. It's said he occasionally cracks a driver shaft by putting the same wrist power in his drive that he used in a tennis stroke.

Babe Ruth is the greatest home run hitter ever known in baseball. Babe has the "punch." When he goes to bat the fielders retire to the fence. This year Babe has a cinch. He can hit them out to the limit, and he has practiced control of short infield hits, so that he can play them "where the infielders ain't." Very puzzling to the opposition.

Babe Uses Heavy Bat.

Ruth uses the heaviest bat in baseball. When he wallops, he puts all of his great beef into the blow.

It's the same when Babe is playing golf which is his favorite sport outside of his profession. At the tee he takes a full swing, with all his might, and the ball sails fairly out of sight.

Jack Dempsey is heavyweight champion of the world because he has a remarkable punch. No other kind of a punch would have dropped Fred Fulton in 14 3-5 seconds, Carl Morris with the first blow struck, and Jess Willard before the fight at Toledo was a minute on its way. Of course Dempsey is a skillful boxer, with an original, puzzling style, but cleverness alone wouldn't have made him king of the heavyweights against the kind of opposition he met.

Dempsey "Socks" 'Em.

Dempsey always tries to win from the moment the first bell rings. He doesn't stall. His ambition is to get a clean opening, and then "sock."

Carpentier is a very heavy hitter too. He has won many fights with a well placed punch. He dropped Beckett, the English champion, with a clean knockout, a right hander on the chin, when Beckett was rushing him.

He knocked out Bombardier Wells with a crashing body blow and a finishing blow on the jaw as Wells' hands dropped.

When a boy of 18, and a middleweight, he knocked rugged Joe Jeanette down for a 9 second count in the first round if their fight in France. Jeanette says Langford never hit him so hard. It is this knack of hitting a crashing blow, allied to superb boxing skill and dashing speed, that will make Carpentier a dangerous opponent for Dempsey when the two meet in New Jersey July 2.

Johnny Wilson isn't the cleverest middleweight who ever held the championship, but he has a trick of hard, accurate hitting, especially in the body. It will take a great middleweight to best him, and I notice that Wilson isn't being challenged by every hopeful would-be contender the way he was before he whipped Mike O'Dowd the second time in Madison Square Garden.

Little Fellows Have Punch.

Among the old time champions it was invariably the man with the punch who became famous. Terry McGovern was greatest of all featherweights. He was a fighting whirlwind of flying fists, and when he landed something dropped.

Joe Walcott, known as the "giant killer," was only 5 feet 1 inch tall and weighed only 142 pounds, but he had a kick like an army mule in either hand.

Stanley Ketchel dropped even big Jack Johnson with a right hand hook behind the ear, and knocked out many men in his own class in the most sensational style.

Bob Fitzsimmons was the greatest fighter of his day, in any class. Bob had a knockout punch left even when badly dazed and apparently beaten, as Ruhlin, Sharkey, and many others learned.

Jim Jeffries was a terrific hitter. The only reason several of Jim's battles went to a decision was that the big fellow always feared to use his whole strength.

Same in Other Sports.

You might say that some wrestlers have had a "punch," figuratively speaking. Hackenschmidt could use his great strength in one sudden effort—which is the same thing.

The "punch," too, has made many athletic champions. John Flanagan and Matt McGrath and Pat Ryan, with the hammer, relied on concentrating every nerve in one record breaking heave. Ralph Rose and Pat McDonald could always get in one tremendous shot put. Martin Sheridan could add several yards to a discuss throw on his last trial when he was behind in a competition.

Any man who ever won a championship, at anything, had something like a "punch" to put into his work. And there never was a punchless champion yet.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

HAVRE, May 7.—Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight champion, sailed this morning for the United States on the La Savoie. Georges is taking with him a string of sparring partners who will work with him on the ship.

Georges left Paris at 9 o'clock with as many trunks and boxes as a popular stage star. Most of the baggage car attached to the special boat train was filled with his belongings.

Georges assured his French backers before leaving that he is confident of beating Jack Dempsey. He declares he likes Jack's style best and intends knocking out the world's champion as early as possible.

Several wealthy Paris sports told Georges they would be at the ringside July 2 when he makes his first bid for the world's championship.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

MORE ABOUT TROUT RODS.

COMING now to the rod for general trout fishing—not the all around fly rod, mind you—we have a wide range from which to choose. On no question, with the possible exception of fly patterns, will experienced trout fishermen disagree so often as on the ideal trout rod. Experience, waters fished, quality of rods used, and many other things influence opinions on such matters.

LARRY ST. JOHN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Even the anglers' physique has something to do with his ideas of the merits of certain types of rods. A big, powerful man, for instance, will use a long, stiff rod for hours without being conscious of the fact; let a man of slight stature try it and it eventually becomes mighty hard work, no matter how good a caster he may be.

Men who learned fly fishing before there were casting tournaments, Englishmen, Scotchmen, also anglers with weak wrists, generally favor rather "limber" fly rods. "Limber" is the best word I can think of to convey my meaning, but limberness in a fly rod does not mean inert droopiness or lack of action.

Perhaps "old style" or "British" will better describe the rod I am speaking of. Such a rod lacks the snappy, punchy action of the modern type, but in hand-made bamboo it does not lack resiliency or power. Fitted with the proper line and in the hands of a man who knows how to use it, a rod of this kind performs nobly.

The angler who has learned to cast with the rods now so much in favor would pick up his line with too much snap and make his forward cast too quickly in using one of these old style rods.

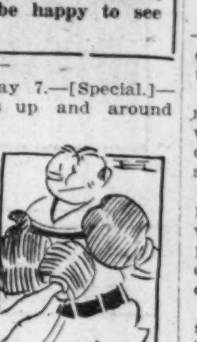
An old timer would handle it differently. He would elevate the tip of his rod so that there would be a perceptible drag on it, then make his back cast smartly but without the hint of a jerk or snap. He would pause longer than seems necessary to let the line straighten, the rod bending well down into the middle joint, then his forward cast would be made with an easy sweep and the line would go straight and true.

Having a weak wrist, I use one of those old style rods. I know that the man who sold it to me thought he was unloading a lemon, and possibly he was, from the merchandising standpoint, since such rods are not much in demand. But for me it is a nice, sweet-handling weapon. It is a 9½ footer, weighing five and one-quarter ounces, with a skeleton reel seat.

DEMPSEY, WITH HIKE DOWN BEACH, STARTS TRAINING FOR BOUT

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—[Promoter Tex Rickard today received a cable from Georges Carpentier and his manager François Descamps. The message was in French and for a time stumped Rickard. When translated, it read: "At the instant of leaving our country we send to American sportsmen the expression of our admiration for their beautiful land, which we shall be happy to see again."

Atlantic City, May 7.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey was up and around early today and seemed impatient to get down to real work in preparation for the titular heavyweight bout in Jersey City on July 2. He did not retire until long after midnight, but was satisfied with very little sleep. Clerks at the Alamac hotel were just rubbing their eyes to get awake when the champion briskly walked past the desk garbed in his bathrobe. He discarded the vivid colored creation under one of the piers and jogged up and down the beach for probably six or eight miles. Dempsey returned to the hotel about 8:30 o'clock for a shower and got ready for breakfast.



Asks Workmen to Hurry.

Immediately after his morning rations he jumped into an auto and headed for his training camp. He was a bit disappointed at the slow progress of its completion and urged on the plumbers and other workers. He will sleep on the premises tonight. Jack plans to get a little exercise tomorrow and to start on his systematic light work about Monday.

The full training crew arrives on Monday. Jack Kearns arranged for a number of the toughest boys in the business to stack up against the champion.

The contract for the two arenas and the stands was awarded today to the Thomas J. Buckley Engineering company of New York. The company promises to have the rings built in a jiffy, and intends to work on their construction over Sunday. One of the arenas will be out in the open for Dempsey's exhibitions, which will start probably in about ten days, and the other will be constructed in one of the hangars, away from prying eyes.

Takes Ride in Airship.

Dempsey went "up in the air" early this afternoon. He spent fifteen minutes in the clouds in an airplane. On his return he expressed himself delighted with the sensation. Later he went over to the links at Northfield with Joe Bannon and Teddy Hayes. Dempsey tonight spent half an hour at a banquet of the Atlantic City Knights of Columbus.

GLEN VIEW CLUB DEDICATES NEW GOLFING HOME

Richard O'Hara became the first ace on the new course of the Calumet Country club when he holed his tee shot at the eleventh hole. The distance is 150 yards. O'Hara was playing with C. L. Deleplane an Carl Overaker, former Calumet champion.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Last year on May 28 the Glen View clubhouse, which had stood for twenty-three years, was destroyed by fire. Yesterday the new building, which covers the site of the old, was opened, with about 400 (members and their wives) present at the dinner, dance, and entertainment which followed informal play in the afternoon.

The new structure, of the old English manor house type, differs from any clubhouse in the Chicago district. The ground floors are of solid oak, while on the outside walls are found railroad ties and other timbers such as the ancients used in their solidly built edifices. Some of the timbers in the front entrance have historic value, being taken from the old frigate Constitution.

Locker Space for 400.

The spacious and high roofed dining room will seat 300 people and the locker room will accommodate 400 members. The kitchen is big enough for a game at indoor ball, and Manager Kendall asserts it is the best feature of the clubhouse.

All of the twenty-eight rooms upstairs are rented for the summer, as well as the eight compartments in the two club buildings.

Credit for the excellence of the new building is due to the building committee, consisting of Harrison B. Riley, chairman; E. A. Engler, Louis A. Ferguson, R. H. Folwell, C. H. MacDowell, Mrs. F. W. Upham, and Mrs. J. H. S. Lee. At the dedication ceremony last night the building was turned over by this committee to President Henry Russell Platt.

PARK RIDGE.

J. B. Davies and W. A. Sanders, with gross scores of 91, tied for first place in class A in the ball sweepstakes at Park Ridge. In class B, W. M. Young and A. B. Brown had net scores of 77, while R. J. Kane and A. S. Cliner topped class C with 80.

RIDGE.

J. K. Lamb, the most frequent headliner at Ridge, topped the field in the gross and net event with a gross of 77. D. P. Heyn, 88—24—64, and H. C. Follett, 87—23—64, tied for low net.

JACKSON PARK.

Jackson Park members qualified in three flights of eight for the monthly class handicap. The leading gross scores in class A were: R. L. Mitenbuler, 77; C. W. Neski, 79; T. J. Monahan, 60; M. J. Mahoney, 80; J. D. Wright, 82. In class B the leading net totals were: L. M. Fisher, 70; J. Badenoch, 73; G. Mavoy, 73.

CALUMET.

Joe McDonald, F. Koller, H. B. Hanks, and J. A. Buchanan won the team sweepstakes event at Calumet. The second team was composed of L. Thiltges, A. Polin, T. C. Cole, and J. H. Witzleben. Winners in the blind bogey event were V. Foster, E. M. Ashcraft, R. O'Hara, P. McGeoy, F. Koller, T. J. Ryan, G. N. St. Clair, D. C. Wing, and E. S. Hammond.

GARFIELD PARK.

Members of the Garfield Golf club finished the half way mark for The Hub and Capper & Capper prizes.

The qualifying round for the Robert Ryan trophy will be played May 21. Two flights of sixteen each of senior and junior players qualify for match play in this competition, the line of demarcation being 40 years. Prizes are also given to the runners up.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

While many members of the Olympia Fields club went to Louisville to witness the Derby C. L. Cockrell stayed at home and put some "Behave Yourself" on the ball. As a result, he notched 39—39—78 over the No. 1 course against a par of 74. Mr. Cockrell was chalking up 85s and 86s when he laid away his clubs last fall. The "Derby" card, which captured the prize for low gross score, was as follows:

Out	4	5	2	5	5	4	3	5	6—39
Par	5	4	3	5	4	3	4	4	5—37
In	5	4	5	4	3	4	4	5	5—39—78
Par	5	4	4	4	3	4	4	4	5—37—74

Charles M. Smalley also had the Derby fever, getting 83—11—72 for the best low score and the lowest gross he ever played on the No. 1 course. H. H. Newman, 92—16—76, and E. A. Ecke, 87—11—76, tied for the low net prize in the tilt over the No. 3 course.

WESTMORELAND.

Only a few members were missing in the first call at Westmoreland, where 175 competed in the blind bogey and ball sweepstakes. In the former the main prize was put in official escrow by President Chester A. Bush and Director Frank A. Brown, who tied at 82. The third prize caused a worse tangle, Norman C. Naylor, H. E. Helstrun, R. G. Sedhart, and L. Bay deadlocking at 81. W. Huey, with a low net of 78, captured first prize in the sweepstakes; W. C. Wilson, 79, third, and H. J. Slaon, 82, third.

JUST ONE COLLEGE MEET AFTER ANOTHER

Wisconsin, 105; Chicago, 30

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

WINNING first places in thirteen of fifteen events and scoring slams in three contests, Wisconsin defeated Chicago yesterday in a dual meet on Stagg field, 105 to 30.

The Maroon team, which is about the weakest in the history of the university, was outclassed throughout. Twice Midway runners pulled tendons and probably will be out of competition for the remainder of the year.

Wisconsin's victory was due to its team balance. Coach Tom Jones has excellent performers in most events.

Albert Knollin was the shining star of the victorious team. He scored 15 points by firsts in both hurdle races and the 100 yard dash. At the start of the century Knollin was set back a yard for breaking, and then won the event in :10 1-5.

Joe Hall was the outstanding Maroon performer. He scored 9 points and all but nipped Knollin at the tape in the final of the 220 yard low barriers. Bates and Bartky pulled tendons in the final of the furlong. Summaries:

FIRST 5 PLACES TO MEAN POINTS IN BIG 10 MEET

Although Illinois, represented by one of its best rounded teams in years, will rule favorite for honors in the annual outdoor track and field games of the western conference to be held on Stagg field June 4, other "Big Ten" squads must not be overlooked. Strength of outside aggregations also must be taken into consideration when championship possibilities are figured.

That a number of teams will break into the point column, and that special stress will be laid upon the winning of other places besides first positions, is shown by the fact that the first five places in each event will count for points. The winner will be credited with five points, second four, and so on down to one for fifth. It is the first time in the history of the track and field classic of the Big Ten that so many places have counted.

Prelim Races on June 3.

List of eligible athletes are now being submitted to the various coaches. As soon as all mentors place their stamp of approval on the nominations they will be tabulated in event form and announced the Sunday before the meet. Following a time honored custom, trials in a number of events will be held on June 3, while heats and lanes will be drawn the night before the games.

The graduate managing committee of the western conference intends to do everything possible to make this year's event the most successful ever held.

Rouse Sport Followers.

"Committees already are at work on a number of details," Macy Good, secretary and treasurer of the graduate body, said. "We intend to bend every energy to interest college athletic followers in this meet."

U. S. VALUATIONS DECLARED JUST BASIS OF TARIFF

Fordney Says the People Want That Policy.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—That Republican members of the house ways and means committee are determined to adopt the American valuation plan for assessing import duties in framing the permanent tariff bill was made evident in a statement issued today by Representative Fordney of Michigan, chairman of the committee. Mr. Fordney declares sentiment for the change from the present foreign valuation basis is increasing. He declares that the numerous protests made against it have represented the general sentiment of the country.

Hard to Compare Prices.

"The proposal to adopt American valuations has met with great and growing approval as the full significance of the change is being better understood," Mr. Fordney said. "The necessity for the change is becoming more and more apparent. The collection of information as to the true wholesale market values in all the countries of the world has shown itself in the past to be extremely difficult and recently practically impossible.

"We must have stability and certainty in our method of collections of revenue if the country is to meet the heavy expenditures which now face it. While in the past, as a prosperous nation without heavy tax burdens, we could or rather did overlook this necessity of certainty in our revenue collections, we now realize that the full revenue from this source must be collected and not left in the hands of the foreign manufacturer, or by permitting undervaluations to widen the profit of his agents, the importers in this country.

Would Protect Labor.

"The extraordinary conditions abroad have accentuated beyond measure the necessity of protecting the American workingman and skilled artisan in his employment, which can only be done by two things:

"1. So adjusting the tariff that it makes up the difference between low standards of wages and living of the foreigner and the American standard, which we must preserve at all costs.

"2. Devising a means whereby American industry will be protected against the persistent undervaluations of the past."

Divided in the Senate?

Republican leaders have failed to line up their full party strength in the senate in support of the emergency tariff bill. Senator Moses of New Hampshire, Republican, who fought the bill in the last session, made this plain today when he served notice in the senate that before the debate is closed he will make a speech against it. He said he was especially opposed to the provision of the bill which extends the embargo and license control over imports of dyes now exercised by the war trade board.

Senator Moses made his position clear after Senator Harrison of Mississippi, Democrat, had read to the senate a quotation from an address by the New Hampshire senator attacking the measure during the last session. Questions asked by Senator Moses during today's debate had given Senator Harrison the impression that the former had changed his position.

Says He Stands Pat.

"I suppose the senator is seeking to wring from me an admission that I have recanted," Senator Moses said, after Senator Harrison had read from his speech. "I have no intention of changing my position, and before this debate is closed I shall express my views again in a few well chosen words."

"Every amendment added to the bill has tended to increase still higher the cost of living," Senator Harrison said. "Nothing has been added which relieves the burden of the people.

"All agree that so far as the anti-dumping provisions are concerned it will increase the cost of commodities."

The exhibition is under the auspices of the Austin, Oak Park, and River Forest Art league, an organization formed with the object of making the suburbs art centers of the state. Carl R. Krafft, recently elected vice president of Chicago Society of Artists, is president of the league, and the membership includes artists and art lovers of the three communities.

Chicago Aldermen Likely to Get Extension of Terms

Springfield, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—The Bippus bill to extend the terms of Chicago aldermen whose terms expire next April was presented today to Gov. Small for signature. He probably will not act before Monday.

COAL EXPORTS ARE INCREASED

Washington, D. C., May 7.—[Special.]—Exports of coal have increased sharply as a result of the British miners' strike, according to figures of 230,713 tons of soft coal for the last week in April, issued by the geological survey. This was nearly three times as much as during the week ended April 2 and at a weekly rate greater than at any time since the fall of 1920.

Production of bituminous coal at 6,921,000 tons was an increase of 101,000 tons, compared with the previous week.

In point of bituminous production 1921 so far is not only more than 25 per cent behind the active years, 1917, 1918 and 1920, but it is over 9,000,000 tons, or 6 per cent, behind the year 1919.

COE STUDENTS MARRY, SO THEY ARE DISMISSED

Cedar Rapids, Ia., May 7.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schlotterber, students at Coe college, were dismissed by President H. M. Gage today following the issuance of a rule yesterday by the faculty prohibiting marriages between students during the school year.

The young couple was married at Waterloo early in March and their secret just became known. They say they will appeal to the trustees.

Mr. Schlotterber is well known as a track man and his bride, who was Miss Ardis Cummins, has more than a local reputation as a dramatic reader. She is in her senior year and would have been graduated in June. Schlotterber is a junior. They were known as the most popular young couple in Coe.

COULD you search the motor marts of all the world, still you would not find a car that quite compares with the Holmes. Its flexible chassis, its full elliptic springs, its first-time successful application of the air-cooled principle to a full-sized car—these are the fundamental features giving Holmes its clear right to the name, "Fastest of all Road Cars."

Nothing less fitting than this compliment should be associated with a motor so easily started, so soon "warmed up", so quick on the throttle, so satin-smooth in its pick-up and so abundantly powerful

It is the Aeroduct—a device used only on Series 4 Holmes cars—that brings air-cooling to such perfection that it is impossible to overheat the Holmes motor. Make us prove this! 'Phone for a demonstrator at your earliest convenience.

THE BAR AND THE JUDICIAL ELECTION.

"The public and the bar at this time face a situation unprecedented in this country. Twenty judges of the Circuit court are about to be chosen at one election. It is plain that if any one party or any one faction should be able to control, for ulterior purposes, the election of the entire Circuit bench the result would be disastrous. Control over the judiciary is of itself a public menace, the baneful effect of which is not destroyed by the character of an individual judge."

In these plain words the committee on candidates of the Chicago Bar association states the issue of the coming judicial election.

The report, which is signed by leaders of the bar and has received the approval of the board of managers of the association, proceeds to point out that the Circuit bench controls the number of employés in important county offices, a great political asset, and that, more important still, is vested with the duty of selecting the south park board. This board, the public is reminded, is about to embark on a vast construction enterprise, for which $20,000,000 in bonds already have been voted. Other issues are contemplated, raising the probable sum to be expended to approximately $70,000,000. Obviously the handling of so enormous an amount of the people's money is a matter of unusual interest from the viewpoint of practical politics.

The election of a Circuit bench or the effective majority of a bench subservient to a political faction would mean the acquisition of a large political patronage, of control over the expenditure of a huge sum of money, and the possible manipulation of juries and judges for the production of political favor, the protection of political proceedings, the wreaking of political vengeance.

The situation, as the committee's report declares, is "unprecedented and especially ominous." In an effort to protect the election from ulterior influences and assure the election of an efficient and independent judiciary the committee attempted to win the coöperation of all factions in both parties. The city hall faction of the Republican party refused to confer. The Democratic leaders and the Republican leaders opposed to the city hall met the committee, and as a result a nonpartisan or coalition ticket, which includes almost all the sitting judges, regardless of party, was determined upon and will appear in the Democratic column of the ballot to be cast at the June election.

The committee, therefore, now submits to the members of the bar association, by referendum, the question whether this coalition ticket shall be indorsed.

It is impossible to doubt the answer which the members of the legal profession, in this association or out, would give to such a question.

If the city hall ticket were victorious at the polls because of its extraordinary organization and patronage, not 1 per cent of the legal profession could hope in any way to profit. These might gain discreditable benefits for themselves or their clients. The other 99 per cent might as well take down their shingles, for with a bench subservient to gang politics what justice could they promise their clients?

The people of Cook county cannot afford to have justice colored and manipulated in backroom political sessions. They cannot afford to have further vast sums of moneys laid out by the liberal hands of political machines for the benefit of the faithful. They cannot afford to have the independence of courts, which is the last and chief bulwark of private right and honest government, wiped out in the interest of ruthless politicians.

No more serious crisis has confronted the community in the course of its history, and the bar association committee and board of managers have only performed their duty as lawyers and as responsible citizens in calling attention to a public peril.

The members of the bar have a special responsibility to defend the purity of the courts. The community has a right to look to them for leadership, and we have no doubt they will not hesitate now in throwing the full weight of their influence into the defense of the bench from political invasion.

There is only one way to secure this defense, and that is to give active support to the coalition ticket.

"PITTSBURGH PLUS."

Twenty-seven hundred fabricators of steel in the Chicago, Duluth, and Birmingham districts and probably twenty-seven hundred thousand consumers of steel products from skyscraper frames to garden rakes will await with interest the answer of the United States Steel corporation and eleven subsidiaries to the federal trade commission's complaint against the price fixing device known as "Pittsburgh plus."

To the layman and to many of the initiated there appears to be no possibility of an answer which will justify the corporation's system of charging a man who runs his own truck to a Gary mill the same price that would be charged if the product were shipped to him from Pittsburgh. That is the "Pittsburgh plus" arrangement. It means that the corporation sells its billets, blooms, tinplate bars, plates, sheets, and structural fabrics at its Gary mills for a price equal to the price charged for such products at the Pittsburgh mills, plus the freight rate from Pittsburgh.

Obviously if the Gary product is sold to a South Chicago manufacturer there is no such cost of transportation and the added price so fixed goes into the pocket of the corporation. This plan, it is estimated, costs midwestern manufacturers and builders millions of dollars annually which are then charged up against the consumer. This price system is estimated to add 17½ per cent on structural steel for Chicago buildings before it is fabricated. To this is added one and sometimes two profits. An illustration of what this means to builders is seen in the new Federal Reserve Bank building in Chicago, where the "Pittsburgh plus" system is estimated to have added $60,000 to the cost of construction.

E. H. Gary, head of the steel corporation, defends the system on the ground that it was made operative by the common consent of the trade long before the United States Steel corporation existed. This hardly seems to be sufficient reason for charging Chicago or Milwaukee manufacturers or builders 17½ per cent more for a product made at their doors than Pittsburgh manufacturers pay for a similar product. The injustice to midwestern business appears particularly flagrant when it is recalled that Mr. Gary in a public speech at Duluth in 1918 said the cost of production of steel in Gary is more than 18 per cent less than the cost in Pittsburgh. From that statement it would appear that the corporation is making approximately 35 per cent more on steel produced in Gary and sold in this district than on steel produced and sold in Pittsburgh.

Elimination of the "Pittsburgh plus" system if it did not reduce prices to the full amount indicated as possible would at least put the 2,700 complaining manufacturers in the districts affected on a par with manufacturers in the Pittsburgh district. Without such an adjustment Pittsburgh fabricators have an unfair advantage. With such an adjustment new factories should be attracted to the Chicago district to take advantage of the reduction in the price of their raw material.

The legislatures of three states and innumerable business organizations and chambers of commerce are supporting the demand for this price adjustment. It means business to the middle west and nothing worse than justice to the east. If the coming answer from the corporation can refute such statements it will be a masterpiece of economic reasoning.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

Senator John Denvir wants the legislature to memorialize congress for the separation of northern and southern Illinois and the admission to the union of the two new states thus created. If the desire arose in southern Illinois we might understand it better. Chicago has swallowed down state and if Jonah wanted to get rid of the whale it would be understandable. Possibly the whale was just as uncomfortable with Jonah inside as was Jonah, being inside.

Socially and economically there are two strata in Illinois, but with them combined there is a better state than there would be with them separated. The northern part, with Chicago as a nucleus, is more heterogeneous in its composition, more complex in its organization, more vivid and ambitious in its ideas, with compactness, friction, complicated structure of society and not self-sustaining.

We speak of northern Illinois as the industrial concentration in the Chicago region. Western Illinois in the north has no relation to the Chicago region in its organization.

Outside of the Chicago area there are spots of industrial development, of important and successful organizations, but life is spread out on a more generous plane, with less friction and more elbow room, with regions as nearly capable of sustaining themselves as any regions nowadays can be. The people are more nearly homogeneous than the people in the metropolitan area. Even with newspapers and the rural delivery, ideas cannot be spread so rapidly as they can be by contact in a city. Political opinion is bound to be steadier than in the city.

Two such regions combined make a state to which the great city contributes its share and to which the countryside contributes an equal share. City states have existed, but they have not been the great permanent states. A state is not healthy without its countryside. A countryside may not be progressive without its city.

The two different constituent elements by their play and counter pull upon each other produce equipoise. They provide check and balance, inspiration and restraint. In many cases you may expect a city to be radical and the country to be conservative. There are differences between Chicago and down state, but none which are injurious except in the manner in which politicians use them. The real differences are beneficial.

American states, whether they found the best boundaries they could find or not, have found durable ones. The civil war made it necessary for the loyal counties of western Virginia to form their own loyal government and made it necessary for the union to admit this loyal section as a state, but aside from that partition, the American states after they had emerged from the changing boundaries of their form as territories, have maintained their form as states. Oklahoma and Indian territory came in as one state. The Dakota territory, shorn of Montana, Wyoming and a part of Idaho came in as two states, and Texas, which was admitted with the provision that it might be divided into not more than five states, has remained as one.

Some day that great empire state will be divided, we imagine, but territorial stability has been the rule of the states admitted to the union.

Editorial of the Day

TO REVISE OUR STATUTES.

[From the Illinois State Journal.]

Senator John Dailey has offered to the Illinois general assembly the proposal that this state proceed to a revision of its statutes.

It will be a gigantic undertaking. He understands that. His bill provides the machinery necessary and the money to grease it.

Senator Dailey is a good lawyer. He and other good lawyers in the assembly understand the need for revision.

The Illinois statutes have grown so large that they belong in that class of volumes that Bill Nye used to recommend for a place behind the door to keep it open.

They have been built up biennium by biennium with little respect for the rules of English grammar or the ordinary restrictions of rhetoric. Nearly every page has required a supreme court decision to make its meaning clear.

The commission Senator Dailey proposes would consist of three members, appointed by the governor, the chairman to receive $6,000 per year and the other two $3,000 each. The commission under the terms of this bill will have complete power to revise, simplify and rearrange the statutory law of this state, but no change is to be made in its substance, except as may be necessary to eliminate conflicts and duplications.

The last official revision was authorized in 1869 and completed in 1874.

PERCHANCE.

When I from dreams awaken in the night
And cannot sleep again, and so arise
And wander forth beneath the quiet skies,
I often fancy that with clearer sight
The starry scrolls and chronicles of light
I read; for lo, it seems, my favored eyes
Do catch faint glimpses of a paradise
Beyond life's furthermost uncharted height.
And so, returning home, I question make:
If dreams can quicken thus our power to see,
Perchance the final hour of sleep may hold
A charm that shall the seal of darkness break
And dower us with the treasures manifold
Within the realm of Immortality.

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge: I would share a whimsey with you. Perhaps the world would now be less irritated had Woodrow Wilson written Fourteen Lines (as you were wont to call a sonnet) instead of 14 Points. It would have taken a technician of skill to incorporate 14 Points in Fourteen Lines—but it could have been done. Sonnets have been known to live when other things of the same age were petrified in death.

I wonder if I have solved the riddle of "jazz" music? War placed upon us a monopolistic hand; we were even subjected to days of erratic diet, a procedure, accompanied by intense mental strain, which laid us more liable to infections, such as the "flu," although the nerve strummings may yet take continuous toll in the insanities. Man, left alone, seeks by instinct his needed vitamines, as do the animals. During war, "Repression" was the open sesame to victory, and I would not in the least question the need nor the wonderful results of its use. It is still favored, no longer needed, kept partially alive by bureaucrats who ache in anxiety for their jobs and by our delightful morons, the reformers, who will be among the last to hold a wake over the remains of a great power. Poor old Vox Pop saw his bonds go down—they were named "Liberty" bonds, a happy wheeze, if ever there was one!—and to date his most noted explosion of the sum total of repression has been "jazz" music. It is a sort of musical epigram, African savage chant in sequence of minors and which possesses the weird call of the dance.

"Jazz" is the beginning of a reward—not itself a reward. Art, literature, as well as music, are in a "jazz" period, and so soon as we pass off our war repressions we should enter a period of recreation of beauty in all types of human expression. We may then thank war for the rebirth of civilization. "Ain't Nature wonderful," Judge?

Sir: Apropos of a recent drive near the Forest Preserve and vicinity, where the homely "Dent' de lion," loved of Henry Ward Beecher, luxuriantly spangles the turf, came to me the line of a passage in "The Merchant of Venice."

Lorenzo, with his love in the moon-lighted gardens of Belmont, apostrophizes the "soft stillness and the night" to the dear one at his side, entreating: "Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven is thick-inlaid with patens of bright gold."

To dissociate the ideas is difficult: The blue floor above, with glittering stars; the green carpet beneath, on which we tread, enriched with golden discs of starlike blooms.

How could Lorenzo, his mind filled with images of earthly treasure borne away by Jessica, compare those glowing orbs to material riches, even though that gold represented in his thought the form of sacred paten resting on the cup, in the sacrament?

It was a celestial idea borne to earth, ending, as ethereal dreams are prone to end, in dust.

ABOUT SNAKE POISON.

A CORRESPONDENT invites me to read an account of a study of the poisonous qualities of certain serpents and other animals written by members of the Phisalix family. As translated and abstracted this account appears in several American periodicals. I thought the letter had a ha ha ring and the title of the article, "All Serpents Are Venomous," confirmed the impression.

As a scientific contribution the Phisalix study was all right, but it did not change my position at all. I hold that the common wild fear of snakes is unjustified: that there are very few snakes of any American species which carry a deadly dose of poison.

The French study showed that fifteen minims of blood serum of a common grass snake injected into the veins will kill a frog, a sparrow, or a guinea pig. That all lower vertebrates are more or less poisonous. This includes fish, eels, and frogs. The poison was extracted from these animals and injected hypodermically into certain test animals, killing them when the dose was sufficiently large. In all instances the poisonous animals did not poison when taken as food. To get the poisonous effect it was necessary to get around the liver by injecting the poison into the tissues or into the blood.

So endeth the story. Am I converted? No. Shall our people refuse to walk forth for fear of the deadly rattle unless equipped with a gallon of wild red eye? Again, no!

The trouble about the French scientists is that they did not go far enough. They did not prove a third of what everybody knows or what has been proved many times before.

Mosquito saliva is poisonous when hypodermically injected. So is the saliva of ants, wasps, bees, and so on. The most harmless substances of certain kinds are poisonous in a certain sense when injected under the skin or into the blood.

Dr. V. C. Vaughan, dean of the University of Michigan, wrote a large volume on this subject several years ago. The injection of different proteins and often of harmless vaccines is in common use as a means of causing a fever and generally stirring up an indifferent system and making it fight back on the same principle that setons and blisters were used in the olden times.

But what has all this to do with the danger of life from a snake bite? Nothing. This is a good place to thank the kind friends who send me newspaper clippings about cases of fatal snake bite. I have received more than twenty clippings, taken from more than ten different papers reporting the same fatality.

I have come to the conclusion that there are two or three fatalities due to rattlesnake bite in Texas each year. There are one or two occurring yearly in the far northwest, principally Oregon and Washington, and somewhere about one more on the average in other portions of the west. There are 100,000,000 people here, and the number dying each year is about 1,500,000. Of these 500,000 deaths, let us say five are due to snake bite.

The only snake having a large dose of poison in his bag is the rattler. Very few rattlers carry a fatal dose. There should be a specific for rattlesnake bite, but manufacturing houses to which I have written say it would not pay to make it, as the demand is too small. I think the state health department of Texas should make it as a public service for the citizens of that state.

Perhaps the same opinion holds as to Washington, Oregon, and a few other states. It would not require much of research work to devise such a remedy. In the meantime there are ordinary preventives, but they are of little use. I imagine most of them depend on the virtues of permanganate of potash. This drug has a little virtue, perhaps, if used freely and promptly.

EARLY SMALLPOX WORST.

Mrs. H. F. B. writes: "1. In what way is smallpox most contagious? (2) Can one have smallpox more than once? (3) Can you carry the germ in your clothing? (4) Can a person having the symptoms but breaking out only in one or two places have a real case of smallpox? (5) For what period of time is vaccination good?"

REPLY.

1. Early stages.
2. Has been known to happen, but not often.
3. It is possible.
4. Yes.
5. In some it protects for life, in others for less than five years. Seven years is assumed to be about the average period of safety.

ALL STARCHY FOODS FATTEN.

A. W. B. M. writes: "We are using a health bread in larger amounts than we have ever used white bread, as we like it very much. It is composed of bran and gluten and is fine as a laxative, but is it fattening? I am gaining in weight and wish to reduce."

REPLY.

All breads containing starch are fattening, including health breads, if eaten in considerable quantity. Bran contains considerable starch.

TONSILS PROBABLE CAUSE.

J. H. writes "A child six years old always has been oversize until the last year. He has tonsils which seem to have a small amount of pus. He is constantly moving, seems not to be able to sit still even in school. Would you advise squeezing and treating the tonsils? Are there any disadvantages or dangers in the squeezing treatment?"

REPLY.

The boy should be examined for St. Vitus dance. Infected tonsils can cause St. Vitus dance. Infected tonsils can be successfully treated by removal, by X-rays or by massage with a suction pump or with the end of a spoon handle.

NOT MUCH DANGER.

J. R. B. writes: "Is there much danger for a woman to have the first child at the age of 33? She has small bones, but otherwise is in good health."

REPLY.

No.

FOR SWEATING FEET.

H. L. G. writes: "For more than fifty years I was bothered with perspiring feet like L. R.'s. I always had washed my feet in hot or warm water. For some years now I wash them only in cold water (every night) and am absolutely free from such trouble. I can wear a pair of socks a whole week without detecting the slightest odor. My feet never blister or get itchy as they formerly did."

BAD ALLEY CONDITION.

Chicago, May 2.—[Friend of the People.]—I would like to enter a complaint about the insanitary condition of the alley between Karlov and Kedvale avenues at Arthington street. The garbage man calls about once a week, but there is so much garbage that he can take only a little from each can. Also there are buildings facing on Arthington street that have no garbage or ash cans and the tenants throw all their garbage, ashes, and sweepings from the yards back of our premises, and since the warmer weather has set in our yard, as well as our neighbor's, is infested with rats. I wish you could have something done about this.
M.

The alley complained of was cleaned on April 28, and parties notified to provide cans for garbage and ashes and discontinue further dumping in the alley.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

WARRANTY GUARANTEES TITLE.

Chicago, May 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Will you kindly advise the difference between a warranty deed and a quitclaim deed?

I am about to make a deal with a party to buy a home and he says he will give me a quitclaim. It is my understanding that the usual procedure in a case of this kind is to grant a warranty deed. 2. If the abstract is brought down to date and same shows everything to be all right, is there any special advantage in having a warranty instead of a quitclaim?
E. E. R.

1. In a warranty deed the grantor guarantees the title. In a quitclaim deed he does not.

2. No, if you can be sure the title is good. Usually the refusal to warrant is due to uncertainty as to the title.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THREE WAGONS.

Chicago, May 1.—[Friend of the People.]—There are three wagons on the vacant lot next to us, which stand there from about 4 o'clock in the evening until 7:30 next morning. The owner has refused to move them, saying that he has no other place to put them. Can he be forced to take them away?
F. B. C.

The wagons complained of are on private property and, as far as we can see, are not a nuisance. It is not within our jurisdiction to order their removal.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

THE TENANT CYCLE.

Oak Park, Ill., May 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A party is sadly inconvenienced by the refusal of a tenant to move after the expiration of his lease.

My lease reads from May 1, 1921.

Is there any law by which I can make this party pay for the room rent I have to pay during the occupancy of my apartment, and also the additional expense in hauling up my furniture from the basement where it is now stored?
A. W. E.

You probably are entitled to recover such amounts. Employ an attorney.

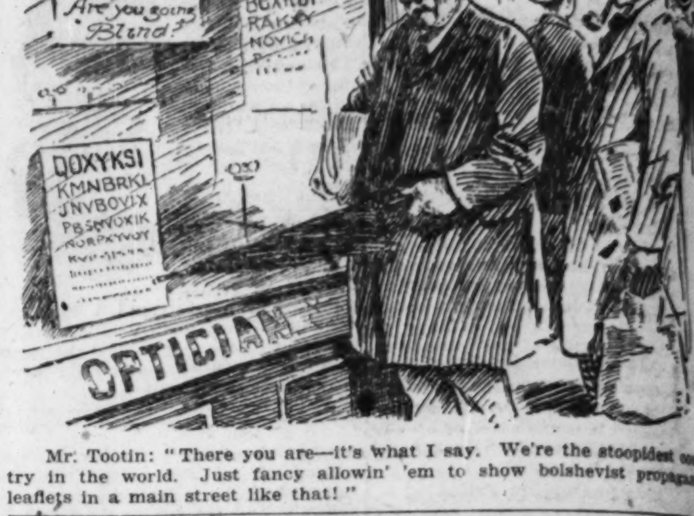
THE TOLERANT AUTHORITIES

[From London Opinion.]



Mr. Tootin: "There you are—it's what I say. We're the stoopidest country in the world. Just fancy allowin' 'em to show bolshevist propaganda leaflets in a main street like that!"

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TAKING A TIP FROM GERMANY.

Chicago, April 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish to commend THE TRIBUNE for its intelligent and farsighted editorials on international questions. They have bespoken a real patriotism which certain of our citizens lack.

Charles M. Schwab, just returned from Europe, tells us that the reason why Germany is recovering from the war quicker than any other nation is because all classes in Germany are working as a unit, unselfishly and patriotically for their country, for smaller wages and living more frugally than ever so that the nation as a whole shall prosper.

There seems to be more enthusiasm here for a free Ireland than for a free America. Large numbers of the working classes seem to be thinking more about the internationalism of soviet Russia than of the success of the American government.

The laboring classes, who have received high wages during the war, are unwilling to take reductions so that all America can get to work and successfully compete in the markets of the world.

Food and clothing have come down in price, but rents have remained high. They do not seem to realize that if they will all go to work and build more buildings rents will naturally come down under the laws of supply and demand. Until every class of Americans work hard and honestly and patriotically for the good of America there will be unrest and lack of progress.
F. W.

BUT ONE USE FOR A PISTOL.

Chicago, April 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I want to speak my appreciation of your editorial in this morning's TRIBUNE entitled "Stop the Manufacture of Pistols." I believe that a great percentage of our crime would be stopped if pistols could not be purchased in every pawnshop and hardware store as they can be now. You say very truly that there is no other use of a pistol than to shoot men.
WALTER J. PARSONS.

FROM A CONTENTED FARMER.

Pontiac, Ill., April 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As the owner of a 160 acre farm I have been more than satisfied with prices for farm products, going back, say, over a ten year period. Leaving out some minor items, I estimate that three or four years prior to the last six months of 1920 agricultural interests received annually from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 over and above a good average profit. The sum was enormous and American farmers inventory as the most prosperous class in all history.

Then after the war was over and with our good customers in distress we began talking $4 wheat. Why? Because the farmers' associations starting with those in North Dakota were delivered over to the bolshevists and their propaganda has been working like the "leaven of unrighteousness" through several other states.

We as farmers may as well face the fact that we are equipped for an overproduction of grain and live stock and that our customers, for the present at least, cannot take all that we raise by probably 20 per cent of our total output.

If we expect to own a farm at all we had better keep away from the "radicals" and remember our good fortune as tillers of the soil in the best country on earth.
SAMUEL FREEMAN.

WAGE CUTTING ON THE RAILROADS.

Chicago, April 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The big reason why conductors are necessary on railroads is that the average passenger isn't honest—he would delight in "beating" the company if he could. For example, he would buy a ticket to Joliet via the Alton road and ride to St. Louis or Kansas City if there wasn't a conductor to check up on him.

Yes, some conductors also are willing to "beat" the company, but they don't steal like they used to. Conductors are necessary, but they are not worth the wages they got by threatening to "stop every wheel" during the great war in company with the engineers, firemen, and trainmen. Instead of calling their bluff by putting the railroads under military control and court martialing every railroad man who refused to obey orders, Woodrow Wilson "forced" the Adamson law through a spineless congress. On the other hand, wage cutting on railroads should begin with the presidents instead of the section hands.

KU KLUX KLAN.

Chicago, May 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Would it be amiss to ask where Starnes Peak Jr. secured his knowledge of the Ku Klux Klan and of the treatment of Negroes in the south?

The Ku Klux Klan is a 100 per cent American order. Its objects are strictly honorable, and always have been since civil war days. Any student of American history can tell Starnes Peak that the Ku Klux Klan was the only defense of the whites from human vultures called "scalawags" and "carpetbaggers" who used the Negro solely for their own selfish ends. Today the klansmen are to remove the alien menace to American ideals.

Except in rare cases, and in a few localities, an honest, hard working Negro has nothing to fear from whites. On the contrary, the two races dwell together much more peaceably than in the north.

Birmingham, Nashville, Atlanta, and other southern cities have approximately 25 to 60 per cent Negro population. Chicago has about 3½ per cent. Yet the race riots of the last few years have been in nearly all cases in northern communities.
ALABAMIAN.

JOBS IN THE SUBURB—DON'T CROWD.

La Grange, Ill., May 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The scarcity of flats and the high prices of same have caused hundreds of families to move from Chicago to the suburbs. THE TRIBUNE quoted some real estate man recently to the effect that the families moved and moving to the suburbs could be conservatively estimated at 10,000.

This has caused a great shortage of help in these suburbs. Take La Grange for instance; the few plumbers and steamfitters there are buried in work at $1.75 an hour. To get a furnace fixed in season or any cornice or gutter work done you must go on a waiting list. Carpenters are very few and get $1.40 an hour. Shoemakers are badly needed. A man to work around a garden, wash windows, or do any laboring work of any kind is not to be had. No such thing as a ladies' tailor and only one man's tailor.

Just received a letter from the Chicago Associated Charities telling of the hundreds out of work; this may help a few of them.
C. C. WHITE.

A LABORER'S VIEW OF THE CARPENTERS.

Chicago, April 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Will you please publish this little article in the Voice of the People in behalf of the exiled carpenter who had a pretty good article in your column of April 21.

Say for me that there is only one way for them to get back to their carpenter work and just pay in Chicago and that is to have them all thrown out of the jobs they themselves have taken away from other men who were trying to make a living at from 40 to 60 cents per hour, and force them back at their own work. They will soon have to do away with the grafting business agents, which is badly needed. Then there will be plenty of room for us all to live and let live.
A WORKINGMAN.

WHY NOT?

Oak Park, Ill., April 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Why not give the old Field museum to the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, G. A. R., D. A. R., etc., as a memorial to those from Illinois who fell in the world war and to be used perpetually by the above patriotic organizations and those that follow them? It would appear that these organizations could secure funds for its maintenance and it would certainly be a memorial of which the state and city would be proud.

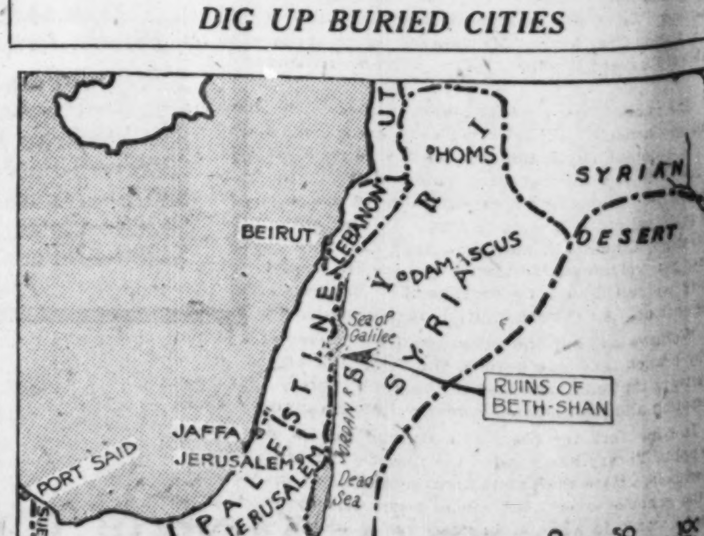
DIG UP BURIED CITIES



Excavation of Beth-shan, the site of at least seven cities of ancient times, in Palestine, is to begin next month. Cities stood on this spot 5,000 years ago, and suffered the blows of the armies of Sargon, Abraham, Hammurabi, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Thotmes, Saul, David, Alexander, Pompey, and Bonaparte. More great battles are believed to have taken place within sight of this city than perhaps on any other spot known to history.

The six best circulators at the Chicago public library last week were:

"The Brimming Cup" [Harcourt], by Dorothy Canfield.

"JAKE" is Eunice Tietjens' first novel. Though it may seem a somewhat grandiose statement to make, I say "'Jake is the most artistic prose that I have ever read," and wait until the tumult is over before I explain. It is the story of a raw and lovely soul in a body switched by it into unconsciousness. It is not a novel in the sense that it is continuous in plot. It has no plot. It is not even the whole record of a life. It is merely life seen "as one sees a countryside through the gaps in a picket fence, seeing yet outside of it." It starts, "Jake has been dead ten years this month." It kills in its first sentence any hope of suspense, and glimmer of the "happy ending." It is a picture of a man dead before his time, cruelly killed by the vapors of two loves, each in itself beautiful, perhaps, but, like two powerful agents, breathing forth death when they met. It is an epic of pain. And yet it is the most beautiful piece of writing that I, for one, have come across, lo these many years. It is almost perfect as a literary characterization of the artistic beauty of pain—an almost perfect bit of writing. It is, in a word, poetry.

I have reconsidered. I am not going to die, for two very definite reasons. First of all, there is the spring. I have never known the spring to be so vocal. It is a shrill call in the feathery leaves. Perhaps it is because I have never before lain long hours in the spring watching a woodpecker hammering a ring around a tree trunk just over my head while all of the filmy green tips of the twigs watched him and jeered at his futility. His tattoo cannot stop their cosmic song.

So how can a mere pain, knocking at the life of one human being, still for ever the cosmic urge of spring? Thus was silenced the thought that death has much to give a pain pricked body. The other reason why I have changed my mind about quitting life is this: Last Sunday morning, propped up in a luxury which one must indeed be ill to suffer, I read my column.

"That," said I, from the smothering comfort of my pillows, "might have been written by anybody with a pair of scissors and a fastidious taste in paste. It sounds like all the twash-twaddle that the world has come to call 'booknotes.' It is as fascinating as a conglomerate thousand of words from Mr. Noah Webster's masterpiece. You complain about Mr. Arnold Bennett because he writes daily—and preserves his impressions—about things that have interested him, and you, young lady (driven by pain, I admit, but none the less culpable), string together all the facts that happen to have struck your fancy between the moments of absolute flatness, and call 'em a column. If for no other reason than that you must live down this collection of dullness you must get well." And to an argument so potent as that, one must hearken. One might be remembered for that handful of scrappy facts. And I would certainly miss the zest of the spring. I, therefore, am not going to die. I have reconsidered.

A little volume of Kendall Banning's facile verses has been published by the Bookfellows. It is called "The Phantom Caravan." It contains a photograph like unto the ones which put Alexander Black, author of "The Great Desire," into the hoosegow of public opinion a couple of generations ago; also like unto Mr. Frank Crowninshield's late photographic representations of nature as she is spoke. It is labeled "Once on a Time," and it looks it. Some of the poems are very pretty.

"The Garden of Bright Waters" is another anthology of oriental love poems translated by E. Powys Mathers. Do you remember his "Colored Stars"? It was gorgeous with the luxuries of love. "The Garden of Bright Waters" has more of the spirit and less of the fact of oriental emotion in it, with now and then a perfectly lovely charming whimsy, as for instance:

"Why is your heart trembling?"
"You are bringing joy for my heart
And so my heart is dancing."

"I am looking at the moon,
And I think the moon is honoring me
With a long silver look."

Mr. Mathers is himself the poet. He feels the vivid oriental designs in the poems which he translates, and brings them all out with an artist's touch. "Now is the time for poetry colored with summer," he says, and gives us of it lavishly.

When "La Morte et son Mystere" appeared in France last year it immediately became the storm center for the sort of passionate literary and psychological war which is always being waged in France and which never happens in America.

Can you imagine Americans being worked up to a frenzy over the Benoit-Haggard affair. You remember? When L'Atlantide appeared in France it was immediately attacked—bitterly—as a plagiarism on Sir Rider Haggard's "She." For days the papers and magazines were filled with discussions of the two books. It became the topic of conversation at diplomatic teas, at dinners, at the races. Intellectual France was passionately in one camp or the other. A few months—or even weeks—later, another book or a painting, or an opera is the talk-all. Art is a vital part of the news reading life of Paris—as the stock market reports are a vital part of the American news reading.

Well, to return to our muttons. Camille Flammarion, with his proposed trilogy on "Death and Its Mystery," was the seven day wonder of Paris last year. This first volume, which deals with proofs of the existence of the soul, was discussed by everybody, violent adherents attacked violent satirists. And here it is, washed onto our shores in the flood of spring books.

Andre Tardieu has told "The Truth About the Treaty." If it is true, as Mr. Lansing said in his book, that the American commissioners, other than Col. House, were practically entirely ignorant of the proceedings of the treaty; that all of the agreements and bargains were made behind closed doors, then this book of Tardieu's should be of great importance. Five men knew the inside of the negotiations—Lloyd George, who stood alone; Woodrow Wilson and his confidential adviser, Col. E. M. House; Premier Georges Clemenceau and his confidential adviser, Andre Tardieu. Tardieu is the first of the five to speak, and his book has a foreword by Col. House, and an introduction by Clemenceau—making it in effect the statement of three of the five. It is a vital contribution to the literature of the peace negotiations.

The death of A. M. Jacob was recently reported in Bombay. In that item of news (?) there is fascination for any one interested in literature, for Mr. Jacob had the distinction of being a hero to two eminent novelists and of living in what many consider the most successful work of each as a fascinating character. Jacob of Simla, as he was best known in the orient, was the hero of F. Marion Crawford's "Mr. Isaacs," which appeared in 1882, and the Lurgan Sahib of Rudyard Kipling's "Kim," which appeared in 1890.

The public library needs help! It needs individual bequests. It needs a Chicago Carnegie. Would you like to know some statistics about our library?

In point of circulation our library ranks second in America—New York is first. In the number of volumes we rank third—New York and Boston topping us. In per capita expenditures we are second from the bottom among ten principal cities (Boston is first). In per capita circulation we rank fourth (Cleveland, Cincinnati, and New York are more useful than we are). In expense per volume of circulation we are the lowest of the ten. And there is where we can do a little propaganda. We haven't any money except what taxes net us. All the other city libraries have had large bequests.

We have had but one endowment, which erected and maintains the Hiram Kelly branch, and one branch, the T. B. Blackstone one, which was erected at private cost and presented to the public library. Every other bit of library promotion and maintenance comes out of the annual revenue from taxes.

In New York the board of education has its own library department, and the public library has none of the financial burden of library work in the public schools. Here the public library does all of the library work that is done in the schools—over 1,500 school room deposits—and is tearing its hair because it can't do what it considers really adequate school service.

Because rents have been raised beyond their means, many branches which were housed in stores have had to be closed. The Sheridan branch and its dramatic struggle for life created much publicity and insured the maintenance of the branch, but it didn't do more than tickle the sleeping beast of comfort in Chicago.

The library needs money for a building fund, and endowment for its extension work, and more money for its maintenance. Let's get all worked up about it, and do something!

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

ROCK ME TO SLEEP.

By Elizabeth Akers Allen.

(A poem for Mothers' Day.)

Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again just for tonight;
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep;
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years,
I am so weary of toil and tears—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain—
Take them, and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay—
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away;
Weary of sewing for others to reap;
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue,
Mother, O mother, my heart calls for you!
Many a summer the grass has grown green,
Blossomed, and faded our faces between;
Yet, with strong yearning and passionate pain,
Long I tonight for your presence again.
Come from the silence so long and so deep—
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Over my heart in the days that are flown
No love like mother love ever has shone;
No other worship abides and endures—
Faithful, unselfish, and patient like yours;
None like a mother can charm away pain
From the sick soul and world weary brain.
Slumber's soft calms o'er the heavy lids creep—
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Come, let your brown hair, just lighted with gold,
Fall on your shoulders again as of old;
Let it drop over my forehead tonight,
Shading my faint eyes away from the light;
For with its sunny edged shadows once more
Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore;
Lovingly, softly its bright billows sweep;
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Mother, dear mother, the years have been long
Since I last hushed to your lullaby song;
Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem
Womanhood's years have been only a dream.
Clasped to your heart in a loving embrace,
With your light lashes just sweeping my face,
Never hereafter to wake or to weep—
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

RAIL MEN MUST JOIN BUILDING TRADES UNIONS

Only Way to Get Back Into the A. F. of L.

Cincinnati, O., May 7.—The United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Ways Employés and Railway Shop Laborers, with its membership of about 200,000, cannot be reinstated in the American Federation of Labor until it has turned over to the building trades unions its members now engaged in station construction work.

This decision was made here today by the executive council of the building trades department of the federation, which received a request from the maintenance of ways employés for reinstatement. The union declared its willingness to agree to transfer to the respective unions in the building trades "those members now within our organization who properly come under the jurisdiction of other international unions."

The railroad shop laborers' union was suspended from the federation in December, 1919, because of its alleged disregard for the jurisdictional rights of the building trades organizations.

Adjustment Boards Planned.

Establishment of local wage conference or adjustment boards throughout the country to prevent unnecessary strikes and lockouts in the building industry was urged by the executive council.

Under the proposed plan, announced by John Donlin, president of the building trades department, arbitration of wage disputes is provided and sympathetic strikes in behalf of unions making "unjustified demands" are prevented. It has already been successfully tried out in several cities, including Cincinnati, he said.

"The new movement," he added, "will give stability to the industry and inspire confidence in the building and investment public."

The proposed boards will be composed of representatives of the building contractors and the various unions. Wage scales for the various crafts will be established on an equitable basis, according to the merits of the trade. There will be no uniform scale. The board shall consider the question of advances or decreases in wages as general living conditions will permit.

To Stop Sympathetic Strikes.

"One of the chief merits of the plan," said Mr. Donlin, "is that no sympathetic strike can be called to uphold the unreasonable or unjustified demands of some particular union. That is one of our troubles today and a situation that must be rectified."

Reports received by the council, President Donlin said, showed that building conditions throughout the country are "very bad," but there is some slight improvement.

"New York City is the only big center in the country that is experiencing a building boom," he declared. "Wage reductions will not solve the building depression situation. The people are not building and will not build at the present time. They apparently are satisfied with buying luxuries—not homes."

EACH NEW MAY 5 IS BRIGHTER, SAYS "UNCLE DAVE," 81

DAVID W. CLARK.

David Warren Clark, vice president of the board of local improvements, was busy Thursday acknowledging congratulations upon his 81st birthday anniversary.

"Every year on this day," said "Uncle Dave," as he rose from a desk banked with flowers, "it seems to me the sun is just a bit brighter than it was last year, and the twitter of birds just a little sweeter. Anyway, it's a fine day, and I am sure it's as good for men as it is for growing crops."

Mr. Clark came to Chicago with his parents when he was 15 years old. They lived in a frame house that stood where the main entrance to Marshall Field's is today. He was a member of a volunteer fire department sixty years ago.

SLAIN DENTIST'S WIDOW TO SETTLE UP HIS ESTATE

With the resignation of Dr. Ira N. Willetts as administrator of the estate of Dr. Thomas J. Rowland, the dentist who was shot and killed by his wife a week ago, an amicable settlement of the estate was promised by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein to Judge Henry Horner in the Probate court yesterday.

William Rowland of Gerard, O., a brother of the dentist, appeared with Mr. Erbstein and asked that the widow, Mrs. Lillian Rowland, be appointed administrator in place of Dr. Willetts.

Because of the verdict of the coroner's jury that the shooting was accidental, it is believed that Mrs. Rowland will not be prosecuted on a murder charge.

CHICAGO MUST BE EASY WHEN CRAZY 'CON' MAN GETS BY

If a man who admits he's crazy can defraud twenty-five prominent business men, Chicago must be "easy meat" for "con" men. Thus argued Judge John F. Haas in South Clark street police court.

Joseph Sohan, 26, was charged with soliciting and collecting for advertising without authority. Sohan admitted the frauds, but declared he was crazy and pleaded with the judge to send him to an institution. He offered a list of his victims.

The judge took the list, sent him to an infirmary for four months, then commented:

"If this man, who claims he is crazy and wants to be sent to an institution for correction of his mental condition, can go out and ply a lucrative trade among business men, Chicago must be a rich field for a "con" man who is in his right mind."

Woman Who Shot Husband Leaves It Up to a Jury

Mrs. Gertrude Sweeney, who shot her husband in the right arm in their home at 114 North Paulina Friday, demanded a jury trial yestreday before Judge William L. Morgan in Desplaines street court. The Warren avenue police signed the complaint because the husband refused to sign it.

TWO NEGROES GET LIFE FOR MURDER OF TWO CHINAMEN

Three young Negroes were sentenced to the penitentiary yesterday, two of them for life, by Criminal court judges. Phillip Taylor, 17, and James Murray, 19, were given life sentences by Judge Frank Johnson Jr., after a jury had convicted them of murdering two Chinamen during a holdup at 3149 Indiana avenue. Murray pleaded insanity, but alienists found him sane.

George Moody was given from ten years to life for robbery.

SLEEVE VALVE MOTOR IMPROVES WITH USE

WILLYS-KNIGHT

The Blue Ribbon Motor

90% of all cars have poppet-valve motors because there are no patents on them. They are common property.

The Sleeve-Valve Motor is not common property. It is strongly protected by patents in this country and abroad. Its sleeves slide up and down on a film of oil. It is leased by the inventor to an exclusive number of makers of exclusive cars.

It is used in one of England's finest automobiles. It is identified with the most famous car in France. It is inseparably allied with the greatest automobile in Belgium.

But the Willys-Knight is the first automobile in the world to use the Sleeve-Valve Motor in a car of moderate price.

You Never Know When

You May Need an Inventory of Your Stock In a Hurry

How Quickly Could You Collect Your Insurance?

"Yes, it's a shame, but if we can get to the safe in the morning we'll soon be able to fix up our loss with the insurance companies."

That's the way to talk if the time comes when you stand by the fire lines watching the smoke roll out of your store or stock room.

And when the safe is opened and the stock ledger brought out it is a simple matter to make the insurance adjustment if the records show just how much merchandise is accounted for by an inventory posted up to within a few days of the fire.

Burroughs-kept Records Give Positive Proof

With a Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine all details of sales and stock may be kept in such shape that it is easy to tell any day just how things stood at the close of business the day before.

The stock record shows a complete inventory of all items of stock checked against the last physical inventory; withdrawals from and additions to stock are posted daily and the balance on hand is shown on each item in the stock ledger.

Without the aid of a figuring machine much of this information would be unavailable because of the time and expense required to gather it by hand.

It is hard to understand how any business man can neglect to provide himself with the full insurance that a perpetual inventory makes possible when it is so easy and costs so little to get the figures with a Burroughs Machine.

FOREIGN TRADE PROGRAM GIVEN UNITED SUPPORT

Cleveland Report Sent to Washington.

Cleveland, O., May 7.—With the unanimous adoption of the foreign trade program for the coming year as recommended by the general convention committee, copies of which will be sent to Washington officialdom, the eighth annual convention of the National Foreign Trade council closed a four day session here this morning.

The report of the committee is a composite of all practical recommendations brought forward by international experts at the general and group sessions of the convention.

Every phase of the world's export business—credits, exchange rates, taxation, tariffs, mercantile marine, domestic transportation, consular service, and other problems of importers and exporters—is covered.

Mexico Idea Pleases.

Exchange of scholarships between Mexico and the United States and facilities which Mexico will provide in this connection was the subject of a letter from President Obergon of Mexico, read at today's session and warmly applauded by the delegates.

Broad principles on which the convention made declaration include:

Immediate creation of financial institutions under the Edge law to facilitate extension of long term foreign credits and promote free exchange of imports and exports.

Economies in cost and production until a stable balance of all values of all commodities and productive effort is established.

Reduction of costs in railroad transportation for domestic and export shipments.

Encouragement and development of the American merchant marine, revision of shipping laws to place America on an equal footing with foreign competitors, and enactment of the marine insurance measure now pending in congress, which is characterized as "a model upon which uniform state legislation may be based."

Restoration of Contracts.

Creation of international machinery to prevent future violations of the sanctity of contracts.

The establishment of a national training academy as part of a reorganization plan of the United States foreign service.

Enactment of the China trade act.

Abolition of double taxation to exempt American investments in foreign countries from domestic income tax.

E. R. Fanchier, governor of the Fourth federal reserve bank, in proposing a vote of thanks to James A. Farrell, chairman of the council and president of the United States Steel corporation, declared that the organization largely came into existence through "the knowledge, foresight, and effort of Mr. Farrell."

Mr. Fancher predicted that the deliberations of the convention would receive world-wide attention.

BY THE SHADE OF HIS WHISKERS HE ISN'T O'CONNOR

It sure was a hair raising experience. Detectives Sheehy and Doyle had arrested a man they believed was "Tommy" O'Connor, but he insisted his name was Maxwell McArthur and that he lived at 5311 Dorchester avenue. He had a black streak of mustache where O'Connor had a red one—that was the only difference.

"Simple," said Sheehy. "He's dyed his soup strainer."

The detective caught a hair and yanked it out. The prisoner winced.

"It is O'Connor," said Sheehy. Then he pulled another hair. "It ain't O'Connor."

The detectives continued plucking hairs as though they were playing "He loves me, he loves me not," with the petals of a daisy.

They decided finally that he wasn't O'Connor.

FILM BEATS BOOK IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL: EDISON

New York, May 7.—Substitution of motion pictures for books in the nation's elementary schools would in twenty years bring about an advancement of ten centuries in civilization, Thomas A. Edison said today.

The scientist declared present primary school systems were poor and unattractive to children. "The remedy," he said, "is to eliminate boresome books and teach with motion pictures. This is a more vivid, more compelling method of holding a child's attention.'

Mr. Edison's criticism of primary schools was given to qualify a previous statement that after a series of examinations of college men, applicants for positions in his plant, he had found them amazingly ignorant. The fault, he said, was not in the colleges, nor the men; their early education had been poor.

Hughes to Report on Oil Well Conditions Soon

Washington, D. C., May 7.—Secretary Hughes advised Chairman Porter of the house foreign affairs committee today that he would forward, at the earliest possible moment, full information as to the condition of oil fields in Mexico and Central America sought under a resolution by Mr. Porter introduced in view of published reports that the fields were going dry and that salt water was causing considerable damage in some wells.

Evanston Man Elected U. of Illinois Union Chief

Urbana, Ill., May 7.—[Special.]—Dr. James A. McDonald of Evanston was elected president of the Illinois union at the University of Illinois today. R. J. Malcolmson of Urbana was named vice president and R. H. Gansberger, 5225 Dorchester avenue, Chicago, secretary.

KIWANIS CLUB TO GET CHARTER.

Rogers Park business men have organized a Kiwanis club and will receive their charter at a banquet in the Sheridan Plaza hotel Wednesday night. The North Shore Kiwanis club will tender the banquet.

NO RED CULTS AT VALPARAISO U., OFFICIALS STATE

Valparaiso, Ind., May 7.—C. Nash Jeffrey, president of Valparaiso university, and the trustees issued a statement today denying charges that "bolshevism, communism, and other cults" exist at the institution. These charges were made April 25 by Daniel Russell Hodgdon, retiring president.

"The most convincing proof," said President Jeffrey's denial, "is that the federal government has this week entered into contract to send hundreds of ex-service men here for special training. Nearly 200 ex-service men have been in attendance during the last year."

The trustees' letter said the board had requested Dr. Hodgdon's resignation in a resolution April 23.

NEGRO STEALS BRIGHT RUGS.

A Negro with a trailing black overcoat and black slouch hat helped himself to three brightly colored rugs valued at $50, which Mrs. Albert Erickson of 6967 Eberhart avenue had hung out to air yesterday.

SOVIET RUSSIANS STILL STRIVE FOR WORLD UPHEAVAL

RIGA, Letvia, May 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—For the first time since the promulgation of the reforms instituted in soviet Russia by Nikolai L. Lenin, independent sources have reported to American and other foreign representatives in the Baltic states that conditions in Russia are improving, and that the concessions are having some effect.

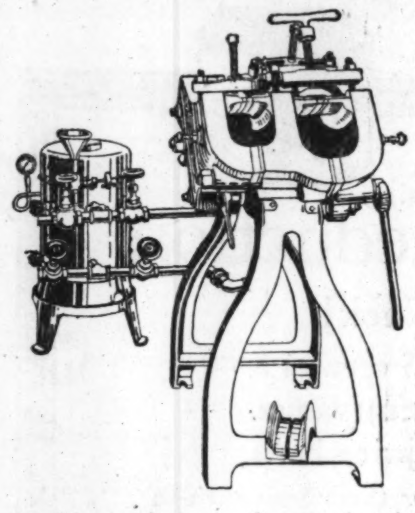
It is understood here these reports, declaring the population to be quieting down, have just been forwarded to Washington.

At the same time, however, there are persistent reports that the third internationale leaders, whether independently or with the consent of Lenin, are redoubling their propaganda for a world revolution, utilizing the soviet legations in the Baltic and other states in which the bolshevik government has been recognized, as the bases of their agents.

Each of these legations has a personnel three times as large as almost any other legations in these capitals.

LEARN TIRE REPAIRING

A Tire Famine Is Fast Approaching



It is a fact that car owners have not traded in their automobiles so readily this year as heretofore, and, therefore, have not received a new set of tires which accompany each new car. This means that there will be a tremendous demand for tire replacements, but as the manufacturers of tires in the majority of cases have been unable to finance the production of new tires, there will be an enormous demand for tire repairing and retreading. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY. Experienced tire repair men will be in demand the country over, and their wages will be high. The owners of tire repair shops will reap a golden harvest, and the tire repair industry in general will boom as never before. TIRE REPAIRING IS NOT DIFFICULT TO LEARN. We can teach you this profitable and fascinating business in less than three weeks in the largest and best equipped school in the country.

You can enter this school absolutely free of charge, and we also have a proposition whereby we pay you as you learn. Call any time, day or evening, and let us show you a modern model tire repair shop in operation.

In the Hardest Market in Years
The Haynes Scores Greatest Success

states Alton G. Seiberling, Vice President and General Manager
The Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Indiana

This is the greatest year the Haynes has ever known. It is far exceeding last year and the year before, when production alone measured the volume of sales. That was a "sellers' market," and little if any work was necessary to sell a car.

To-day things are different. People are scrutinizing their purchases. They are insisting that every dollar shall buy its full value.

And to-day the sales of Haynes cars are exceeding those of last year by one-third. The volume of sales is 133⅓ per cent. of any previous year. So great is the demand for the Haynes that to-day in our big factories at Kokomo we are employing 16 per cent. more men than ever before, even in the big rush days of last year and the previous one.

There is just one big impressive reason for this. When anybody sees the Haynes and studies it until he knows its worth he wants it. The Haynes 50—the smaller and lighter six-cylinder, five-passenger touring car introduced the first of the year—has swept the country. Never before was a motorist offered such value. When you realize that it is on a par in quality and workmanship with the larger Haynes models you sense the extreme desirability of the car.

Although we had prepared for a large volume of orders, the demand is already so great that deliveries are apt to be delayed. We urge you to select your Haynes now so that you may have it in good time.

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS

Again the Lincoln Shows its Prowess

IN 48 MINUTES LESS than the fastest Chicago-New York train on the Pennsylvania Railroad travels from East Liberty (Pittsburgh) to Harrisburg, Pa., a Lincoln standard touring car driven by Robert P. McCurdy, and carrying three other persons, covered the 210 miles thru the mountains in the amazing time of 4 hours and 53 minutes.

LELAND-BUILT LINCOLN

The high rate of speed attained was 76 miles per hour and at one time the car was held at 72 miles per hour for 20 miles.

Only tourists who have traveled the Lincoln Highway in Pennsylvania from Pittsburgh to Chambersburg can fully appreciate what this performance really means.

They know that it is nearly all up or down the mountains with but few stretches of straightaway for any considerable distance.

They know that no ordinary car will mount the abrupt and long ascents without change of gear.

They know that no ordinary brakes will meet the emergencies and no ordinary car hold the sharp and winding curves at the pace at which the Lincoln had to travel.

Like the recent record from Los Angeles to Bishop, 285 miles thru the mountains of California, when the Lincoln cut train time in less than half and beat a former motor car record by 2 hours and 57 minutes, this new achievement is but another demonstration of the Lincoln's superior roading capabilities.

WHAT AILS OLD GOTHAM? STATE MEANS TO LEARN

Legislature to Turn X-Ray on Hylan Rule.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—A legislative committee, named at the session just ended, has selected its pilots preparatory to getting to work to find out what ails the biggest municipal machine in the country.

They're going to get some expert municipal mechanics, auditors, and the like, let everybody "look over" the engine, and try particularly to find out just why it takes such an alarming supply of gas and oil to make the thing run.

Of course, they've got suspicion that somebody has taken the engine all apart and thrown a wrench or two into transmission gears or left off a carbureter or spark plug.

"Somebody," of course, centers around Mayor Hylan and his aids. Former senator E. R. Brown was chosen today chief counsel for the legislative committee and Senator Schuyler M. Meyer, author of the bill creating the committee, was named chairman.

"Nonpolitical Motives."

In a statement they outlined "patriotic" and "nonpolitical" motives. The committee is composed of fifteen—five senators, six assemblymen, and the majority and minority leaders of both houses.

Backers of the Hylan administration, particularly the Hearst newspapers, have been devoting much space and many cartoons in an attempt to show that the committee is a legislative expedition of "upstate" intruders with a $100,000 expense account.

Critics of the Hylan administration, on the other hand, figure it will be money mighty well spent if the committee takes some of the high cost out of municipal government and "shows up" the Hylan administration.

"Hate to Do It, bu"—

As for scandals and "muckraking," Chief Counsel Brown's statement reads:

Of course, I dislike those things which reflect upon the city of New York. It happens frequently, however, that in the performance of a great duty of this kind, it is necessary to reveal to the public the conditions that exist in a given case before you can satisfy the public that legislation should be enacted to cure it."

Hylan supporters say the legislative inquiry is nothing but an attempt by Republicans, headed by Gov. Miller, to attempt to discredit a Democratic administration as run by Hylan, backed by Hearst.

Hylan presumably will be a candidate for reëlection next November.

On the other hand, critics of Hylan say it will be a really constructive inquiry, that it is no petty graft hunt, and cite the fact that the committee must report to the charter revision committee in the fall before any report is given to the legislature.

No Graft Sensations Expected.

Republican leaders frankly do not expect to unearth any graft sensations.

A statement in the New York Times explains where Hylan's administration "will be most subject to attack, as critics see it." The article says:

"Hylan, as a candidate, ran on a platform which alternated planks of abuse of the Mitchel administration with planks of promise for the Hylan administration. He made the following accusations against the administration of his predecessor, the late John Purroy Mitchel:

"1. Dishonest extravagance, for his final budget of $238,000,000.

"2. Selling out the people to the railroads in the matter of Death avenue and the west side problem.

"3. Criticism of garbage disposal plant on Staten island.

"4. Extravagance and worse in the purchase of the courthouse site in Manhattan.

"What happened?

"Mr. Hylan's first yearly budget exceeded the final and largest one of the previous administration by $10,000,000, his second by $25,000,000, his third by $107,000,000. And, with all that, the board of education is short $20,000,000 of the sum it admittedly needs.

"The railroads' occupation of the streets is still undisputed. Death avenue remains a menace; Riverside drive is, as always, the—if one might be permitted—center of ugliness.

"Barren island came to life again; the Staten island plant was destroyed; the old, primitive, unpleasant method of towing garbage out to sea and dumping it has been revived. Ex-Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein avers it is possible to derive sufficient revenue from the salvage of the city's waste to pay for disposing of it. This, of course, is now lost—and for each tow of garbage the O'Brien Brothers Towing company, Inc., receives $300.

"Was the courthouse site sold and the proceeds turned into the city treasury?

"First, the mayor filled the site with ashes. These ashes are now being removed at the city's expense for $5.70 a cubic yard."

Then There's the Police.

Leonard Wallstein, counsel to the Citizens' Union and the Lockwood committee, will be one of the chief investigators. The Times article quotes Mr. Wallstein as showing gross extravagance and glaring errors in estimates of court house construction.

Then there's the police department. Hylan, according to critics, established a police regime which persistently and continually asserted there has been no "crime wave."

"Mayor Hylan approves of making use of the 'L' and subway," said a critic today. "He is the author of a statement on extravagance of officials in the use of automobiles.

"For his own use he has two Packard twin sixes, a limousine and a touring car. Mayor Mitchell had one car for his personal use."

One of the problems for the legislative committee is to select a "leak proof" organization. They want a staff that will not "leak" at the joints whenever the committee comes upon something of importance which the committee wishes to keep under cover, more particularly from such offices as may come under fire.

Preliminary work, it is thought, will be completed by June 1 and the investigation will then get under full swing.

BLUE EYES AREN'T, PROFESSORS OF TWO UNIVERSITIES SAY

PROF. M. D. HARKINS.

Blue eyes aren't. That's the conclusion of Prof. W. D. Harkins of the University of Chicago—or rather his corroboration of the conclusion of Prof. Bancroft of Cornell university. Prof. Bancroft gave the results of his researches in an address before the American Chemical society recently at Rochester.

"There is no blue pigment," said Prof. Harkins, "the appearance of blue is caused by bubbles of air.

"There is nothing more in blue eyes than colloidal masses or very minute particles of air, which scatter the light. The same thing is true of blue feathers of birds, and the blue so-called color in fish. We ordinarily think of 'color' as due to pigment, or coloring matter distributed in the substance, and there is no such coloring matter in the iris, the bird feathers, or the dermal coating of the fish."

ROBERTSON ASKS FOR HEALTH HEAD IN EVERY COUNTY

Points to Chicago Record in Urging New Law.

In a communication headed "'Thou shalt not kill' either by a sin of commission or omission" and sent to each member of the house of representatives, Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson yesterday appealed for support of a bill providing for a health commissioner in each county. An excerpt from the letter reads:

"Is it wise to say we cannot afford to spend $250,000 a year in Illinois to save 7,000 or 8,000 lives? There are those who state they do not believe human lives can be saved by purifying the water and milk suplies. Fortunately, this is not a debatable matter.

"Prior to the time that all Chicago's milk supply was pasteurized she lost more than 500 children each year from scarlet fever; since Chicago has pasteurized all of its milk it has lost but 200 each year, although the city grows at the rate of 50,000 per year.

"The claim is made that this would be a political organization. Every effort was made to see to it that it will not be. The bill provides in effect that the executive officers of the county, the county supervisors, be they Republican or Democratic, coöperate with the county medical society, which is made up of physicians from every party, to select the best available man in every party."

Defeat of the bill will virtually condemn thousands to death, the letter warns.

GEN. BELL TO LECTURE.

S. infantry) at the armory, 15th street and Michigan boulevard. The Rev. Rufus A. White will relate his experiences in the devastated regions of France. The speakers will be introduced by Maj. Gen. STRAUSS TO MAKE A 3 MONTHS' TOUR IN UNITED STATES

RICHARD STRAUSS.
[Photo by Meyer, Berlin.]

New York, May 7.—It is announced that Richard Strauss, composer of the operas, "Salome," "Elektra," and "Rosenkavalier," will visit the United States in October. Milton Diamond, who has made arrangements for a three months' tour, made the announcement. He said Strauss will conduct several orchestral concerts and plans to conduct performances of his operas by the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera companies.

GOTHAM-CHICAGO PLANE DELAYED AT CLEVELAND

Motor trouble prevented Ralph C. Diggins' five passenger Ansaldo airplane from arriving in Chicago yesterday. The big ship flew as far as Cleveland, and there developed trouble. It will leave Cleveland early this morning and is expected in Chicago before noon.

Aboard the ship, which left Hazelhurst field, Long Island, at dawn yesterday, were Lloyd Beautau, pilot; Charles Dickinson, president of the Dickinson Seed company; Miss Jesse Bradley, an artist-aviator; Alfred Brick, a moving picture operator, and Ralph Diggins, owner of the ship.

They are carrying a message from Mayor Hylan of New York to Mayor Thompson. Fred Rochester, representing Morris & Co., will leave Ashburn field this morning to meet and welcome the big ship into the air port.

The plane made the trip to Cleveland in less than six hours.

Poses au Naturel While His Clothes Dry; $5 Fine

Everett Snyder went into a saloon at Polk and Clark streets, washed three vests, two coats, two sweaters, and some other clothes. Then he leaned up against the outside to wait until his duds were dry. Crowds gathered to see the statue. They decided it was not art. Somebody call a cop and the cop called a wagon. Judge Haas fined Snyder $5. He lives at 2017 Madison street.

GREAT NORTH CAPE CRUISE THE FEATURE OF 1921

RAYMOND-WHITCOMB REPORT THE RAPID FILLING OF THE FINEST CRUISE OF ITS KIND

Raymond-Whitcomb report the rapid filling of their great North Cape Cruise, believed by travel experts to be the most interesting trip planned by that famous organization in all its 42 years of successful service in assuring "The Best in Travel" to the highest class of Americans. It is proving to be the travel feature of 1921.

A Direct Cruise

Publications now being distributed give details and itinerary of the cruise in the palatial P. & O. Liner "The Emperor of India" (Kaisar-i-Hind), sailing from New York and visiting Seven Countries, including Iceland and the Land of the Midnight Sun—the first cruise in recent years to sail from America to those lands and waters of the Vikings.

The securing of that ship was in itself a notable event. The P. & O. boats have never before passed to other control, except to the British Government in war-time. None has ever before visited America on an errand of peace and enjoyment.

On to the Midnight Sun

Leaving New York June 25, St. Johns, the picturesque capital of the independent colony of Newfoundland, is visited. Across the fishing banks and the Arctic Circle, Iceland, "the Isle of Magic," is reached and encircled. Revkjavik, the quaint capital, is a port of call.

Then the great and ideally comfortable cruiser has a week of the Midnight Sun; the climax of its splendors is the view from the summit of the great North Cape itself.

The log of the cruise is then like a saga, with stops at Hammerfest, the outpost of civilization, the Lofoten Islands, the fjords and glaciers of the Norseland, Lyngen, Diegermulen, Trondhjem, Molde, Merok, Gudvangen and Bergen herself, once a queen in the Hanseatic League. Unrivaled quaintness and unsurpassed seascape, landscape and glacier views afford a panorama unrivaled by any cruise that has been offered.

The Return to America

Then Scotland, Holland, and Belgium are visited en route to London. The Cruise members may return to America with passenger accommodations reserved or may continue their rest and recreation by tours through the British Isles or to France, Spain, Italy, and Switzerland.

Veteran travelers recognize that the North Cape Cruise is more than the first chance to visit new places in guaranteed comfort—they appreciate what it means to have the cruise under the management of Raymond & Whitcomb Co.

Without Worry or Trouble

Travelers of experience are proving their appreciation by joining the cruise, the number of bookings to date being unprecedented. They know it means that they go on board and have no moment of worry from that instant until they land at home. Raymond-Whitcomb themselves have taken over every detail and trouble. All expenses of cruise and shore excursions are fixed in advance.

Complete details of this remarkable cruise may be obtained at the local office of Raymond & Whitcomb Co., 112 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Telephone State 6396.—Adv.

GRAINS REACT TO RAIN REPORTS; PRICES DECLINE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

A heavily overbought condition was disclosed yesterday in the grain markets. Commission houses were free sellers of wheat as the result of highly beneficial rains over the southwest and west, where they were much needed. Prices declined 3⅛c to 7c, with a lack of support, and closed with a net loss of 6¾c on May, while July was off 3¼c. Other grains were influenced by the action of wheat and closed with corn and oats off ⅞c to 1⅛c, and rye 3¾c to 4½c.

A light trade was on in provisions, with the local element on the selling side. Final trades showed net losses of 40c on pork, 15@20c on lard and 20c on short ribs.

Grain prices were on the upgrade the greater part of the week, with wheat in the lead, but the finish was on a good reaction from the top, with wheat up 6@10½c, corn ⅝@2⅜c, and oats ¼@1⅜c, May leading in all grains. Rye gained 5¼@9¼c. Provisions advanced readily and closed with pork up $1.40, lard 2½@20c, and short ribs 35@40c higher, as compared with a week ago.

Market Time Changes.

Sentiment among commission houses and local traders underwent considerable change as the result of the rains in the southwest and at no time was there the free buying which has been such a feature of late. The technical position of the market had been greatly weakened by the recent bulge and it was in no condition to withstand any great increase in selling pressure.

The forecast was for showers over the entire winter and spring grain belt and crop reports showed considerable improvement, in many instances in the southwest a careful examination showing that so far there had been no material damage, and with rains a good yield could be obtained.

A report that England was trying to resell wheat was responsible for the May leading the decline. Messages from New York said English buyers had resold 80,000 bu bought for nearby shipment and replaced with purchases for deferred shipment at lower prices. Argentine grain for May shipment was quoted at equal to $1.74 per bu c. i. f. Europe or about 18c higher than American hard winter via the Gulf, while export bids for deferred shipment received by local houses were 9c out of line. The trade also had reports that Omaha and Minneapolis had sold wheat to come to Chicago.

Export demand from abroad was slow with no sales of consequence reported, European buyers apparently taking the Argentine on account of the great difference in price. The country sold old wheat freely overnight and premiums here on spot and to arrive were easier.

Rush to Sell May Corn.

A rush to sell May corn at the opening carried the price off 2c to 58¼c, or 4c under the July. The wide difference led cash houses to buy May and sell July and the spread narrowed quickly. Sentiment was rather bearish, due to the decline in wheat and reports that planting would be fairly general next week in the west with favorable weather. It is already under way in some sections of Illinois, Iowa and Missouri. It is expected local stocks will show a decrease of more than 2,000,000 bu for the week, as receipts were 1,732,000 bu, and shipments 4,368,000 bu. Country offerings were not large.

Buying of September oats by a strong commission house was a feature in that market and while prices averaged lower the undertone was not as weak as in wheat. Crop reports were more favorable on account of the rains, which will check deterioration in the dry sections of the southwest.

Scattered liquidation was on in rye, with the bulk of the trade in buying September against sales of July wheat. Support came mainly from shorts in the May.

Weakness in grains more than offset a stronger hog market and provisions showed an easier undertone, with local traders on the selling side. Cash trade was reported as quiet. Packing hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregate 1,108,000, compared with 938,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No export sales of wheat were reported at the seaboard due to cheaper offerings from Argentina. Bids for deferred shipments were claimed to be as much as 9c out of line. Seaboard exporters took 360,000 bu corn at Chicago for shipment via Montreal and charters were for 150,000 bu at 9c to that port.

Domestic shipping sales were 20,000 bu wheat, 100,000 bu corn, 110,000 bu oats, and 2,000 bu barley. Charters were for 400,000 bu oats to Buffalo. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 119,000 bu corn, 297,000 bu oats, and 50,000 lbs lard.

Premiums on red winter wheat at Chicago were easy, hard winters off 1c and spring 1@2c, with a rather slow demand. No. 2 red sold at 5½c over May and No. 1 hard at 12@13c over. Receipts, 50 cars. No. 1 hard to arrive, 5 day shipment, brought 5½c over May, while 9c over was obtainable for grain in transit.

Demand for cash wheat in outside markets was slow, with St. Louis off 3@7c, Kansas City 5@7c, and Omaha 9c. At Minneapolis premiums were unchanged to 2c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were liberal, receipts being 192 cars, and sample values were 1c lower at the last, with No. 2 mixed 1c over, No. 2 yellow 1½c, and No. 2 white 1¼c over the May. Outside markets generally were 1@2c lower.

Cash oats declined ½@1c and closed easy, with No. 2 whites sold mainly on the basis of ½c under the July. Receipts, 68 cars.

GRAIN RECEIPTS INCREASED

An increase of 648,000 bu was made in grain receipts at Chicago last week, the aggregate being 3,585,000 bu. They were 1,960,000 bu more than last year, and 309,000 bu above the five year average. Wheat receipts of 360,000 bu increased 92,000 bu. Corn showed 1,732,000 bu, with a gain of 500,000 bu; oats, 1,321,000 bu, or 33,000 bu over the previous weeks. Rye arrivals were 15,000 bu and barley 158,000 bu. All grains showed gains over last year, that in wheat being 37,000 bu; corn, 1,283,000 bu, and oats, 750,000 bu, while rye and barley combined fell off 100,000 bu.

Primary arrivals of wheat were 5,135,000 bu, corn 3,615,000 bu, oats 2,894,000 bu, and rye [illegible]. Gains for the week were 836,000 bu corn and 251,000 bu oats, while wheat decreased 60,000 bu. Arrivals of wheat were the largest at [illegible] were the best in five years except in 1918. Wheat receipts increased 728,000 bu, corn 1,453,000 bu, and oats 210,000 bu over last year.

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

The break of 9c in May and cash wheat from the high point of Friday came as the result of better crop reports, due to rains and to heavy selling by a half dozen large local professionals who were taking profits. They did not like the decline in cash premiums and, with the bull edge off the crop news, they were disposed to sell. The 30c in two weeks made it attractive to holders. Another depressing factor was the selling against the weekly indemnities, which showed a good profit. The trade has been more nearly evened up in May, and, while there is a large holding, sharp fluctuations are to be expected. Those who have been long July were moderate sellers and expect to get their grain back at a lower price.

A government crop report for May is due in Chicago at 2:15 p. m. Monday. It will give the revised acreage of winter wheat and the condition of wheat and rye, also percentage of spring plowing. Estimates on winter wheat crop are 635,000,000 to 645,000,000 bu. Last month was 621,000,000 bu, and last year's harvest 577,000,000 bu. Estimated condition is 87.5 to 90. In April it was 91. The par basis is advanced about a half a bushel per acre. Loss of acreage is estimated at around 3 per cent, ranging from 400,000 to 2,000,000 acres.

Indications are for an increase in the wheat receipts. Most of the wheat is going through from the southwest to the Atlantic seaboard for export. Out of the fifty cars in yesterday, one house had forty-four cars billed from Kansas City, lake and rail through Chicago to the seaboard. There are said to be 100 cars coming in on the C. & E. I. railroad for export. The lake and rail rate is 2@3c per 100 lbs less than the all rail rate, an important saving.

"Wheat and oats made good progress since I was here last," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Lincoln, Neb. "Condition in this territory is uniformly good. Corn planting quite general. Soil in fine condition."

"The Kansas wheat crop," said a Kansas City man, "is in the same condition it usually is at this season of the year. There are many years when I have seen it look better and turn out a poor crop, while there are times when it has looked poorer with a better yield. It is difficult to tell anything about the Kansas crop at this time."

A reduction of 3c per 100 lbs on export grain from Iowa and Missouri river points through Chicago became effective May 2. J. S. Brown, transportation manager for the Chicago Board of Trade, is working for a reduction of 3c on grain from Illinois points for export.

A good part of the early selling of May and July corn yesterday was attributed to a house that has been doing a large export business in that grain of late.

British commissions stocks of wheat in store at Liverpool and Manchester aggregate 2,836,000 bu, compared with 3,024,000 bu the previous week.

A Kansas City exporter wired that he was buying cash wheat yesterday at 17c over May against 23c over three days ago. Bids to the country, track Texas City or Galveston, have been reduced to 19c over Chicago May for 10 day shipment.

Corn shipments by lake from Chicago last week were 3,925,000 bu, and of all grains by lake 4,931,000 bu, including 663,000 bu oats and 271,000 bu wheat. Receipts of corn for the week were 1,732,000 bu, and shipments 4,368,000 bu. Oats shipments were 1,477,000 bu, while wheat shipments of 345,000 bu were 15,000 bu less than arrivals.

"We are getting closer to the point where flour buyers will come in on a liberal scale, due to their limited supplies, but we have not yet reached that stage," said Charles Sincere & Co. "Therefore, an increase in the country movement would have a temporary bearish influence. It is also a fact that the crop damage news is not serious enough to stimulate general buying of July wheat, and in view of the rapid advance it would be well to await a further reaction before making investment purchases."

RAILROAD NOTES

The treasury department has paid $2,000,000 to the Illinois Central railroad on a partial payment certificate issued by the interstate commerce commission under the guaranty provisions of the transportation act. Guaranty payments were approved by the commission for $1,500,000 to the American Railway Express company, $175,000 to the Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis railroad, $105,500 to the New Orleans, Great Northern railroad, $45,000 to the Vermont Valley railroad, and $8,800 to the Marion and Rye Valley railroad.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad reports total cars loaded on the system and received from connections for the month of April as 124,940, as against 145,261 in April, 1920, a decrease of 20,321 cars, or 14 per cent. The coal movement decreased 25.7 per cent, stock 21 per cent, and miscellaneous 12.9 per cent. Grain showed a gain of 33.3 per cent. The Chicago and Northwestern reports 123,531 cars handled during April, compared with 135,141 for April last year, a decrease of 11,310 cars.

The Missouri Pacific railroad has purchased the Little Rock and Argenta railroad, an industrial line connecting the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific at Little Rock with Picron and Factoria, for $50,000.

The Rock Island announces a new time card which will become effective May 25. Under its schedules the Rocky Mountain limited will shorten its present running time, leaving the La Salle Street station at 10 a. m. as at present, but arriving at Denver 35 minutes earlier and at Colorado Springs 30 minutes earlier than under the present card. The Colorado Express will leave Chicago at 10 p. m. and will be operated on the same schedule as at present.

Short stock quotable 50@75c below above quotations.

Small offerings and a good demand found the top and average prices of hogs to $8.80 and $8.50, respectively, the average being 5c above Friday and the highest in nearly three weeks. Owing to the limited supply, more than half the packers remained out of the trade.

Due to the strike earlier in the week, arrivals of hogs for the six days were cut to 136,300 and the shipments to 16,500, the smallest number sent from Chicago any week since last October. The estimated average weight for the week at 227 lbs was the same as previous week and 4 lbs lighter than a year ago.

Cattle Trade Closes Weak.

General cattle trade closed weak, yet the average price of good beef steers for the week advanced 50c to $8.15, with top offerings that much above the previous week at $9.50.

Good buying on shipping account and export orders for 2,500 cattle helped the trade. During the last two weeks more than 5,000 1,200@1,400 lb fat beeves were sent abroad from Chicago.

About a third of the 99,200 sheep and lambs received during the week were taken by outside buyers, which helped trade conditions, advancing the best aged lambs to $11.40, the highest since last January.

Receipts at Chicago for next Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 44,000 hogs and 21,000 sheep, against 21,740 cattle, 43,340 hogs and 7,383 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 60,000 cattle, 165,000 hogs and 80,000 sheep.

Probable receipts of hogs for next Monday are variously estimated from 55,000 to 60,000. R. W. Oake marked 50,000, Edward Morris 52,000, F. W. Waddell 47,000, H. O. Booth 50,000, E. R. Gentry and W. H. Overman 46,000, J. M. Waters 43,000, and G. M. Nicoll 35,000.

Can't Stop Trading in "Futures."

The people who are trying to stop dealing on the Chicago Board of Trade in contracts for the future delivery of grain confuse cause and effect. Their efforts are doomed to failure. The most they can accomplish is to drive from Chicago a business which is second only to the stockyards in making the name of the city known all over the world. The business will go on just the same. It is a necessity to commerce, in the commodity of first importance to civilized people.

When a grain merchant in Liverpool buys a cargo of wheat in Australia for shipment to England he immediately sells short an equal quantity of grain on the Chicago Board of Trade. This is to insure him against loss in case wheat should decline in price during the months of the voyage.

Similarly when a miller in central Illinois, where wheat grows, buys a few thousand bushels from farmers he sells an equal amount short to insure against a slump in the market before he can make the wheat into flour and sell it. Neither the merchant nor the miller could conduct his business safely without the possibility of "selling short."

Chicago has had this world business for many years. If it is driven away it will move to Milwaukee. There is a board now operating there, having an excellent building and ample telegraph facilities. Members of the Chicago board have been buying memberships there so they can move at once if the state of Illinois orders them out. If congress should order them out of the country Winnipeg would welcome them. If it is conceivable that short sighted Canadians might finally expel them from there, the business would find a safe haven in Liverpool or London.

Whether the Board of Trade operations actually decrease or increase the average price received by the farmers for their wheat is unknown. An argument can be made on either side of the question, but it would be futile. The one certainty in the whole matter is that if the business is suppressed in Chicago it will continue as usual, but in some other place. Now it brings renown and money to Chicago. Any other city would welcome both.

Brief Answers.

E. G.—The Marvel Tire and Rubber company's statement of Feb. 28 last, filed at Springfield, shows $114,590 of preferred stock and $150,000 of common outstanding. Assets were principally patents. The company had not yet begun operating on a commercial basis.

E. E. Bonaparte, Ia.—The Sierra Pacific Electric company earns its interest charges about four times over. The 7 per cent notes maturing next February are a sound investment.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Print cloths were firmer, with a higher tendency in some constructions. Sheetings for the manufacturing trades were broader call. Fine goods were barely steady. Fruit of the loom 4-4 bleached cottons have been withdrawn from sale, the product having been taken up to August. Knit goods for immediate delivery were in better demand. Hosiery continues steady, wool goods quiet and firm, and burlaps steady.

SUGAR MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Raw Porto Ricos, 4.89c for centrifugal, Cubas at 3⅝c, cost and freight, equal to 4.89c for centrifugal. Raw futures closed 7@8 points higher; May, 3.88c; July, 3.98c; September, 4.03c; December, 3.77c. Refined ranged from 6.30c to 6.50c for fine granulated. Seasoned Bonds.

Inexperienced investors seem inclined to resent suggestions favorable to seasoned bonds paying a low rtae of interest, but selling at prices low enough to make their yield high. Such bonds have some advantages over new issues that pay a high rate.

First, the mere fact that they are well seasoned is a great advantage. When a new bond is sold it is given a rating based principally on what is expected to take place. The possibility always exists thta something may arise to disarrange well laid plans. The rating of the seasoned bond is based on some years of experience, during which any weaknesses that were hidden at first probably have been disclosed.

Second, the old bond has an advantage with respect to income taxes. As the law provides that the tax be withheld at the source, the investor pays only on the low rate of the bond, and not on the higher rate of its yield.

When, finally, he takes his profit on the principal, years in the future, the tax rate probably will be lower.

The new bond also has points of superiority. First, it offers a higher rate of immediate return. That is, it pays the full 7 or 8 per cent, beginning with the first coupon, instead of paying only part, and compelling the investor to wait till the bond matures or he sells it to get the rest. To some investors this is an important point. The new bond also offers greater possibilities of a speculative profit through increase in market value.

The question of which set of advantages is best is one for each investor to decide according to his individual needs.

We are recommending for CONSERVATIVE INVESTMENT
THREE SEASONED ISSUES of high grade FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS yielding as high as 9%

FIRST—A First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bond due in 1931, issued in 1911. Nearly one-third of the authorized issue has been paid off by the sinking fund. Assets $5,600 for each $1,000 bond of this issue. The bonds are further guaranteed by a corporation having assets twelve times the amount of the outstanding bonds.

A $1,000 bond of this issue bearing 6% interest per annum, payable semi-annually, can be purchased for about $825, yielding over 8¾% for a ten-year period.

A well-protected, conservative and seasoned investment.

SECOND—An issue of high-grade Sinking Fund Gold Bonds due in 1929; outstanding since 1909, which has been substantially reduced by the operation of the sinking fund. Through a merger of interests effected in 1914 these bonds have been assumed by one of the largest corporations of its character in the world which affords additional protection to the investor.

A dependable and well-seasoned bond with an unusually high rating, bearing interest at 6% per annum and callable at 107. A limited amount of these securities are available at a discount substantially below par to yield about 9%.

THIRD—An unusually well-secured First Mortgage Bond on highly valuable properties of a successful corporation with particularly large equities and the strongest kind of a sinking fund, guaranteed absolutely as to principal, interest and sinking fund payments, as well as to all of the covenants of the mortgage through endorsement on each bond by a corporation having assets upwards of $50,000,000. The bonds would rank as a high-grade investment even without this guarantee. The guarantee adds to their attractiveness.

A $1,000 bond of this issue bearing 6% annual interest, payable semi-annually, can be purchased at a discount of $160 below the face value thereof, to yield nearly 9% until 1929, when the bond is due. An unusually substantial return for a security so well protected.

Present-day investment conditions solely, make possible such opportunities as are presented in these offerings. Each issue of security, briefly described above, has been outstanding for a period long enough to test its stability. They are proven bonds. The purchaser of a 6% bond is protected against early call of his securities, as well as possessing the advantages so well outlined in the Investors' Guide Department of this paper, as shown above.

Circulars descriptive of any of these issues, which we recommend as high-grade investments, will be forwarded on request.

U. S. COURT BARS INTERVENTION IN MAXWELL SALE

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—United States District Judge Arthur J. Tuttle this afternoon denied a petition of first preferred stockholders of the Maxwell Motor company for leave to intervene in the sale of the company, set for next Tuesday. The court some time ago appointed a receiver for the company and provided for the sale.

The petitioners asked to intervene on the grounds that the proposed merger of the Maxwell and Chalmers Motor company would take away their holdings and give them only a small share of stock of the new company. The court ruled that such a step would prevent reorganization of the company and thereby endanger the future of the concern.

Attorneys for the reorganization interests argued that the reorganization plan was fair, giving all classes of shareholders representation in the new company and making it possible to procure funds with which to liquidate more than $15,000,000 indebtedness of the concern and continue in business.

The petition of Holmes Jones of Wilmington, Del., asking a stay in the sale pending settlement of litigation in Delaware courts, was dismissed by Judge Tuttle on the ground it contained improper statements.

Attorneys for the first preferred stockholders obtained permission from Judge Tuttle to file a new petition for intervention at the time of the court's confirmation of Thursday's sale.

Charleston, W. Va., May 7.—A charter authorizing a capital stock of $20,000,000 was issued by the secretary of state today to the Maxwell Motor corporation, a Michigan concern.

Under the charter the corporation may issued 200,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 par value and 800,000 shares of common without par value. The company is authorized to manufacture and deal in automobiles, motorcycles, motor trucks and other vehicles.

The incorporators are Thomas C. P. Martin, Thomas Dougherty, Henry H. Dirom, Charles A. Springstead, and John Q. A. Smith, all of New York. The company paid a license tax of $7,428 into the state treasury. An office will be maintained by the company in Charleston.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

The local unlisted securities market continues to show strength. Butler Brothers selling as high as 37, closing easier at 35¾@36¼, a net gain of a point and a half. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was rather quiet, although firm, and was traded in between 38@40. Wahl preferred declined a point to 85@87, and Moline Plow preferred was weak, losing five points in selling at 25. Creamery Package was unchanged at 24@26. Goodyear Tire and Rubber issues showed strength, sales ranging on the common between 10½@12, closing at 12@13, while the preferred changed hands at 35, closing with stock offered at this price and bids of 34½. Glidden advanced sharply to sales at 18½; stock was wanted at this price, with offerings at 20 at the close.

Motor stocks were without feature, Continental declining to sales at 7, a loss of ⅜. Packard common at 11¼ and Paige-Detroit at 21@22¼, were both unchanged. Reo was quiet, sales ranging between 21@21½. McCord common declined fractionally to 9½ bid, with offerings at 10. Stearns was steady, stock being wanted at 29½ with offerings at 30½.

American Light and Traction common was traded in at 81½@82; preferred 81½@82¼; Cities Service common 238@240; preferred 67@67½; Commonwealth Power common 10 @ 11; preferred 30½ @ 31; Northern States Power common 47@47½; preferred 80½@81½; Standard Gas common 12@12¼; preferred 35@35½; United Light common 25½@26; preferred 61@61½.

Interest in the local bond market was centered chiefly in the foreign government issues and the rails, resulting in general quotations being practically unchanged. The Goodyear 8's, however, were strong the forepart of the week selling as high as 102, closing at 101 bid, 101¾ asked, a net gain of a half point. Allied Packer 6's ranged between 43@46. They improved at the close to 44¼bid, 47 asked.

Local Traction issues were practically unchanged, although Chicago City Rails improved a quarter to 66¼ bid, 67 asked, and the Chicago Railways a half to 65½@66¼. The Chicago Railways Series A regained their loss of the previous week, closing at 47@48½.

In the public utilities group trading was confined almost entirely to People's Gas 5's, which were in demand and strong at 71⅞@72⅝. Commonwealth 5's and 7's were unchanged, the former being quoted 84¾@85 and the latter 99⅝@99¾.

The fractional declines of the previous week in the packing house issues were practically all regained, Armour 7's advancing to 96⅝ bid, 96⅞ asked, but the 4½'s were unchanged at 78½@79. Swift 6's improved a quarter to 99½@99¾, and the 7's one-eighth at 96Q@96Z. Cudahy 7's showed an advance of a half in closing at 98½@99¼. Morris 7's and National Leather 8's were both unchanged. Wilson first 6's were stronger and in demand at 88. The convertible 6's were unchanged at 82@83.

In the miscellaneous group the Sears-Roebuck issues were all better, the 1923's showing the greatest advance at 97@97½. The 1922's improved a point at 97½ bid, 98 asked, and 1921's were an eighth better at 99½@99¾. Diamond Match 7½'s continued to advance selling at 102½, closing at this price bid with offerings at 103.

Wanted
A Salesman With A Proved Record

We have a very attractive opening for a salesman who has at present a genuinely successful selling record. Our line is advertised in national magazines and is widely known. We are in one of the most highly competitive industries—sales do not come easily, but our commission arrangement is extremely attractive. Our best men will earn $12,000 to $15,000 this year. What we want is a first class salesman who likes to work hard and consistently when there is an opportunity, thus to produce big results for himself and the company. Permanent connection. We back up our men better than any other firm in our industry, concentrating on the retail trade. Our product, the Fyrac Spark Plug, has an unusual selling feature in its patented One-Inch Firing Surface. This is responsible for our growth in less than four years from 197th place to one of the leaders in the spark plug industry. If you have a real selling record and can prove it, phone Mr. A. B. Harris at La Salle Hotel Monday for appointment, or write Fyrac Manufacturing Co., Rockford, Ill.

EXCHANGE RATES OF ALLIES AGAIN HIT HIGH MARK

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

industrials	89.91	89.19	89.51	— .23

The New York Times.

New York, May 7.—[Special.]—A week unusually interesting for its occurrences on financial markets ended today with another vigorous advance in European exchange rates, with continued strength in the bond market and with the irregular movement which was to be expected at the week end in the price of stocks.

Sterling exchange reached $3.98⅞, a rate which has not been touched since April 9 of last year, and which was matched or exceeded on only three days in 1920. Exchange on France and Italy also rose to the present year's highest rate and, notwithstanding reaction before the close, the market's trend was unmistakable. The week's great strength of New York exchange on the markets of the entente powers indicates the belief of speculative markets that Germany will come to terms.

Chevrolet Cuts Prices.

On the stock exchange the natural week-end reaction was for a time somewhat emphasized today by news of a cut in prices by the Chevrolet Motor company. This caused declines in a number of stocks, but they were mostly shares of companies in that industry, the rest of the market holding firm and closing generally at fractional net advances. Comparison of this week's closing prices with those of last week shows a long list of striking gains; the advance as a whole being perhaps larger and better distributed than in any week since the first fortnight in January.

Compared with the year's low prices, generally reached in March or April, recovery of 8 to 10 points has occurred in many active shares, both railway and industrial. A fairly long list of industrial stocks reached the highest prices of 1921 to date. The same thing can be said of a smaller number of railway bonds, of nearly half the European government and municipal bonds dealt in on our stock exchange, and of the United States Victory 4¾ per cents.

Associated Banks Improve.

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks also was encouraging. Legal reserves increased $7,043,370, thereby overcoming the preceding week's deficit of $3,455,360 and reëstablishing an excess of $3,588,010, although this still is a purely nominal excess. This improvement was largely the result of the member banks increasing their reserves at the federal reserve bank by $5,240,000. Aggregate reserves expanded $5,116,000. Loans receded $30,753,000, while net demand and time deposits declined $14,-233,000 and $710,000 respectively. Government deposits declined $27,489,000. The figures follow:

FINANCIAL NOTES

Bradstreet's review points to constructive factors in basic conditions last week, including reduction of rediscount rates by the federal reserve banks, the Steel corporation's wage cut, the stronger market for foreign exchange and greatly improved railroad earnings for March, the latter being designated as a sign that real stabilization now has begun. Failures are placed at 277, compared with 351 in the preceding week and 113 in the corresponding week in 1920. Dun's review says the strengthening of sentiment on which business recuperation so largely depends has continued and confidence in gradual revival of activities finds more frequent expression. Failures are placed at 312, compared with 330 in the preceding week and 133 in the same week a year ago.

The directors of the Skelly Oil company have decided to pass the quarterly dividend on the stock. Distributions of 2 per cent have been made quarterly. The Porto Rican-American Tobacco company has passed the quarterly dividend of 3 per cent.

The Federal Sugar Refining company and Arbuckle Brothers have made another reduction in the price of refined sugar, cutting it from 6.80c to 6.40c a pound. The Federal company issued a statement declaring there need be no fear of a sugar shortage in the United States this year.

The Chevrolet Motor company has announced price reductions ranging from $160 to $180, the reductions amounting to approximately 21 1-3 per cent on the various models. It also was reported the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company will readjust its prices. Makers of the Oakland car are also announcing a price reduction.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending May 4, by 208 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregated $1,008,085,000, compared with $852,030,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 23 clearing houses amounted to $1,005,782,000, compared with $1,247,552,000 for the corresponding week last year.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Trading in Chicago stocks continued active in the week end session yesterday, but the trend of prices was lower in sympathy with the eastern market. Union Carbide led in activity and declined 1¼ points. Libby lost a minor fraction and Wrigley gained nearly a point. The packing house shares were quiet and weak, while the motor issues were dull and lower, with the exception of Yellow Manufacturing, which gained a point. On small sales Godchaux Sugar was up 4½ points, while Alfred Decker & Cohn was off a point. All other price changes were confined to fractions.

Real Engineering Service

Men we do business with like us first of all because we are thorough.

They soon find out that we are thinking for them and with them along constructive lines. They discover that we relieve them of a lot of troublesome details, and that while we work out many of their problems for them, we do not attempt to dictate policies or procedure.

We take what they know about their business, plus what we know about many others, and combine these in the most advantageous manner.

This is our conception of real engineering service, and it is the kind we deliver. If your factory is not large enough, or you want to make more goods at less cost, it will be worth your while to talk with one of our men.

ASCHERS' ROOSEVELT THEATRE

—in the very heart of Chicago—proves to all the people the superior strength, stability and conservatism of the financing done by H. O. STONE & CO. and the high degree of safety of the bonds we offer.

GO to the ROOSEVELT not merely for unsurpassed entertainment but to see for yourself the superior security offered for your savings and surplus by this old established investment House of H. O. STONE & CO.

Valued at $2,250,000, this classic theatre building and its ground constitute security for the bond issue of $1,000,000, each dollar invested in the bonds being protected by an actual property value of $2.25.

Securities offered on Loop buildings are usually leasehold loans. This issue is a direct closed first mortgage not only on the building and equipment but also on the LAND IN FEE.

THIS STATE STREET GROUND of more than 90 feet frontage is directly opposite Marshall Field's—in the busiest, most crowded section of Chicago—on the nationally famed street bearing the highest land values in the West.

Ascher Bros. paid for this ground $1,133,000—were actually offered $1,500,000.

As if the extraordinary security of this mortgage were not enough, Ascher Bros.—owners of more than thirty successful theaters—unconditionally guarantee the payment of principal and interest, the bonds being their personal obligation. The ROOSEVELT proves their prestige in the motion picture industry.

Estimate for yourself the earnings out of which the bondholders are to be paid. The seating capacity is 2,000. See the crowds at seven performances, seven days a week. Our estimate of earnings was $350,000 net. Ascher Bros. now estimate $450,000, or seven and a half times the greatest annual bond interest.

A few ROOSEVELT bonds, in amounts of $1,000 and $500 are still available, or can be obtained by us for those who specially desire this particular investment. But this issue simply typifies the security of every bond sold by H. O. STONE & CO. Call, write or telephone today for our offerings. Easy payments if you wish. Please ask for Publication T-58.

Order Your Holland Furnace Now Start Deferred Payments Sept. 1st.

The time to install your furnace is now. Don't wait until fall or winter when everybody will be putting in rush orders for a heating plant.

To make it easier for you the Holland Company has arranged a deferred payment plan through their branch offices whereby you can make a small payment now or when the furnace is delivered and begin to pay the balance in installments September first.

Frankly, the reason we make this offer now is because we realize that in the fall it will be impossible for our Holland branch experts to install enough plants to satisfy the demand at that time.

Learn Why the Holland Plan Saves You Money. Note the Original Design and Exclusive Improvements That Make the Holland a Better Furnace. Read How Expert Factory Branch Installation Guarantees You the Proper Circulation of Clean, Healthful Heat to Every Room in Your House

Why the Holland System Is Different and Better

The Holland warm air heating and circulating system is different from any furnace you have known. Its castings are heavier and are fitted closely without bolts. Its construction and correct installation provide a perfectly balanced circulation of properly warmed air through every part of the house.

Because of the air tight castings, the one-piece radiator (a) and the properly fitted pipes there are no leaks in the Holland Furnace.

Rolls Burning Coals To Fire Pot Walls

The Holland cone-shaped grate (b) automatically rolls the coal toward the sides of the furnace keeping the hottest fire as near as possible to the air supply for the rooms.

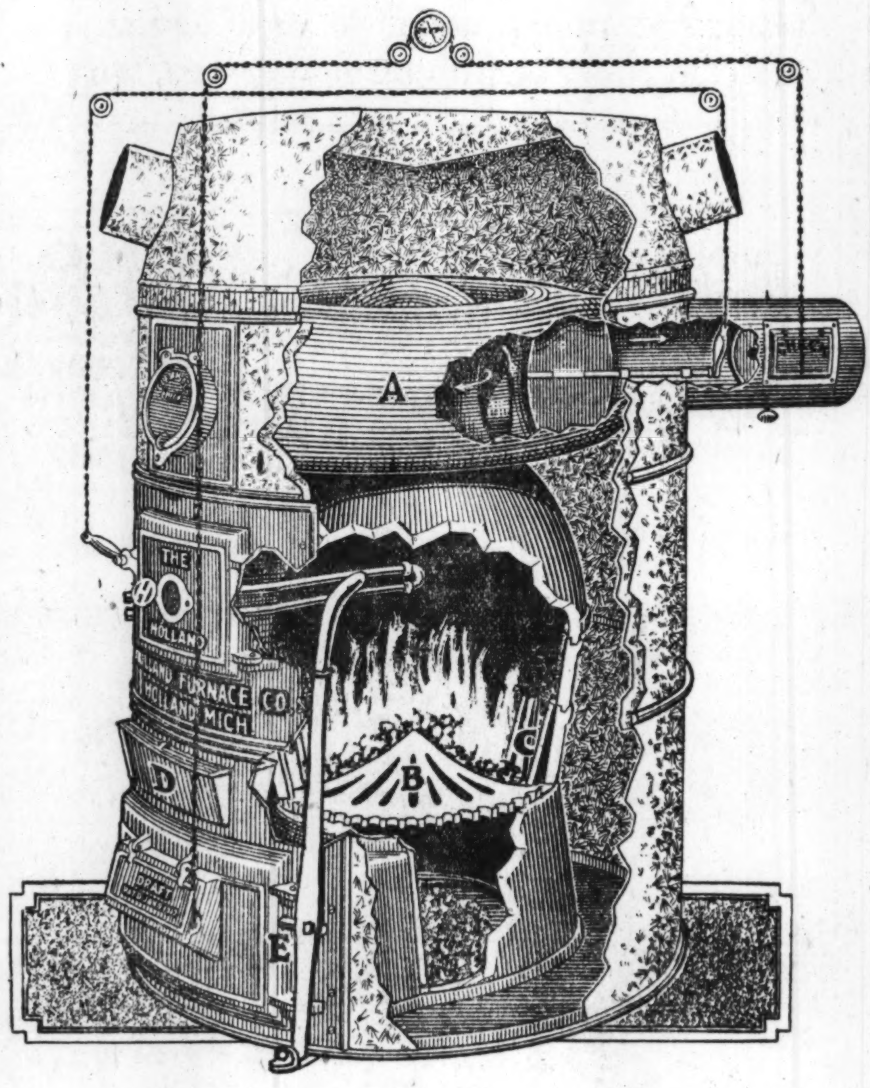
In the ordinary furnace the hottest fire is in the middle of the grate, as far from the air as possible. The further the fire from the article you are trying to heat the more wasteful, naturally, is the heating process. In other words, the Holland principle of heating air is as practical as that of the housewife who, when she wants to heat water quickly, brings it as close as she can to the fire.

Slots in the fire-pot (c) admit air for complete economical combustion. The results insure a cleaner, evener, more healthful and economical distribution of heat. The Holland will burn hard or soft coal or wood or any fuel, and burn it without waste or dirt.

The humidifier (d) is conveniently placed at the front of the furnace. The cone-shape grate works on a roller and pivot and it is easier to shake than any other similar device on the market and the patented shaker (e) makes it still easier.

Factory Installation Protects Service to Owners

Not only is the Holland an Improved heating plant of the highest quality; its efficiency is insured by correct installation; Holland engineers carefully plan your heating system according to the location, size and exposure of every room.



The Name Holland on the Door of Your Furnace Makes Your Home a Better Place to Live In, to Rent or to Sell

You can easily understand the success of the Holland Furnace Company as exemplified by its 150,000 contented owners when you consider the sound elements on which their satisfaction is based.

The first is scientific application by exclusive design and improvements of the safest and simplest principles of heating, namely, warm air circulation. The second is good manufacturing and perhaps the chief element of owner satisfaction is maker-control of Holland efficiency through branch installations, backed by an absolute pledge of one hundred per cent service.

You will be rebated in full on any reduction of price that may occur before November first. In fact, you will find the Holland contract just as you would wish to write it yourself. The Holland policy is always to think of the customer first.

Sold and Installed Only Through Holland Branches

Holland furnaces are never sold through dealers, hardware stores, tinsmith shops or any place except Holland branches because our system of factory installation and guarantee of service necessitates our complete control up to the time the furnace is satisfactorily working in your home.

Every Holland heating man, therefore, is paid to devote his entire time to Holland installation and service. And you have the full benefit at all times before and after the sale of his expert advice and knowledge.

Holland Guarantee Insures Permanent Service

Every installation of the Holland is accompanied by a signed bond to replace without cost of labor or material any part that may prove defective. This bond further means that a factory service man is at your call any time to regulate your furnace and to instruct you how to get the most efficient service out of the Holland plant. We consider no Holland job finished until you are thoroughly satisfied.

Why You Should Install Your Furnace Early

Your furnace should be planned for the proper location, the right pitch of the pipes, sufficient radiation and chimney draught.

And it stands to reason you will get better service if you take the necessary time now to get this planning done rather than wait until the last minute.

It is a simple matter for you to make your arrangements now with our nearest factory branch. They are all listed in this advertisement. Then by the time your first installments become due in the fall your furnace will be working for you and beginning to pay for itself out of the saving you make on fuel.

If you are planning to build or to improve your present heating system the Holland engineer from the nearest branch will call on request and without obligation gladly give you the benefit of his expert experience.

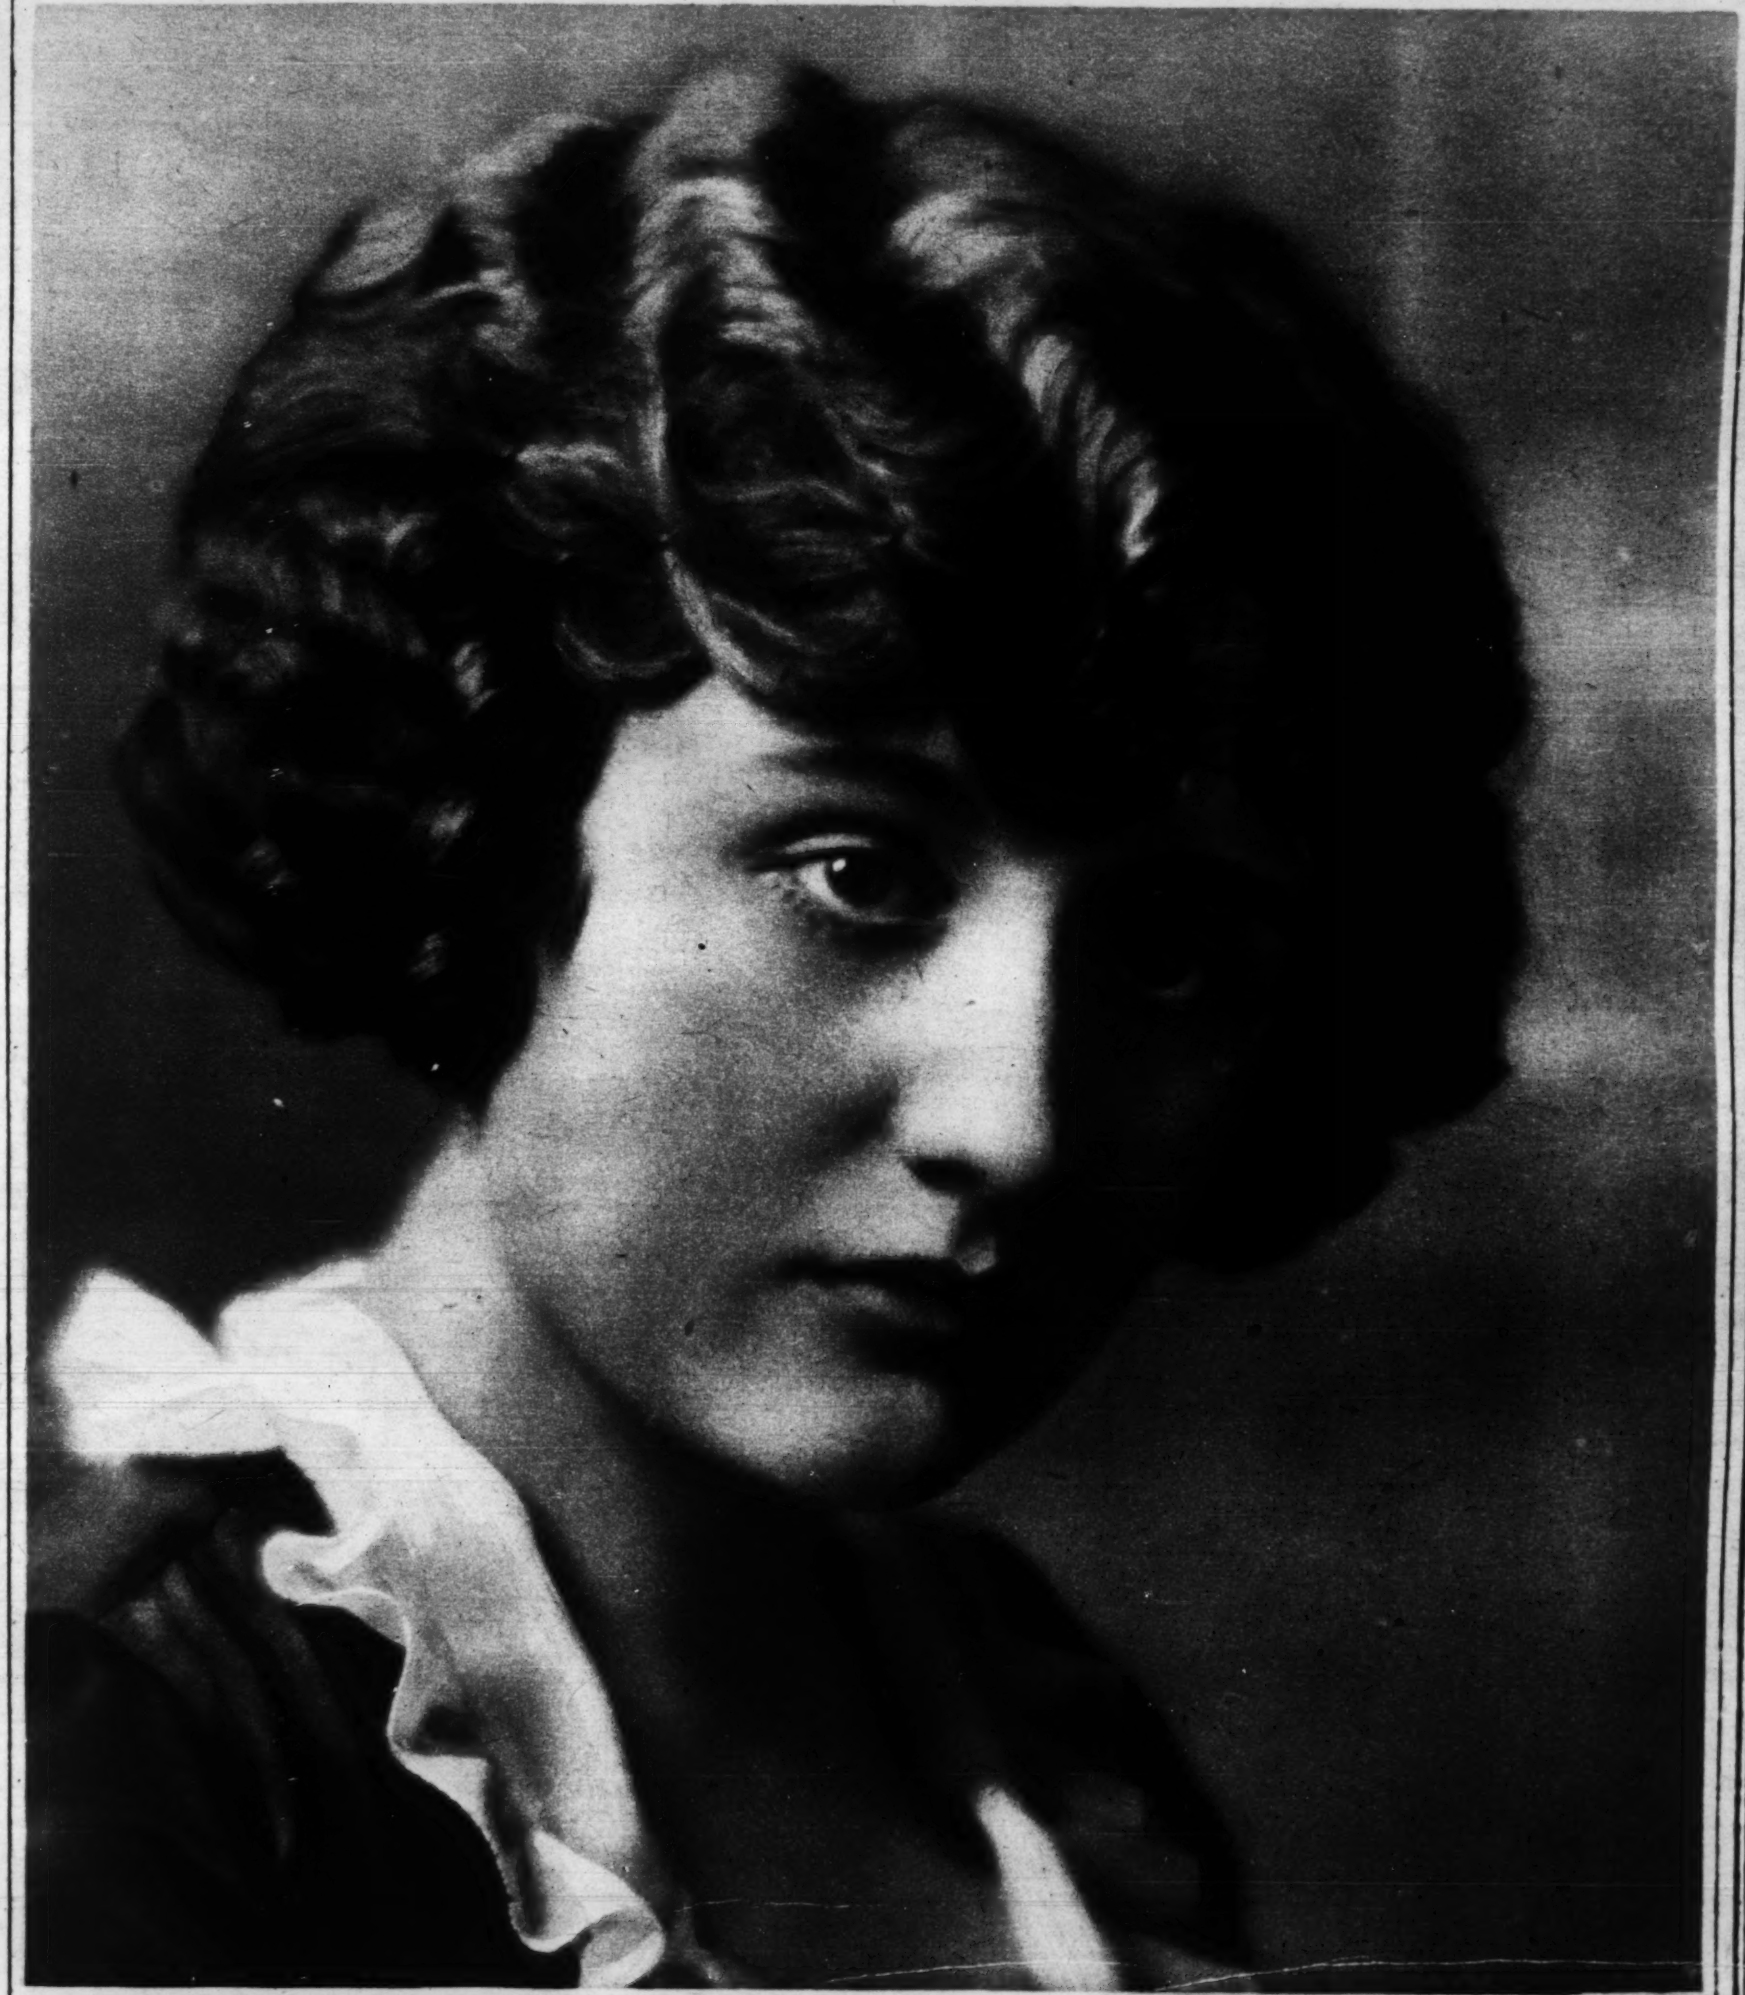
WISCONSIN'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL



SHE WINS $1,000 IN THE TRIBUNE'S $20,200 BEAUTY CONTEST—Miss Marie Scarcliff, 164 South Franklin street, Janesville, Wis., awarded first prize for her state in the competition to determine who are the loveliest girls in the central west. "A certain sweetness of expression, a pensiveness, great personal charm, fine structure of the head, a consistency in proportions, spirituelle eyes, and a general piquancy" were the features portrayed in the photograph that influenced the artist judges, Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds, in making their decision. In addition to receiving the $1,000 award Miss Scarcliff will be a candidate for the $10,000 prize to be given the most beautiful of the sixty prize winners. Pictures of the other nine Wisconsin beauties will be found on page 3.

Pompeian Beauty powder

Can You Guess Her Secret?

HOW well you look tonight!" he exclaimed. "Just as pretty as the day I married you. No one would think this was our tenth anniversary!"

He is right. She looks as lovely as ever. The clear flush of youth is in her cheeks, for she has learned the secret of "Instant Beauty"—the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the Powder adheres evenly. Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance. Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty? Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the Bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant! (Above 3 preparations may be used separately or together. At all druggists, 60c each.)

TRY NEW POWDER SHADES. The correct powder shade is more important than the color of dress you wear. Our new NATURELLE shade is a more delicate tone than our Flesh shade, and blends exquisitely with a medium complexion. Our new RACHEL shade is a rich, warm tone for darker skins. See offer on coupon.

Pompeian BEAUTY Powder—naturelle, rachel, flesh, white. Pompeian BLOOM (a rouge that won't crumble)—light, dark, medium. Guaranteed by the makers of Pompeian MASSAGE Cream (60c), for oily skins; Pompeian NIGHT Cream (50c), for dry skins; Pompeian FRAGRANCE (30c), a talcum with a real perfume odor.

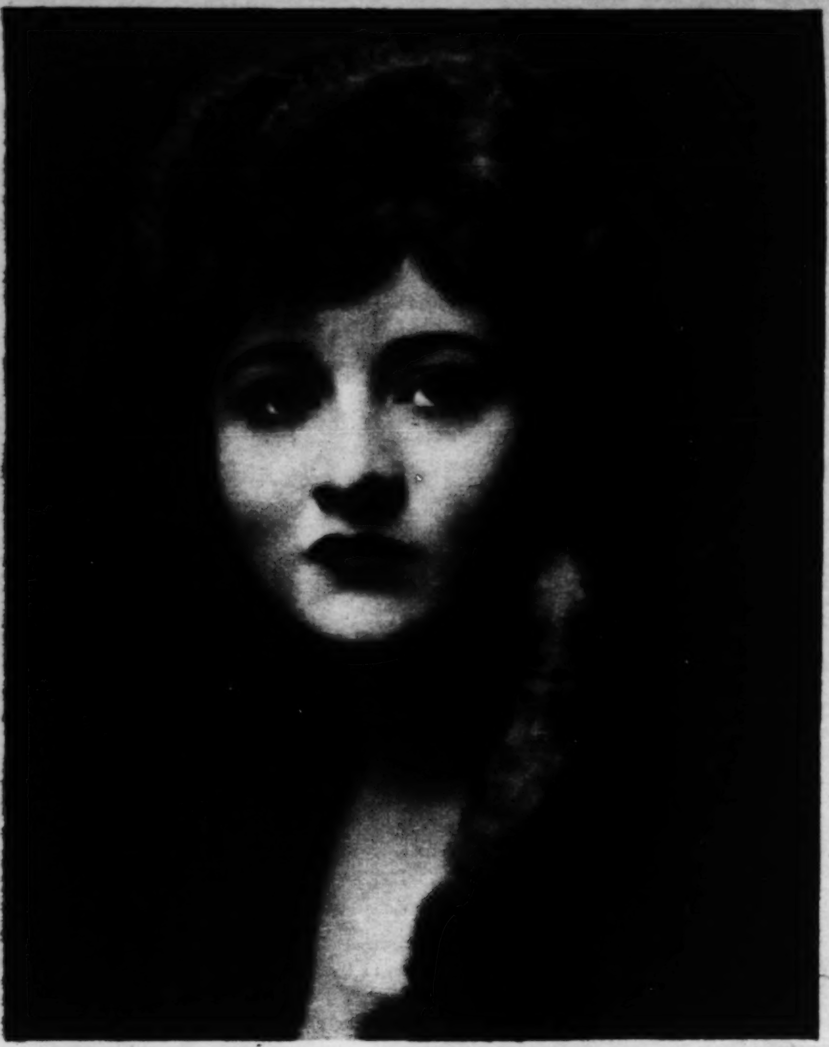
RICHARD BARTHELMESS and MARY HAY, his wife, were snapped by the enterprising photographer, just—like—this!

Mrs. Barthelmess had just arrived to pay a visit to her husband during studio hours at Paramount's Long Island studio, where he is working as Youth in "Experience." She has been enlivening "Sally," a Ziegfeld musical comedy.

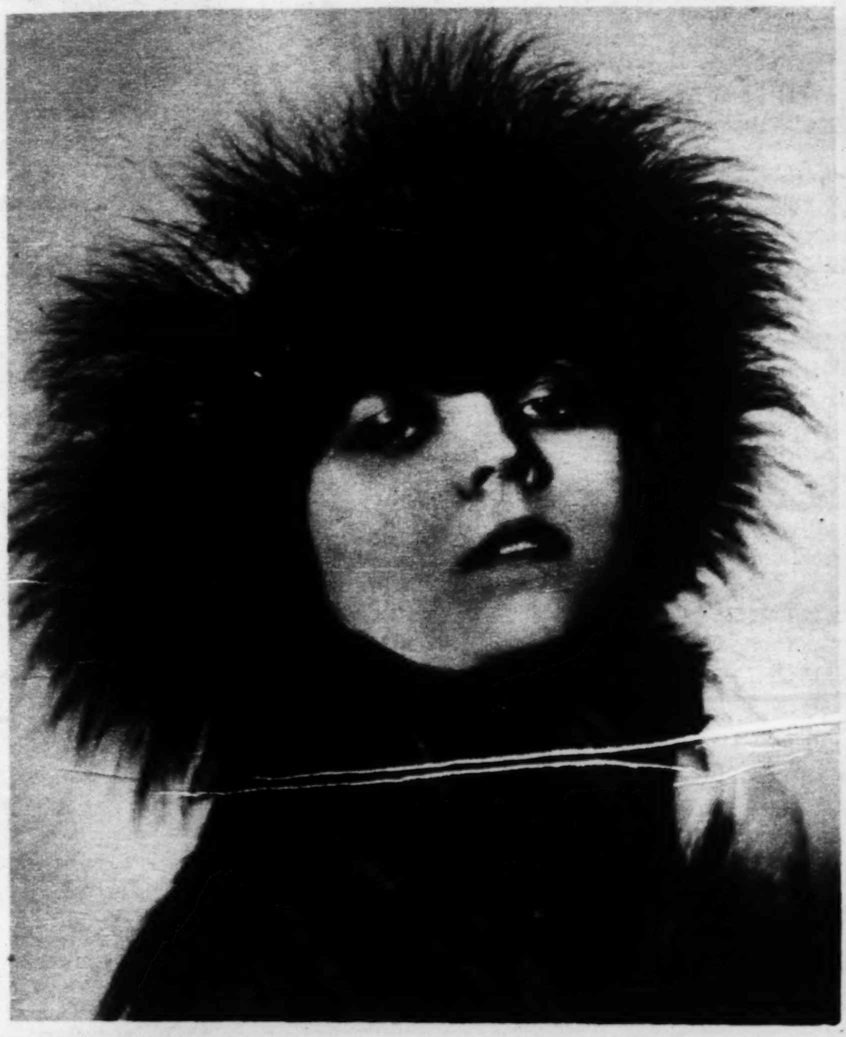
Mae Tinee.



BETTY COMPSON needs no introduction. Since her work in "The Miracle Man" she is known to almost everybody. Anyhow, her biography appeared in these pages quite recently.

The only reasons for this picture this morning are that it's a recent and we think vurr' beautiful one, and, being the sweet, generous souls that we are, we hereby bestow it upon you. Thank us pretty!

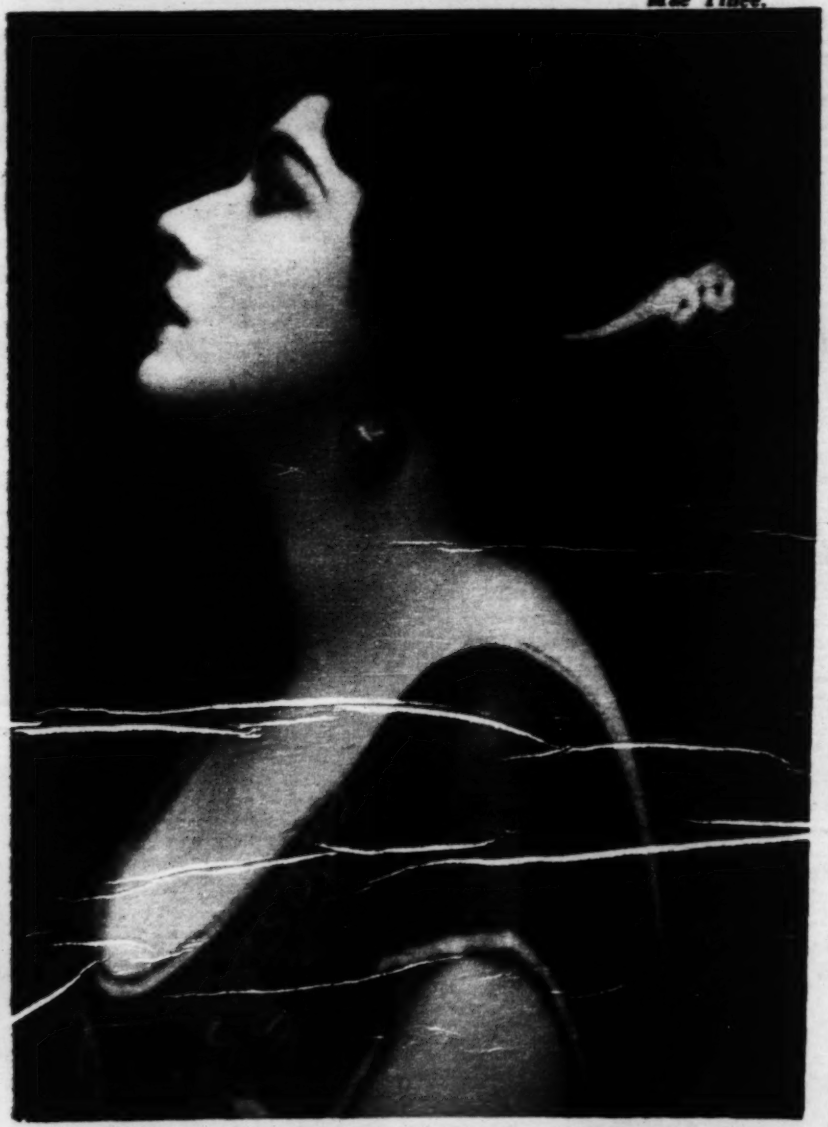
Mae Tinee.



POLA NEGRI is seen as Du Barry in "Passion." She was born in Poland in 1897 and began her career as a dancer in the Russian imperial ballet with Pavlowa, Nijinski and Revalles. She became a solo violinist in Warsaw and has danced in various Polish and German cities. She was engaged by Ernst Lubitsch to create her present role. It is said she will follow it with "Gypsy Blood," also directed by Lubitsch.

This dark lady is only 5 feet 1 inch tall. And an enthusiastic press agent describes her hair as being "copper and gold."

Mae Tinee.



NITA NALDI will enact the role of Passion in the screen version of the George Hobart play "Experience." This is being filmed in the Long Island Paramount studios and will be a George Fitzmaurice production.

Stunning, isn't she?

Hairy Growths, Roots and All, Quickly Go!

The new way to remove superfluous hair—the Phelactine way—is rapidly superseding the old fashioned depilatory methods, as well as electricity, and razor and tweezers. And no wonder! Phelactine is so harmless a child could safely eat it—so non-irritating and odorless it is altogether pleasant to use—and the process is so quick acting it actually removes the hairs entire, including the roots, in just a few moments. You will surely have an agreeable surprise if you will obtain a stick of Phelactine today and follow the easy instructions.

Many beauty shops now employ this method. Miss Grace McAllister, 31 E. Ohio St., Indianapolis, writes: "I am a hairdresser here and have used Phelactine a great deal, to the entire satisfaction of myself and customers, for removing hair from the face."

To Remove Wrinkles

To dispel the tell-tale lines of age, illness or worry—to overcome flabbiness and improve facial contour—there's nothing quite so good as Powdered Saxolite. Effective for wrinkles, crows' feet, enlarged pores, etc., because it "tightens" and tones the skin and underlying tissue. Get an ounce package, follow the simple directions—see what just one application will do!

Freckles and Blotches Can Be Absorbed

To remove freckles, liver spots, moth patches, pimples, etc., the best thing to do is to remove the skin itself. This is easily and harmlessly done by applying Mercolized Wax. The wax actually absorbs the defective outer skin, a little each day, gradually bringing the second layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautifully soft, clear, white and young looking. Mercolized Wax is used like cold cream.

To Keep Hair Curly, Wavy and Beautiful

With Liquid Silmerine you can have just the prettiest curls and waves—so perfectly natural in appearance! The waviness lasts ever so long, even in damp or warm weather. No more bother with loose strands stringing about your face—nor with burnt, uneven ends! Your hair is bright and glossy, instead of dull and dead looking. Liquid Silmerine is recommended by leading members of the theatrical profession.

Phelactine, $1.00; Powdered Saxolite, 75c; Mercolized Wax, 95c; Liquid Silmerine, $1.00; Parker-Belmont Rose Compact, $1.00; Parker-Belmont Powder Compact, $1.00; Powdered Tarkroot, $1.00; Powdered Barriflower, $1.00.

A RARE SIGHT, THESE DAYS—This remarkable photograph of two cow moose swimming in Lake Penage, Ont., was taken by W. L. Coller of Tecumseh, Mich., during a fishing trip. "Our party," he reports, "drove the moose about six miles in the water." The animals were sighted with field glasses and a fast motor boat made it possible to follow them.

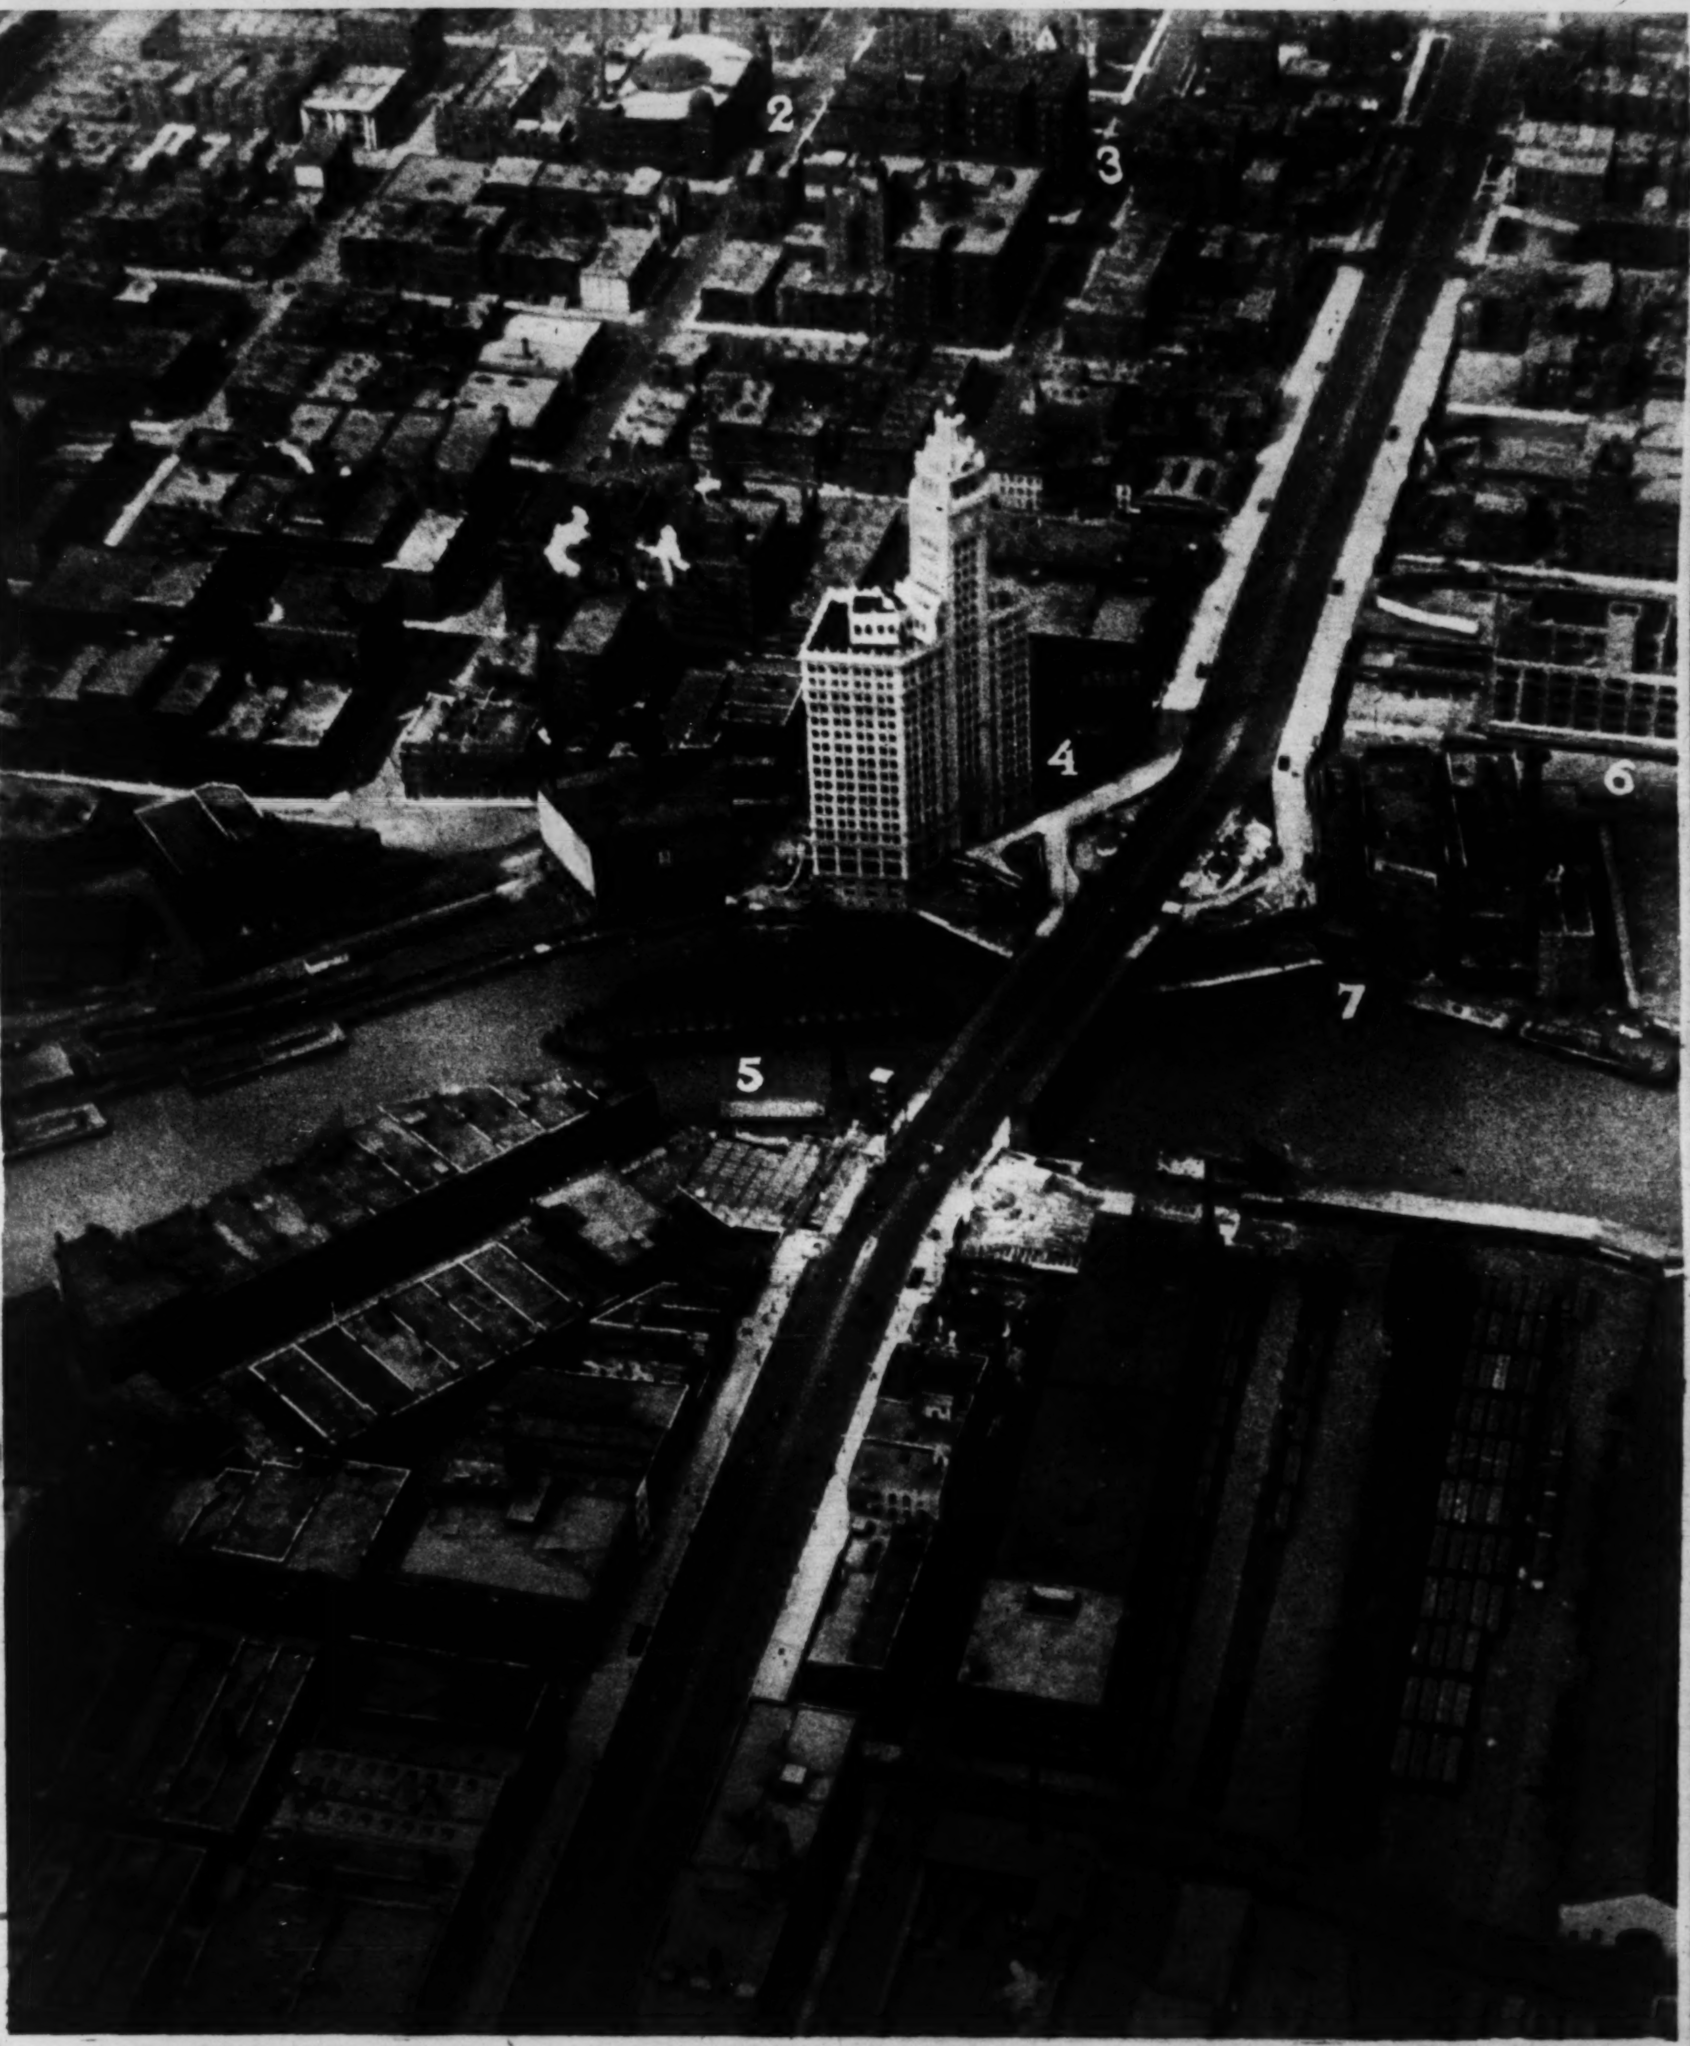
CHICAGO FROM THE AIR

I.—THE BOULEVARD LINK.



A DREAM COME TRUE—With the completion of the Michigan avenue bridge and the broad double-deck thoroughfare approaching it from both directions, one of the chief projects in the long-cherished Chicago plan has become a reality. Here is a striking airplane view of the new boulevard and the territory through which it passes, taken as the observer looks north across the bridge along what has come to be known as Upper Michigan avenue. Among the landmarks most readily recognized in the picture are (1) the Tree studio building, (2) Medinah temple, (3) Virginia hotel, (4) Wrigley building, (5) the abandoned Rush street bridge, (6) The Tribune plant, (7) the Kirk soap factory. At the north end of the new bridge may be seen the partially completed circular plazas, and at the south end the beginning of the double-deck roadway which ultimately is to connect with South Water street, to the left. In the foreground, at the right, is the north end of the Illinois Central railroad yards.

This is the first of a series of airplane views of Chicago taken for The Tribune and to be published in the rotogravure section each week. Watch for the second next Sunday.

The No. 2C Autographic KODAK, Junior equipped with Kodak Anastigmat

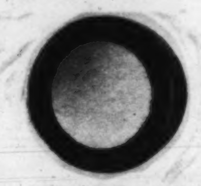
f·7·7 lens and Kodak
Ball Bearing Shutter

$25.00

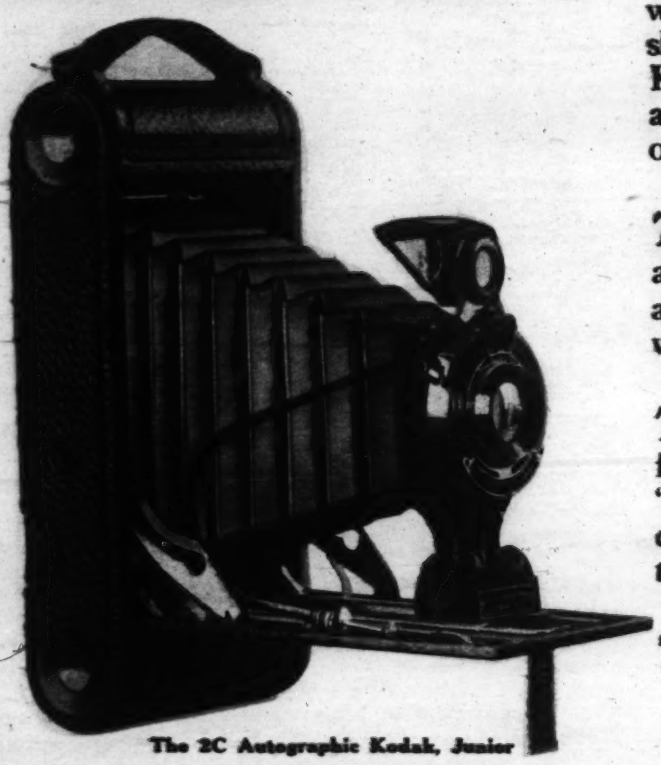
A Kodak Self-Portrait, made with a 2C Autographic Kodak, Junior, with Kodak Anastigmat lens f.7.7 and a Kodak Portrait Attachment. Actual size of the original.



Kodak Portrait Attachment
75 cents.

The camera fits into a niche, all its own. The size of the picture it makes, 2⅞ x 4⅞ inches, is particularly pleasing; is almost up to the full post card size—and yet the camera itself is small, light, convenient.

The Kodak Anastigmat lenses are made to exactly fit Kodak requirements. They are not merely an adaptation of a lens to the Kodak. They are a Kodak product designed to fit Kodaks, and in each case designed with particular reference to the size and type of Kodak and Kodak shutter that they are to be used with. The f.7.7 lens used on the 2C Kodak has more speed than the best of the rectilinear lenses and is at least equal to the best anastigmats in depth, sharpness and flatness of field.



The 2C Autographic Kodak, Junior

The Kodak Ball Bearing shutter has speeds of $\frac{1}{25}$, $\frac{1}{50}$ and $\frac{1}{100}$ of a second for "snapshots," has the usual time and "bulb" actions for prolonged exposures. It is an unusually reliable shutter, works smoothly and is quiet in its action.

The No. 2C Junior is covered with genuine grain leather, is finely finished in every detail, is extremely simple in operation, is "autographic," of course, and, with the Kodak Anastigmat lens, produces negatives having that crispness and sharpness that are characteristic of the true anastigmat.

The price, $25.00, includes the excise war tax.

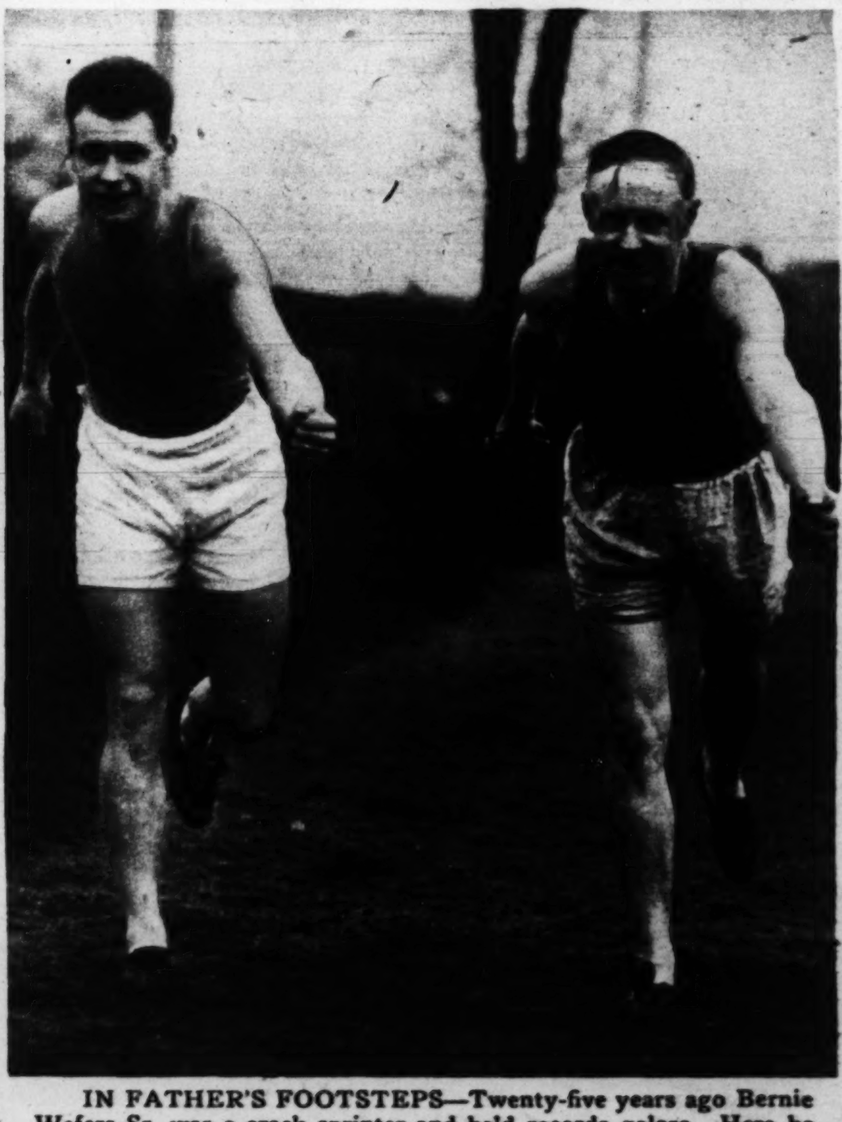
THE KEYS QUADRUPLETS of Hollis, Okla., all girls, will be six years old on June 4. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Keys, report that they have not had a day of illness since their birth. From left to right, they are Roberta, Mona, Mary, and Leota, and this is the order in which they were born. The first three are brunettes and the fourth a blonde.



IN FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS—Twenty-five years ago Bernie Wefers Sr. was a crack sprinter and held records galore. Here he is, at the right in the picture, coaching his son, Bernie Jr., who already is ranked among the best short distance runners in the country, and, under his father's experienced eye, is fast acquiring the speed and fine points of the game that made Bernie Sr. a champion. The elder Wefers is now athletic instructor at Fordham university.

"RESTWEL"

PILLOWS AND MATTRESSES
For the "rest" of your life

"Soap-and-water" clean—of course! —but still are you above reproach?

One great toilet fact that no woman can ignore —cleanliness does not always mean daintiness

CLEANLINESS is an instinct with women. Almost as strong as woman's instinct for cleanliness is her love for personal daintiness. Not only to be immaculately clean but to express that cleanness in delicacy, daintiness of her dress and person.

But what she does not always understand is that while personal daintiness may begin with cleanliness, it does not end there.

Soap and Water Alone Cannot Insure Daintiness

For there is a peculiar physiological condition to cope with in this quest of personal daintiness.

The perspiration glands under the arm are particularly active and are under very sensitive nervous control. Clothing and the hollow of the underarm make evaporation of moisture here very difficult.

The changing body chemicals cause a most disagreeable odor. And the deplorable thing about it is that while others are keenly aware of that odor in us, we cannot detect it in ourselves.

That, together with the fact that soap and water are powerless to counteract this condition, must put the seeker after daintiness on her guard, indeed.

You cannot trust soap and water—ordinary methods of cleanliness—because they cannot correct the condition.

You cannot trust your friends to tell you if you offend in this way because this matter is too personal to tell you.

Your only safe assurance of personal daintiness in this respect is a perspiration corrective.

How Millions of Women Safeguard Their Daintiness

Odorono is the first perspiration corrective to be perfected—and now millions of people use it regularly as a means of maintaining their high standards of the personal toilette.

Odorono is scientifically correct. Originally a physician's prescription, it has been improved by years of research and testing in the Odorono laboratories by the ablest chemists. If further improvement were possible it would have been found.

A liquid, Odorono is as pleasant to use as a toilet water—which it really is. And it is as harmless, too. Antiseptic in action, it has no irritating effects, even on sensitive skins. Physicians and skin specialists frequently prescribe it.

It leaves a feeling of absolute cleanliness, of irreproachable daintiness that satisfies the most exacting. And the joy of it is that one application is effective for at least three days.

Apply to underarms at night, allow to dry, then dust with talcum. Bathe with clear water the next morning—or any time, for water will not affect it. The use of Odorono twice a week is enough.

By correcting the cause of excessive underarm perspiration, Odorono eliminates the effects—unsightly moisture and repellent odor.

No more perspiration-soaked clothing, no more stained or ruined gowns, no more troublesome, unsightly dress shields. And, best of all, you may be sure you are above reproach.

Men also find Odorono indispensable for the toilet. Send for booklet, "The Assurance of Perfect Grooming."

Odorono may be obtained at all toilet counters, 35c, 60c, and $1.00. By mail, postpaid, if your dealer hasn't it.

The Odorono Company's Popular New Depilatory

After long experiment and endless testing in the Odorono laboratories, we have achieved another toilet delight for the friends of Odorono.

The Odorono Company's Depilatory is the new really pleasant, feminine way to remove hair. Gentle and harmless as a toilet cream, dainty and fragrant as a French talc, one application leaves the underarm as smooth and white as the face. At all toilet counters, package containing 12 weeks' supply, $1.00.

Ruth Miller Will Advise You —Without Charge

Ruth Miller, specialist in the toilette of the underarm, will gladly advise you if you are troubled in any unusual way with perspiration, and will send her new booklet of information on the subject, "The Double Meaning of Daintiness"—with no expense to you. Write today to Ruth Miller, The Odorono Company, 142 Blair Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

JOHN DANIEL, the only adult gorilla ever brought to America alive. He doesn't look delicate, but he was. Our shores proved inhospitable, and he died in New York recently of acute pneumonia after a career of less than two weeks with the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus. John Daniel was captured as a baby by German animal hunters in West Africa, and sold, when the hunters were interned by the British, to Maj. John Penny of the British army. Maj. Penny took the gorilla to London, where he seemed to thrive, but he grew too large and strong to be safe as a pet and was turned over to the circus. The day he was placed on exhibition he began to show signs of depression and a few days later he sustained the circus tradition that you can't keep a gorilla alive behind bars. He was four and one-half years old and four feet, five inches tall when he died.

Make your skin

"A skin you love to touch"

A BEAUTIFUL skin, soft, smooth, faultlessly clear—any girl can have this charm.

For your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the right treatment, and see how soft and lovely you can keep it.

If your skin is very sensitive and easily irritated, use each night this special treatment:

DIP a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face. Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft, white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse first with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

THE very first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it is an indication that the treatment is doing you good, for it means that your skin is responding in the right way to this method of cleansing. After a few treatments the drawn feeling will disappear and your skin will gain a new, healthful sense of softness and smoothness.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

HONORS LONG OVERDUE—Seventeen years ago Chief Gunner Robert E. Cox, U. S. N., risked his life to save 600 members of the crew on the battleship Missouri by extinguishing fire in a powder magazine. President Harding has just conferred on him the congressional medal of honor—a proceeding made possible by a special act of congress, since the law did not then authorize the medal for warrant officers. The presentation took place at the White House, where this photograph was taken. Secretary of the Navy Denby stands at the left and next in order come Lieut. M. Munson, an unidentified officer, Gunner Cox, President Harding, Secretary of the Interior Fall, Lieut. Charles Schepke, Attorney General Daugherty, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt. Lieuts. Munson and Schepke were Cox's companions in fighting the fire and received their medals shortly afterward. (Photograph copyright by Harris & Ewing.)

The almost universal tendency to constipation

Too many fail to realize the seriousness of this condition

SO many of us have become subject to constipation that doctors speak of it as an "almost universal tendency." Comparatively few have complete elimination of waste matter without the help of cathartics.

The problem is so important that a few years ago a well known medical journal offered a prize for the best essay on constipation. These essays, reprinted in a booklet, carry a message of deep significance to every man and woman.

"Probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation is the indiscriminate use of cathartics," says the doctor who wrote the prize essay. Indeed, the majority of the writers emphasize the harm that is caused by cathartics, which at best never remove the cause of the trouble, but bring only temporary relief.

For years there has been pressing need for some simple food that would in a natural way help restore normal conditions, and keep the body clear of accumulating waste matter.

And now scientists have discovered it in the familiar little cake of yeast.

First came the dramatic discovery by nutrition experts that yeast in itself is a wonderful food, rich in the mysterious water-soluble vitamine—a valuable conditioner for those who are losing appetite and weight or suffering from pimples and boils.

Then it was found that this familiar food brought remarkable results in constipation. Fleischmann's Yeast was tested for this purpose. In leading medical institutions, chronic cases, some even of years' duration, responded.

Being a food, Fleischmann's Yeast is by its very nature better suited to the stomach and intestines than drugs, coarse substances or oils—the ordinary laxatives. It helps the body eliminate poisons. And it cannot form a habit.

Some ask: "Won't yeast, when eaten, have the same effect as in raising bread?" No; it is assimilated in the body just like any other familiar food. Only one precaution: if you are troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in boiling water.

Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast, and get it fresh daily.

Send 4c in stamps for the interesting booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." So many inquiries are coming in daily for this booklet that it is necessary to make this nominal charge to cover cost of handling and mailing. Address The Fleischmann Company, at Dept. 132-E, 701 Washington St., New York, N. Y.

A food, not a laxative

In cases of constipation remember that yeast is a corrective food, not a laxative. It should be taken over a period of time, from two weeks to a month, in order to restore normal habits. Eaten regularly it should assure complete elimination daily. Do not discontinue the customary cathartic abruptly but reduce it gradually.

To restore normal conditions and help the body eliminate waste regularly and thoroughly, eat one to three cakes a day.

"Neither blonde nor brunette"—

Look for this label on the bottom of every box.

"IF I were only an Oriental brunette—or a flaxen blonde—or a flaming Titian type!" is the eternal lament of the girl whose coloring is seemingly indefinite. Yet she herself is of a distinct class—the composite type especially typical of America with its mixture of dark and light beauty.

The greatest mistake you can make—if you belong to this "medium" class—is to emulate the pronounced types. Their natural beauty is certain to overwhelm your futile efforts at imitation. Only when you learn to emphasize your own coloring will you maintain your advantage.

Individuality—the source of charm

In the century-famed ateliers of Dorin of Paris, poudres and rouges, of exquisite softness and refinement, have been perfected for the many types of blondes and brunettes. They are imported from Paris and sold throughout America—in the better drug and department stores.

For 25c in stamps or coin, our booklet, "What Is Your Coloring?" with two miniature compactes (La Dorine Poudre and Dorin's Rouge), will be mailed to you. Write us the color of your eyes, hair and skin.

Or send 10c in coin and you will receive the booklet with two Dorin packets, one of poudre and one of rouge, en poudre (loose powder form).

Bob's Old Straw Mattress

Bob always talks about the straw mattresses they used when he was a boy on the farm. Those were in the dark ages before the Premier was even thought of. Each year at threshing time his job was to drag out all the mattresses, burn the old straw, and stuff the ticks again.

"Mother thought that was how to clean mattresses," he said one day. "The dear old soul knew no other way. But the fresh straw had more dust than the old, and for months she'd be busy with broom and dustpan around the beds."

"Straw mattresses wouldn't have been quite so bad," I suggested, "if your mother could have had a Premier."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Bob. "The suction would have pulled the straw dust right through the old-fashioned ticks. Funny, isn't it, how our Premier sucks out the dust in mattresses and pillows?"

But of course mattresses today are so vastly different! I use the Premier on ours every few weeks, and they're always fresh as can be afterward. It's so easy. And with our Premier attachments I can reach into all the crevices of the bedstead and get every speck of dust and foreign matter.

And for blankets and comforters—the frequent use of the firm-but-gentle rubber-fingered brush, the Premier's distinctive feature, keeps these free and safe from dust and dirt.

We used to take down bedsteads. The Premier gets everything out of crevices; removes all dust from mattresses and pillows. For rugs, furniture, hangings, clothes, woodwork—almost everything—the Premier, with its exclusive rubber-fingered brush and efficient attachments, is the best. Enormous production and standardized methods keep the cost down. Make comparisons.

There is a great difference in cleaners. Before buying any cleaner, you owe it to yourself to have a TEN POINT DEMONSTRATION of the Premier—First Among Cleaners—in your own home. 'Phone the distributor named below to have your nearest Premier dealer make this demonstration tomorrow.

The window of every Premier dealer contains a poster of this or a similar advertisement.

Learn the advantages of the Premier's specially designed bag, self-balancing handle, notched nozzle, rubber brush and direct-connected attachments. Tests its light weight, powerful suction and efficient attachments. Have this Ten Point Demonstration first thing tomorrow morning. Find out from the Premier dealer what you can do with $5.00. It will surprise you.

Women Everywhere are using this beautiful 'La-may Vanity Box!

NOW you can use a face powder that cannot spill. The powder is in cake form, covered with porous cloth. You can drop it on the floor and the compact will be just as perfect for use. You wipe the puff on the cloth covering of the compact and the powder comes through as needed. You could powder your nose in the dark and you would not get too much powder, and you are sure not to spray your clothes with powder. This new, perfect way to use face powder was invented by the specialist who perfected the famous, harmless La-may Powder. There are two qualities of packages. Both are very flat and convenient to carry. One box with compact and puff sells for fifty cents. The other, a German Silver Gold Plated Vanity Box with hinged cover and two-inch mirror, containing compact and flat lamb's wool puff, sells for one dollar and fifty cents. This beautiful La-may Vanity Box looks like solid gold and will not tarnish. It will last a lifetime. The La-may compact in the La-may Vanity Box contains enough pure La-may Powder to last for generous use for about two months. When La-may Vanity Box is empty you refill it by asking your dealer for a fifty-cent La-may compact. The compact and puff from the fifty-cent package is made to fit the La-may Vanity Box. Ask your face powder dealer to show you this splendid new idea. Remember, here, at last, is an entirely new idea in face powder. The powder cannot spill and it comes out so evenly you could powder your face in the dark. La-may Face Powder is also sold in the loose form for thirty-five cents and sixty cents. La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure and harmless. Because it is pure, and because it stays on so well, it is now used by over a million American women. If your dealer refuses to get you a La-may Vanity Box, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York City. There is also a delightful La-may Talcum that sells in a beautiful large package for only thirty cents.

THOROUGHBRED

by Bruno Lessing

Wherein Fate Plays a Whimsical Prank or Two, and, for Once, Gets the Worst of It

MOTT, in moments of enthusiasm, would boast that his wife was a thoroughbred. He had once been interested in breeding horses, and the terms had retained a place in his vocabulary. He was a good-natured, easy-going individual, not particularly brilliant, and, above all, neither keenly analytical in his thinking processes nor finicky in his use of words. When he called his wife a thoroughbred he meant it for a compliment. The trouble about it was that he was right and never knew just how thoroughly right he was.

Those who know horses will tell you what splendid qualities ensue from long and careful breeding, such as strength, beauty, endurance, spirit, and vitality. Your poor, stodgy work horse has none of these. Yet the work horse is patient, and plods and drudges, takes things as they come with a sort of fatalistic philosophy, accepts the good of life while he stoically endures the bad, and, while he never rises to great heights, has the compensating consolation of never sinking to great depths. Whereas the thoroughbred, keyed to a high tension, is startled by his own shadow, jumps at a sound, trembles under restraint, and spends practically most of his life in a state of quivering nerves.

Mrs. Mott was a thoroughbred. Sensitive, proud, and refined, her life had, fortunately, been sheltered from every disturbing influence. Fate had dealt gently with her. She had not the faintest idea of how she would act under the stress of powerful emotion, for the reason that the depths of her emotions had never been stirred.

The Motts had been married six years, and had a single child, Lucille, who was five years old, the idol of her parents. It had been a happy marriage, or, rather, to be exact, it had been a tranquil and contented marriage. Mrs. Mott was as devoted to her husband as she felt a woman could possibly be. She loved his cheerful disposition, his kindliness, and his tenderness to herself. Probably, if you had asked her what she admired most in her husband, she would have told you that it was his trustworthiness.

From which one might have deduced that Mrs. Mott was inclined to be selfish, the quality which appealed to her most being the one which gave her the greatest comfort. Of her devotion to her child, however, there was no question. It must, furthermore, be added that Mrs. Mott was twenty-six years old, slender, and exceedingly pretty.

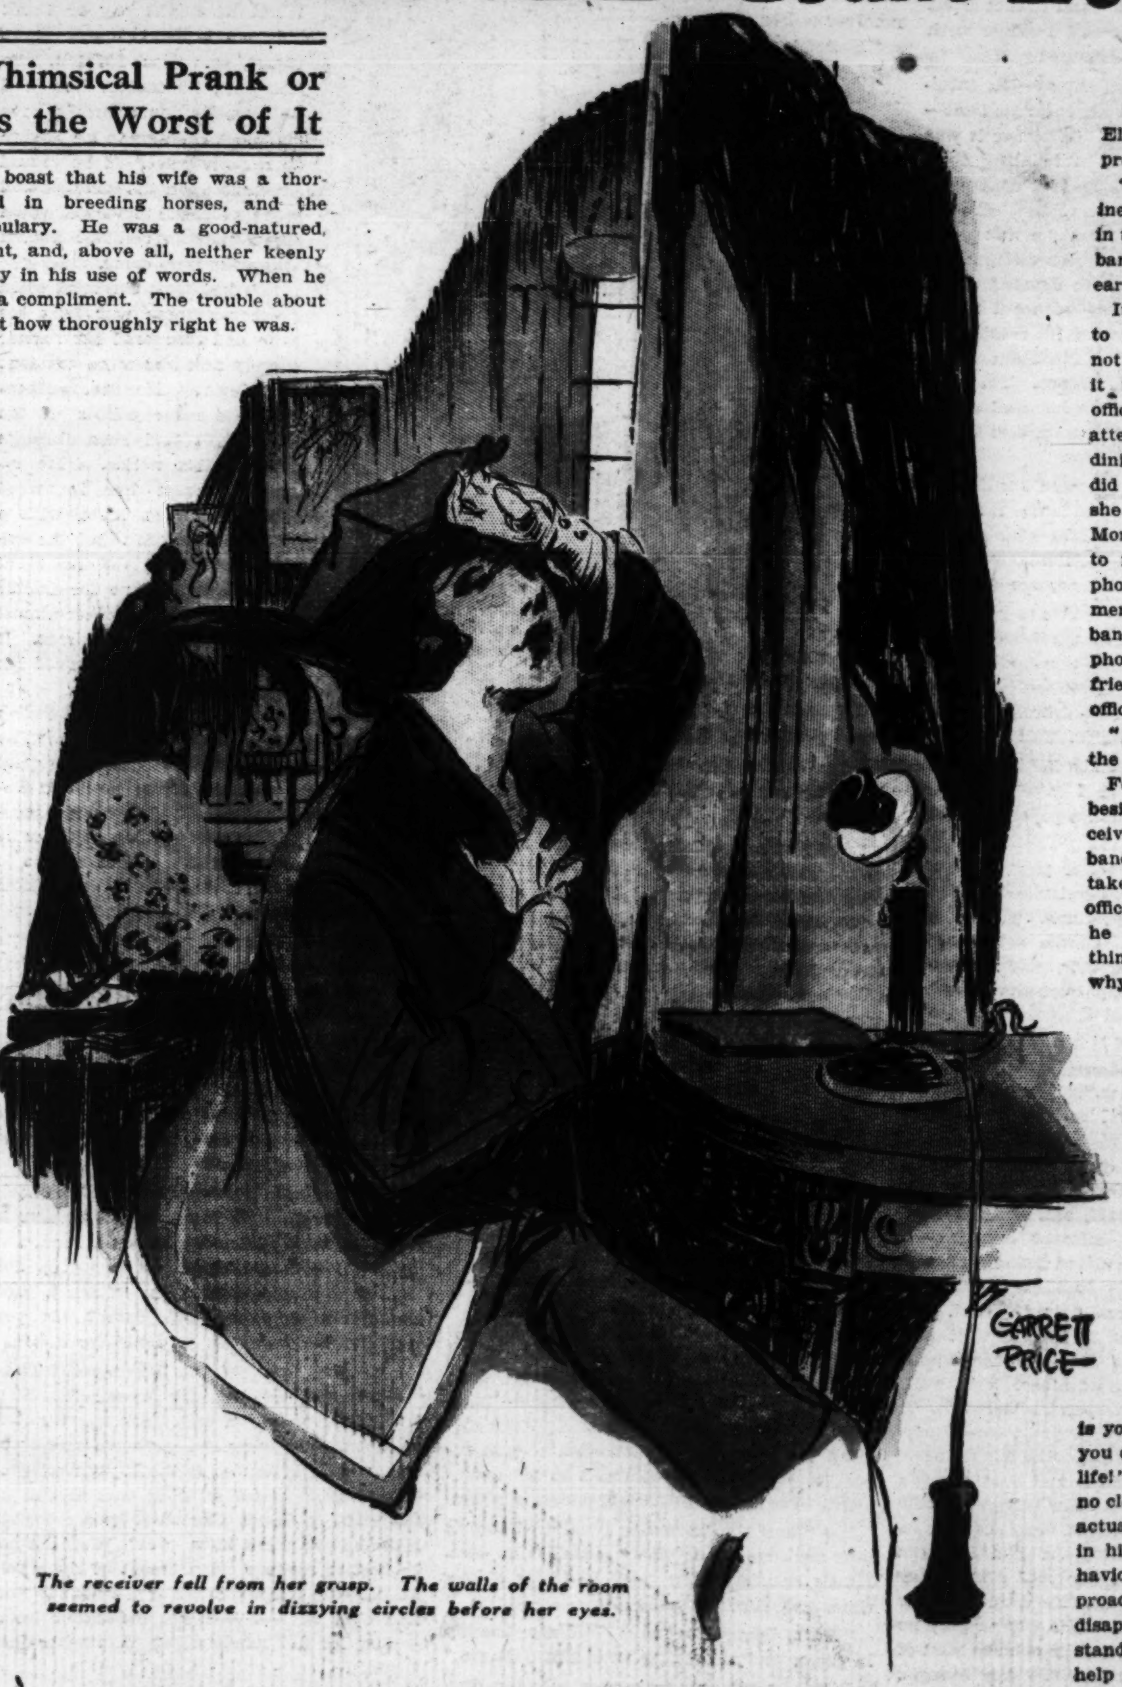
It all began upon an evening when Mott, detained by an engineering problem at the office of the steel company by which he was employed, telephoned to his wife that he would not be home until late and suggested that, after Lucille had been put to bed, his wife call upon a friend of hers who lived in the neighborhood. It happened that this friend—a Mrs. Morris—was giving a party that evening, and there Mrs. Mott, for the first time, met Franklin Elder.

Even as he clasped her hand Mrs. Mott discerned the manner of man he was—handsome, charming, selfish, unscrupulous, and indiscriminately amorous. His adroitness amused her. He held her hand just long enough and pressed it just tenderly enough to convey to her the impression—his eyes aiding and abetting the communication—that she appealed to him. A whole volume can be expressed in a single handclasp. She smiled charmingly, and promptly dismissed him from her mind.

It was nearly an hour later when, seated alone upon a sofa, she saw him approaching. He seated himself at her side and plunged headlong into an amusing tirade against social functions which soon had her laughing. Then her husband came to take her home, and she introduced him to Franklin Elder.

The Elder type is too common to merit many words of description. Men who pursue their illicit diversions methodically, without even passion as an excuse or pretext; to whom no human ties appeal, and who, often under a pleasing exterior, conceal the ruthlessness of a beast of prey, are, unfortunately, familiar to every community.

It was just two days after Mrs. Morris' party that Mott came home quite excited.



The receiver fell from her grasp. The walls of the room seemed to revolve in dizzying circles before her eyes.

"Do you remember that chap Elder we met the other night?" he said. "Well, today he was elected a director of our company. He came into the office and shook hands with me. I'd like to have him up for dinner some night."

Within a few weeks Elder had become a frequent visitor at the Motts' household. Mott, who was entirely without guile himself, liked him exceedingly. Through Elder's influence he had been promoted to a more lucrative position, and he felt under deep obligation to him. Often, when he called, he found Mrs. Mott alone, and yet, in looking back to it all in after years, she could never remember that he had by word or act openly avowed the feelings toward her which she always knew he entertained.

She found him congenial and attractive, and as long as he kept his thoughts and desires to himself she had no fault to find with him. Lucille, her little daughter, was devoted to him. Elder had managed to ingratiate himself into the child's affections. Once he brought her a doll.

"The day before your birthday," he said, "if you'll remind me, you and I will go shopping and buy the doll new clothes. But you mustn't tell anybody. That'll be our great secret."

And now Fate, probably feeling that the married life of the Motts had been entirely too serene, decided capriciously to take a hand in their affairs. Andrew Mott telephoned to his wife that he would not be home for dinner.

"But we've asked Mr. Elder for dinner tonight," protested Mrs. Mott.

"Awfully sorry, Katherine, but I'm up to my neck in things," replied her husband. "I'll get home as early as I can."

It never occurred to her to inquire why he could not come home. She took it for granted that his office work required his attention. The idea of dining alone with Elder did not appeal to her, and she decided to invite Mrs. Morris. She was unable to find Mrs. Morris' telephone number, and, remembering that her husband kept a list of the telephone numbers of all their friends, she called up his office.

"Mr. Mott has gone for the day."

For a long time she sat beside the telephone receiver thinking. Her husband's work had never taken him outside the office before. Where could he have gone? If some thing unusual had arisen, why had he not told her? She did not like it. Furthermore, she made no other attempt to obtain Mrs. Morris' telephone number.

That night Elder made strenuous efforts to create a pleasing impression, and succeeded admirably. The picture that he drew of his loneliness touched her sympathy. Had he cried aloud, "It is you whom I want. Only you can fill the void in my life!" he could have made no clearer to her what was actually in his mind, if not in his heart. But his behavior was beyond reproach. And while she disapproved of his moral standard she could not help liking the man.

Mott gave his wife no explanation of his absence that evening, nor did she ask any questions. What she noticed, however, was that he seemed worried and ill at ease.

"Are you feeling all right?" she asked.

"Fine," he replied. "Only I've got a few things on my mind."

The fact that her husband had thoughts which he was keeping from her annoyed Mrs. Mott, or, rather, she was annoyed because he had told her that he had such thoughts without telling her what they were. She was not accustomed to being annoyed, and it made her restless. And then came the second prank of Fate.

The following night, after dinner, Mott went to his room saying that he had some work to do. His wife remained in the sitting room reading the evening newspaper. The telephone at her side tinkled faintly, and, thinking it was about to ring, she put the receiver to her ear. She heard her husband's voice speaking from the extension in his room.

"Are you there, Alice?"

"Yes. We were cut off," replied a woman's voice.

"Now, I want you to listen carefully," she heard her husband say. "This business has got to stop——"

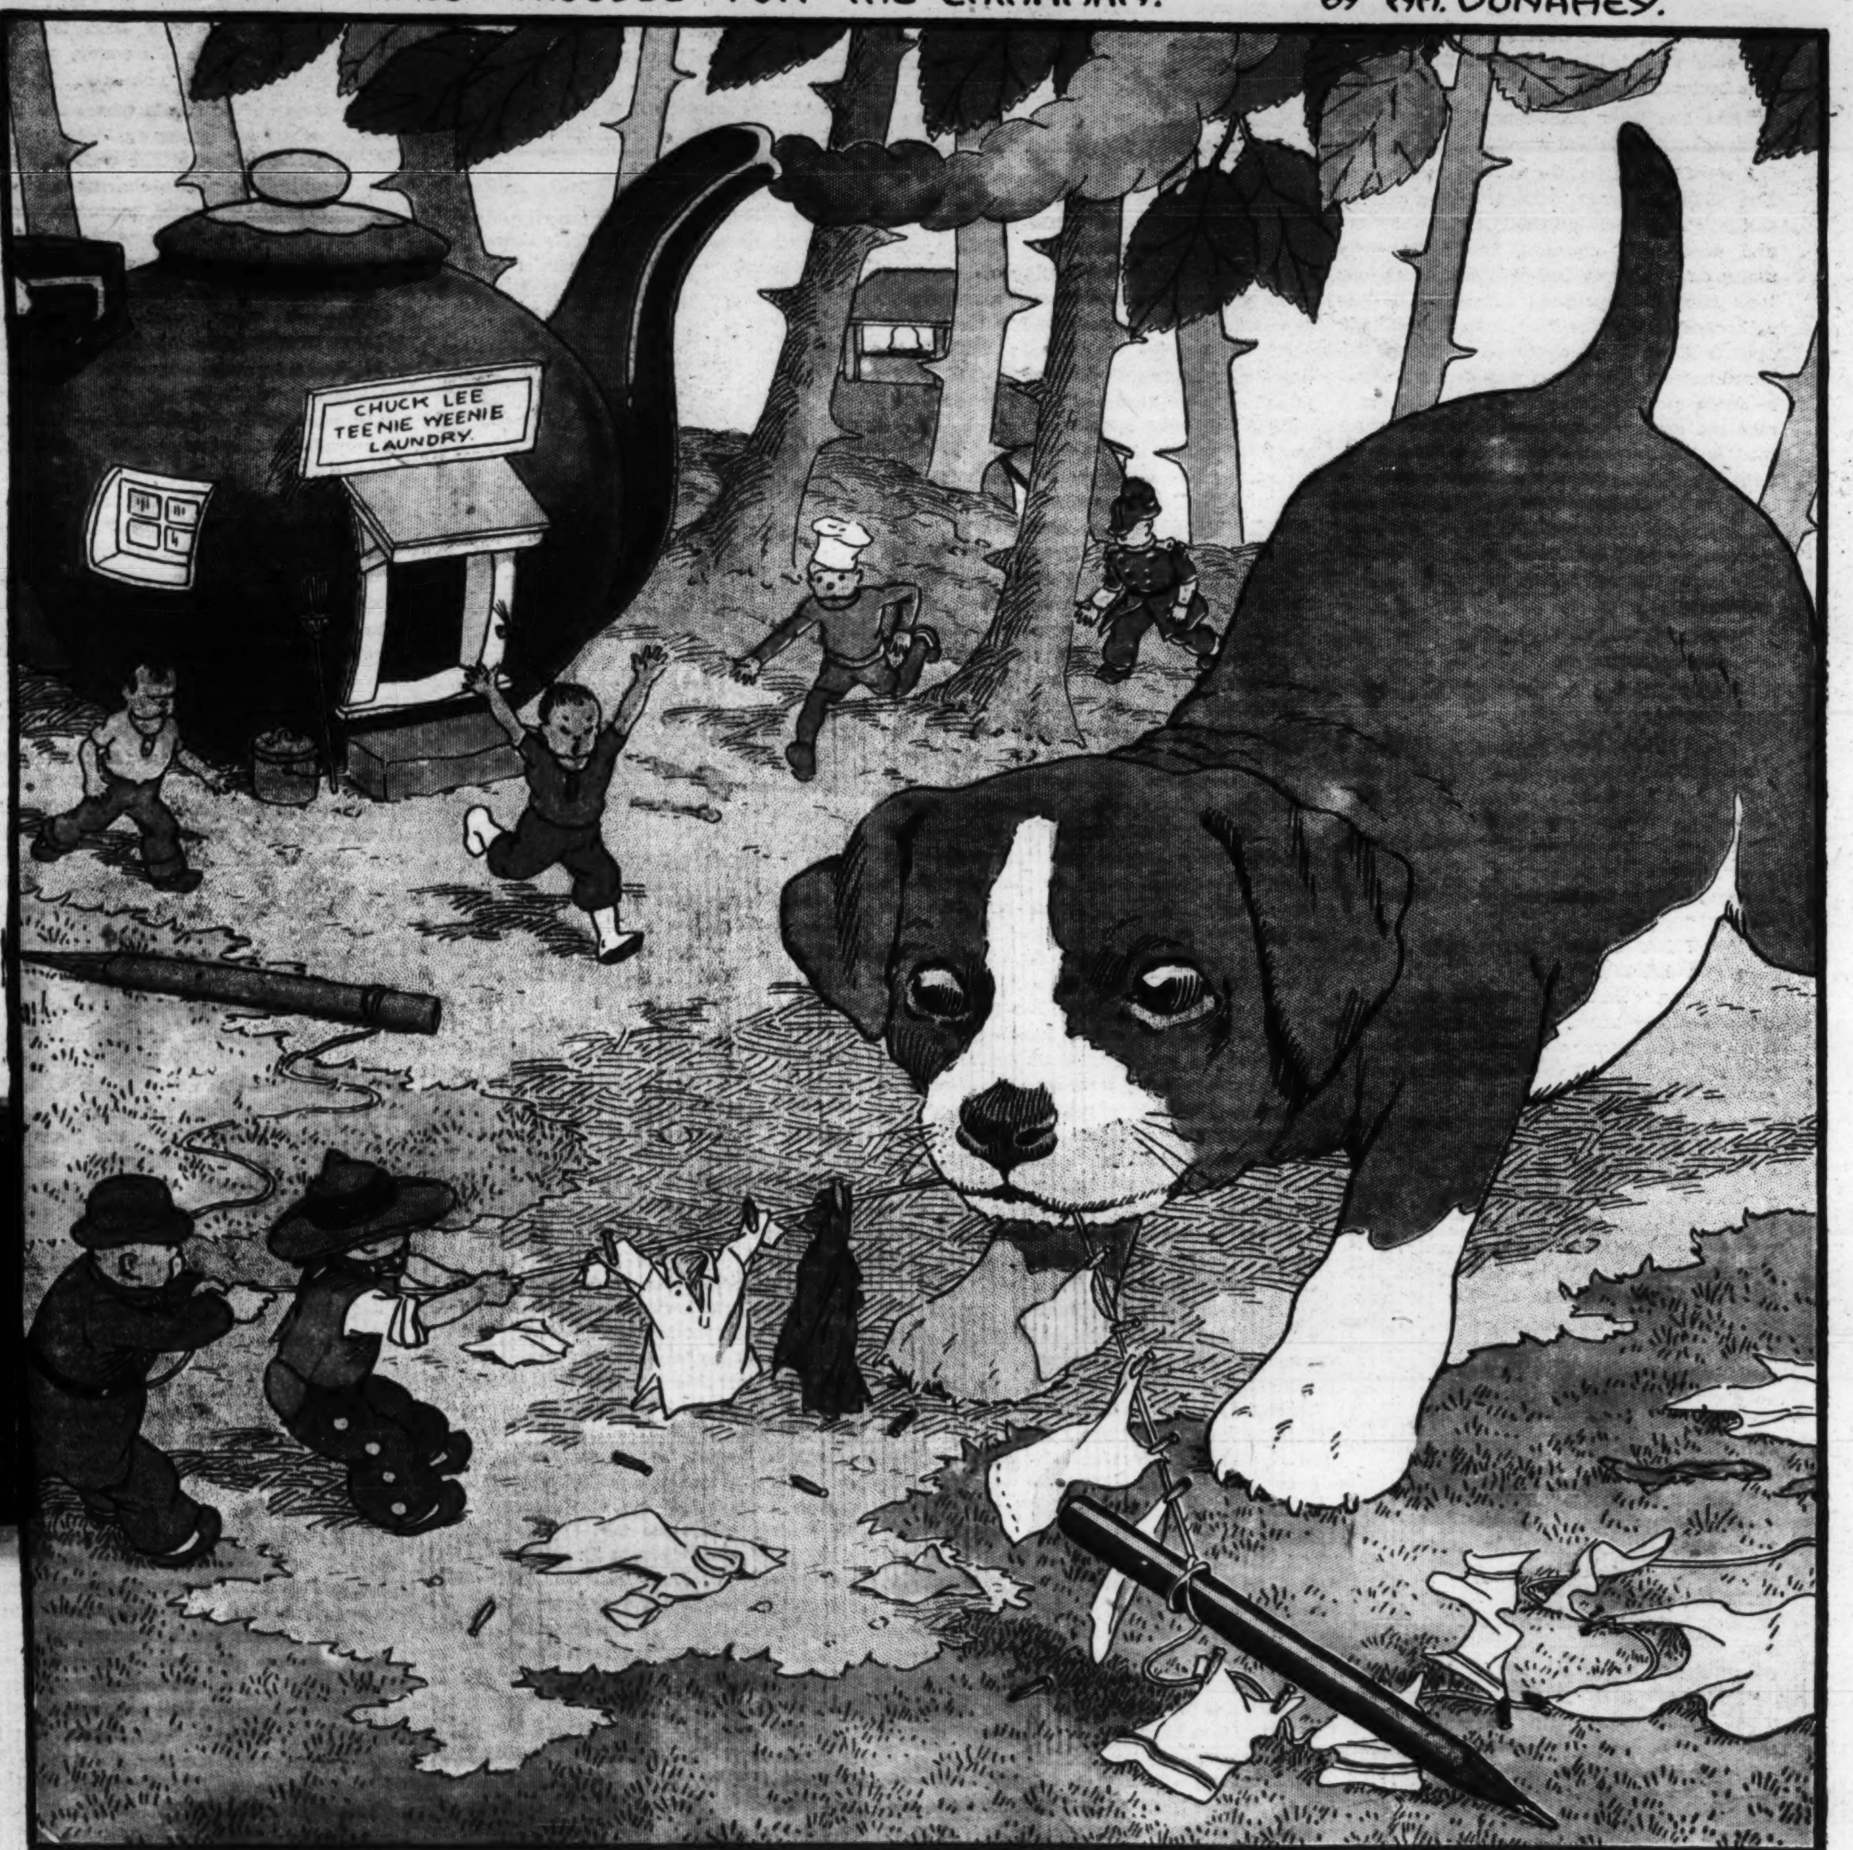
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

A PUPPY MAKES TROUBLE FOR THE CHINAMAN.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



IN one of the big houses, not far from the rose bush under which the Teenie Weenie village stood, lived a dog.

The dog's name was Becky Sharp and the Teenie Weenies were very fond of her.

Becky visited the Teenie Weenies quite often and many times she helped the little folks in various ways.

One day Becky had puppies and then trouble began, for one of the puppies was a most mischievous little fellow and he gave the Teenie Weenies a great deal of trouble.

He wasn't really a bad puppy, but he was young, thoughtless, very playful, and inclined to be a bit rough.

One day he came waddling over to the rose bush and almost knocked the Lovers' bungalow off its foundation by rubbing his fat side against the little house; in fact, he ripped a length of water trough off the tiny roof.

Another time he upset the fire engine while the Turk was cleaning the little machine, and only laughed at the General when that dignified person scolded him.

"I wish that pup would stay away," growled the General after the affair of the fire engine. "He's so rough and I'm afraid he'll do a lot of damage with those big clumsy feet of his."

"Why don't you tell his mother to keep him home?" asked the Old Soldier.

"I don't like to do that," answered the General. "For his mother is such a nice dog and I wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world."

However, the General was forced to speak to the puppy's mother a few days later and this is what brought it about.

One Monday morning the puppy came up to the Teenie Weenie village and not finding any of the little folks about, for Monday is a busy day under the rose bush, he looked around for something to play with.

The Chinaman had just hung out a walnut shellful of clothes to dry on the line in front of the teapot, when the pup happened by.

The tiny towels and shirts flapping in the wind attracted the puppy's attention, and, catching the line in his huge mouth, he pulled two lead pencil posts, which held the clothes line, out of the ground at the first jerk.

He shook his great head and had just started to drag the line away when the Policeman and the Cowboy happened along.

The two little fellows caught the line and tried to pull it away from the pup, but they might as well have tried to lift a brick, for the puppy gave a shake of his head and sent them sprawling on the ground.

The Chinaman heard the noise and, popping his head out of the laundry door, he was filled with anger at the sight of his clean clothes being dragged over the dirty ground.

"Stop that, you nasty pup!" he shouted running towards the puppy. "Me just washie clothes nice and cleanie and you makie dirty," and the poor Chinaman burst into tears.

Seeing the Chinaman's tears, the puppy dropped the clothes line and begged the poor fellow's pardon.

"You oughtie be ashamed at yourself," cried the Chinaman. "Me vely muchie mad. Me have to washie clothes all over aglain."

"I'm sorry," said the puppy. "I never thought about that and I'll lick 'em all clean."

"NO!" cried the Chinaman. "That makie muchie much dirtier. You glo home. Me washie."

The puppy saw he had made a terrible mistake, and, dropping his short tail as low as he could, he slunk off towards his home.

"Something has got to be done about that pup," puffed the General, who came running up. "I'm going right over and tell his mother."

That was what happened. The General told the puppy's mother and, according to the gossip under the rose bush, the puppy received a good cuffing from his mother when she heard the General's story.

Mrs. Mott listened no further. She restored the telephone to its hook and sank back in her chair. She felt sick. She tried to think, but her faculties were benumbed.

"When Mr. Mott comes down," she said to the maid, "tell him I've retired. I have a headache."

All that night she tossed about her bed wondering what it was all about, worrying because her husband had secrets which he did not share with her, fearing the worst, realizing for the first time in her life how much she loved him, suffering all the pangs of jealousy, and, above all—and that is what happens to thoroughbreds—all a-quiver with the rage that is born of outraged pride.

The details of his entanglement—her intuition told her that it was an entanglement—she did not want to know. Whether it was the remnants of an affair antedating their marriage or some liaison he had contracted recently made no difference to her. She felt deceived and humiliated, and she was accustomed to neither deceit nor humiliation. To reproach her husband or to demand an explanation from him never occurred to her. He had chosen not to discuss the matter with her; consequently she must maintain a dignified if somewhat painful silence. The stress of her emotions wore upon her and showed in the pallor of her countenance and in dark shadows under her fine eyes.

"Don't you think," suggested her husband one morning, "that you had better run off to the country for a little while—you and Lucille? You're not looking particularly rugged. Not worrying about anything, are you?"

"He'd like me to go away!" was her immediate thought. She told him, however, that it was but a passing indisposition and that she would be all right in a few days. And then Fate, which seems to love dramatic effects, threw a bombshell into Mrs. Mott's life.

"The cleaner come for Mr. Mott's suit," explained the maid, "and I give it to him. And he just brought back a paper as was in the pocket."

It was a bit of pink letter paper that the maid laid in Mrs. Mott's outstretched hand, and it reeked of cheap perfume. The writing swam before her eyes. In the twinkling of an instant the opening line, and then the signature, seemed to leap from the paper to her brain.

"You poor, silly boy," it began, with "Just because you're married——" close upon it. And it was signed "Alice."

Almost mechanically Mrs. Mott handed it back to the maid.

"You had better leave it on Mr. Mott's desk," she said. And then the whole bottom dropped out of her world, and she felt that she was an entirely different creature—a being who had never existed before, exactly like Mrs. Andrew Mott to all appearances, but different inside, absolutely different. To her overwrought mind it seemed that her husband's perfidy had changed her whole nature. He had secrets from her. Very well. She would have a great secret of her own.

She dressed herself with great care, humming a gay tune the while. She felt that her mind was unusually clear and that, for the first time in her life, she saw things in their true light. As a matter of fact, she was so entirely distraught that she had not the faintest conception of her real self or her real mood. She had already dismissed her husband from her mind. He was to play no further part in her life. The curious part of it was that she did not bestow any thought upon Elder. She merely intended to go to him.

It was a surly-looking Japanese who opened the door of Elder's apartment. No, Mr. Elder was not in. But if the honorable lady would step into the sitting room his master would probably arrive in a few minutes.

The room in which Mrs. Mott found herself was furnished with exquisite taste. Perhaps, had Elder known that she was coming, he might have removed a dozen or so of the photographs of pretty women that stood upon the table and the mantel. The Japanese servant bowed before her.

"I think maybe Mr. Elder with gentleman friend across the street. I go tell him."

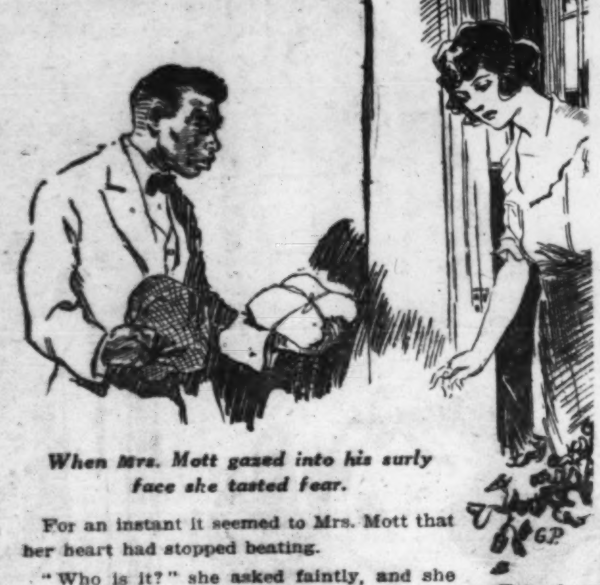
Left alone, Mrs. Mott sat beside the table idly drumming upon its edge with her fingertips, a faint smile upon her lips. She felt no sensation of excitement. It seemed to her that her mind was unusually alert and clear. Her husband had deceived her—that one fact stood out beyond all others—and she was not one of those to brook deception calmly. She must teach him a lesson. Whatever happened, he would never deceive her again.

She did not even think of Elder. In a physical way he possessed absolutely no attraction for her. As a matter of simple fact, she thought of nothing and no one but her own self. It was her self that had been outraged, and it was her self that must wipe out the stain. Wipe it out, perhaps, with a greater stain. She smiled at the thought, but it was a purely mechanical smile. The shock of this unaccustomed blow to her pride had in some unaccountable way dammed the flow of her natural feelings, cast a spell of lethargy over her sensibilities, and, for the moment, changed her entire nature.

The telephone suddenly rang. Mechanically, absent mindedly, forgetting entirely where she was, she placed the receiver to her ear.

"Hello!"

"I want to speak to Mr. Elder," came a childish voice over the wire.



When Mrs. Mott gazed into his surly face she tasted fear.

For an instant it seemed to Mrs. Mott that her heart had stopped beating.

"Who is it?" she asked faintly, and she knew the answer beforehand.

"I'm Lucille. Tomorrow's my birfday, and he's going to take me out to get clothes for my dolly."

The receiver fell from her grasp. The walls of the room seemed to revolve in dizzying circles before her eyes. All that she saw clearly was the figure of her child kneeling upon a chair to reach the telephone in her sitting room. For a moment she felt the child's arms around her neck and the pressure almost suffocated her. The tension snapped. Torrentlike, the pent-up force of feeling and instinct swept through her consciousness and almost overwhelmed her.

"My God!" she cried. "What am I doing?"

Groping her way as if the room were dark she staggered from the apartment. A low moan escaped her lips.

"O, Andrew! Andrew!" she murmured, half sobbing. She never remembered just how she reached the street. There was a taxicab passing, and she hailed it. She almost stumbled into it, gasped her address to the driver, and it started off just as Elder, with his Japanese servant running to keep pace with him, reached the door. He recognized her, gazed in stupefaction at the departing taxicab, and hastened to his apartment. Perhaps she had left a note for him.

He found the telephone receiver hanging over the edge of the table. Beside it lay Mrs. Mott's handbag. He gazed at it for a long time, and then he smiled.

"Here, Otami," he said. "Wrap this up in paper and take it to Mrs. Mott's house."

It had been a narrow escape. By the time she reached her home Mrs. Mott's faculties had returned to their normal state. The tension had relaxed, her vision had cleared, and the unrealities which had filled her mind had vanished. In their place, however, had come a realizing sense of the enormity of her conduct which filled her with horror. She felt ashamed, humiliated, and afraid. Afraid that she had within her the possibility of such an outrageous outburst as the one which had nearly swept her away.

"I must be crazy!" she kept repeating to herself, over and over again. She felt an impulse to throw herself at her husband's feet and implore his forgiveness. At that moment he could have confessed to her that he had twenty mistresses, and she would not have cared. She felt that she had stultified herself to such an extent that, no matter what he did, he was vastly her superior. For the first time in her life Mrs. Mott tasted a sense of humility. Which is very disagreeable to thoroughbreds.

She decided that it would be folly to tell her husband. He could have his Alice, could have all the Alices he wanted, but it would surely make him unhappy to know that his wife was such a weakling. No, she would not tell him. What had ever possessed her, anyway? He could never understand—she could hardly understand it herself—and it was much better to try to forget it all. She would strive in every way to make him happy, she would devote the rest of her life to atonement for that terrible impulse.

Otami, the Japanese servant, refused to give the package to the maid who came to the door. He insisted upon placing it in Mrs. Mott's hands. And when Mrs. Mott gazed into his surly face and saw, or thought she saw, a laughing gleam in his eyes, she shuddered. She tasted fear.

Of Elder she never thought. What he might say or think did not interest her. In a vague, wordless fashion, she felt that, no matter how bad he was, he must surely have sufficient chivalry in his nature to remain quiet. If he should presume upon the incident and make advances to her she would know how to conduct herself when the time came.

All that Mott observed when he came home was that his wife had recovered her former gayety and was more gracious than ever. Her nervousness and the after effects of the strain she had been through escaped his notice. He remarked upon her improved color, and Mrs. Mott, with a sigh of relief, felt that the episode had ended. And that night when it came time for Lucille to go to bed her mother almost smothered her with kisses. It was Lucille who had saved her from herself.

Fate, however, seemed to take a fiendish delight in keeping the ball a-rolling. The Motts' household had returned to its normal status; Mott's worries seemed to have disappeared, and his wife had become accustomed to forgetting her episode. She was no longer afraid, even, of Elder. From time to time he came to the house, and Mrs. Mott faced him without embarrassment.

She had made up her mind that if he ever referred to the incident she would say that she had called upon him for advice in regard to an investment. The trouble was that she could not bring herself to volunteer that explanation to her husband. Elder, however, never referred to the matter. He was something of a fatalist: if she wanted to come to him she would come—there was nothing to be gained by talking about it.

The letter was badly written. "Honorable Lady," it began. "My father and mother is in poor poverty circumstances in Japan, and I must got to send them money. Ten dollars will be enough this time. I am a good friend. Very respecifully, Otami. If you give it to the door servant I call for it."

The surly face of the Japanese, with a malicious gleam in his eyes, rose before Mrs. Mott's mental vision and made her tremble. Almost instinctively she gave the money to the maid to be handed to the Japanese. Was this to be the end of it or was she to be subjected to steady blackmail by a servant? Had she better tell Elder of it? Would it not be best to make a clean breast of the whole matter to her husband? For a week she worried over it, and then came another letter asking for $10 more, which threw her into a panic.

Mott observed his wife's agitation, but attributed it to physical nervousness. His kindness to her and his solicitude for her welfare filled her with a sense of shame which she could hardly bear.

"O, what a fool I've been!" she told herself, over and over again. "He never could possibly deceive me as wickedly as I'm deceiving him!"

And then came Fate's last prank, which upset her completely. Her maid announced a woman visitor.

"She says you don't know her and she wants to see you personal."

The visitor was young, rather pleasing in appearance, and seemed intensely nervous.

"I'm Mrs. Armstrong," she explained. "I'm terribly worried, and I've come to you because you're a woman, to ask you if you won't help me out. My husband works in the same office with Mr. Mott and they are close friends. I—I am anxious to get a divorce because I know my husband has deceived me, but the lawyer told me I must have evidence to prove it. Mr. Mott could give me the evidence, because he has been helping my husband out. I know that for a fact. I went to him yesterday at his office, but he refused to discuss the matter with me at all. Couldn't you help me out?"

"But what can I do?" asked Mrs. Mott, in bewilderment. "Are you sure you are not making a mistake? I really know nothing about the matter."

"No, I am making no mistake," said the woman, bitterly. "My husband had an affair with some woman named Alice, and they had some kind of trouble in which your husband tried to help him out. I am living with my mother now, and I want a divorce. If your husband knew how terribly unhappy I was, I am sure he would help me. But he would not listen to me. If you would only speak to him."

The woman began to cry, and Mrs. Mott, greatly agitated, promised to speak to her husband about the matter. After her visitor had gone she sat, with hands clasped, gazing blankly before her. Her husband had not deceived her at all. It was another man's affair, which probably he had had no right to discuss with her. The last vestige of excuse for her terrible conduct had vanished, and she now realized that she had only her own impulsive temper and her stupidity to blame.

The maid handed her a note. It was from Otami, the Japanese servant, asking for $10 to send to his parents. And while she sat there, panic stricken, as if an abyss had opened before her feet, her husband came home. With a wild cry she threw her arms around his neck.

"O, Andrew! Andrew!" she cried. "I can't stand it! I'm going mad! It's terrible, terrible! I've got to tell you. But I'm so ashamed! So ashamed!"

He patted her hair, soothingly. He saw that she was unstrung, but attributed it to some trivial household matter. He drew her to a couch and sat beside her, holding her head upon his shoulder.

"Surest thing you know," he said. "Telling me all about it is the best cure. Now, just take your time, dearie, and then fire ahead. And don't worry. Life's too short to worry."

With her face buried upon her husband's shoulder, Mrs. Mott, falteringly, told her story.

"I was simply crazy. I hardly remember how I felt or what I thought. I was like another creature, but I thought I was justified at the time. I wanted to punish you. I didn't even know that I was so terribly jealous."

She made no attempt to explain why she had gone to Elder rather than to any other man she knew. There are thoughts and impressions which no daughter of Eve has ever brought herself to divulge. With her face averted, Mrs. Mott could not see the frown that gathered upon her husband's forehead or the tense drawing together of his lipe.

"Did Elder ever say anything—do anything——?"

"O, no! No! Never! Not a single word. But everybody can see the kind of man he is—I would have gone to anybody. I was desperate—insane. I'm the only one to blame."

And at that moment the maid announced that Otami, the Japanese servant, was at the door. Mott sprang to his feet.

"Don't move!" he said, sharply. When he returned, a few minutes later, his wife saw that there was blood upon his hand. She uttered a faint scream.

"Nothing to bother about," said Mott, now thoroughly calm. "It's merely from his nose. He won't bother us any more."

He stood for a while, gazing at his wife and scratching his head.

"Armstrong is rid of his Alice," said he, "and if you will be so good as to leave the matter alone and not pass judgment on it, I'm sure everything will be patched up in a few days."

"Yes, dear," said Mrs. Mott meekly.

"As to the other matter, I guess point number one is that we had better cut out Elder."

"I was thinking——" began Mrs. Mott.

"Yes," said her husband. "That's point number two. I wish you would cut out a lot of that thinking and let me do it for you."

Then Mrs. Mott began to cry—not wildly or hysterically—but in an orderly, feminine fashion, which immediately made her husband feel that he was entirely in the wrong. But when he had kissed her tears away and had told her that she could do all the thinking she wanted, she threw her arms about him.

"No, dear," she said, "you're perfectly right. As long as you love me I want you to think for me."

"I always said you were a thoroughbred," said he. And he was right. Only, he never will know how right he was.

hurt my feelings," he responded. "But, Nurse, we better let our little girl drop back into the Land of Nod before she apologizes for stopping the car. That's what she'll be doing next."

"Remember, Nurse," he said as a parting rejoinder, "the best in the world is none too good for Mary Marie Marooney."

"Mary Marie Marooney, Mary Marie, you're looney, Mary Marie, you're spooney," the child repeated in a voice on the verge of slumberland.

"She has been repeating that over and over again," explained Nurse.

A week later Mary Marie, with eyes of blue like the cornflower with the sun shining full upon it, was perched up on her cot and dreamingly counting the little gray moles on the pussy willow stock which she took from the big bowl of spring flowers at her side when the door from the hallway opened slowly and cautiously. There followed immediately a wee, wan face with eyes so large and luminous Mary thought for a moment an automobile was trying to get into her room and these were the headlights. And then she laughed outright. Instead of the hasty withdrawal the owner of the eyes first contemplated, the girl's merriment changed his faltering step and he made forward as boldly as his ailing body would permit.

"What you laughing at, you silly?" was the boy's introduction.

"I couldn't help it. You looked so funny," she replied.

"Well, you'd look funny, too, if you had to stay in this old hospital as long as I have, I'll bet you. I been here six weeks, and I guess I can't never go home."

"You can't never go home," mimicked the young mischief on the bed. "Such funny language. Didn't you ever go to school anywheres?"

"Yes, I did. I bet I went to school longer than you did, I bet you."

"No, you didn't. Because I don't say 'can't never go home,'" she admonished him, more for the purpose of conversation than intent to hurt. "Did you get hit by an automobile? I did," she added.

"Yes, and I bet I got hit by a bigger automobile than you did. It was as big as a street car—bigger than that."

"Did Mr. John Henry Break—Break—Break—Does he come to see you and bring you flowers and ice cream and candy?"

"Naw. Nobody sent me any flowers. Nobody never comes to see me but my maw, and she can't just come only at night after work," he explained. "But maw wishes she could come and stay all day, she does, to keep me from getting lonesome.

"Gee," he added. "I wish there were some boys around here to play with. You're only a girl anyway."

"I bet I could pinch you and make you cry if my arm wasn't all bundled up like this. I can do it with my left hand, though. Let me show you," she coaxed.

The boy made a move nearer Mary, but she was detained in her threat by an expression of pain which shot over his face at the moment.

"I wouldn't do it. I was just trying to see if you would. But I'll give you half my flowers. I get new ones every day."

"I don't want flowers. I'd rather play games. Have you got any games we could play?"

"We could play 'maginations."

"How do you play it?"

"Well, you just 'magine anything. I can play it alone. I can 'magine I am——"

"Aw, I don't want to play it alone. Let's play it together."

"All right. You 'magine you are the doctor and I am the sick patient."

"Stick out your tongue, then," he said, falling into the game in a twink. "And don't say anything while I count twenty-five. No. Let's count together. One, two, three——

"But you gotta keep your tongue out or I can't be the doctor," he interrupted.

"I can't count with my tongue out. It has to do the counting."

At this critical point in professional treatment, Nurse appeared, bearing a tray with a dish of luscious strawberries and angel cake.

"Hello, Mary Marie, you are entertaining today? Would you like to serve luncheon to your guest?" Nurse smiled kindly.

"O, yes, he ought to have strawberries, too, because he got hit by an automobile, and Mr. John Henry didn't hit him or he'd have some himself and flowers and ice cream and everything like I have, wouldn't he, Nursey?"

That was the beginning of a courtship that lasted for three blissful weeks. True to the course that never runs smoothly, there came a day when the same automobile that brought Mary Marie there came calling at the hospital to bear her away.

There was a smile in the heart and a tear in the eye of Nurse as Mary wound her arms around her neck and told her she was an angel after all, for hadn't she made her all well and happy again?

With her hand in that of Mr. John Henry Breakwater a sob she had been trying hard to stifle escaped her.

"Joey! Where is he? He didn't come to see me today. Where is he?" she appealed to her protector.

"Let's find him," he urged.

"And take him for a ride, can we?"

"Anything you order, Mary Marie."

They found him struggling as manfully as he could with an indifference about Mary's departure which was not in his heart.

"I'm going, Joey. I'm going away to be educated. I am going to learn to play the piano and everything. I'm going to——"

By which time poor Joey's manhood had completely dissolved in a crumpled little figure buried face down and shaking with sobs.

"Come, come, Joey, this will never do," said big John Henry, folding him in his arms. "Come, now, get your hat and coat. We are going to see Mary home. Come now, Joey. Be a man. No more tears. You cannot see a perfect little lady home with tears in your eyes. That would never do."

Thus John Henry's visits to the hospital did not cease with Mary's departure.

John Henry, you see, was a bachelor, who discovered, purely by accident, that children when they are helpless have a way of attaching themselves in most irremovable fashion. He further discovered that life had a zest for him now and a purpose which he thought long since buried with the memory of the only girl he had ever loved—but that was another story.

A month after Mary's departure for a school in the east Joey was carried triumphantly home to his mother one evening. A consultation about the future of one Joseph Trenton was carried on behind closed doors that evening between Joey's mother and John Henry Breakwater.

Removing a cinder from his eye on the way downtown the next morning, Mr. John Henry stopped whistling long enough to remark to himself, "You have to keep them both good now, old man. They've got some work to do. One good one has to be kept on Mary Marie, the other on Joey."

"A promising young family I've got for a perfectly respectable unmarried gentleman," he added laughingly."

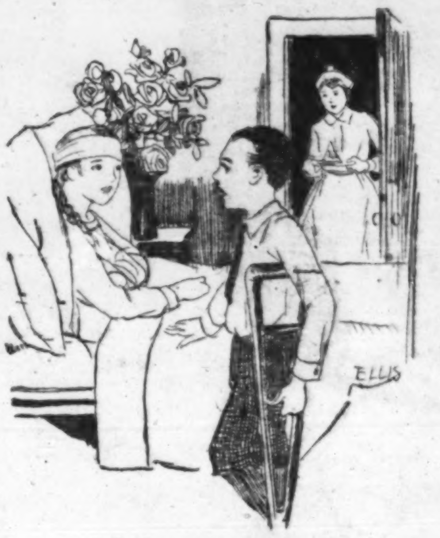
It must be cited in defense of Mary Marie, her loyalty to the mother who raised her and the younger Marooneys, four in number, nearly blocked the generous plans of her guardian. And would have but for her mother, who practically forced her into going, for that good woman's ambition was to have one "lady" at least in her family. And Mary Marie was the likeliest one of the brood.

It took a week of coaxings and pleadings to get her to pack the new trunk for the move. And it took another week of tears at her new home to wash out a sense of ingratitude toward her self-appointed guardian.

But youth, after all, is fairly pliable material for the hand of circumstance, and ere long Mary Marie was writing her weekly letter to Dear Mr. Break-no-bones, telling him what a good girl she was and was going to continue to be; how she liked Martha Horton but didn't like Marion Jennings because she told lies; how she could play the "First Waltz" with the right hand but not with the left because the notes there were so much blacker, and what a funny fat teacher she had, and hoping he remained the same, closing with a P. S. for Joey.

Home ties were not severed in Joey's case. His mother could not bear that. He was all she had in the world. So he was put into a technical school, where he was to train for a place in his guardian's business when the time arrived.

Then came a day when Mary had written to the guardian that she was a grownup young lady now, and didn't he think it was time she was wearing her hair in a French roll instead of in ribbons and braids, when a shadow might have been seen skulking along the paths of Mr. Breakwater's wards.



"Let's count together."

The "flu," no respecter of paternal duties begun, still unfinished, laid him low. Before word could reach Mary Marie the great call had come and he had answered. So quickly had he been overtaken no provision was made for his adopted children. A sole surviving brother claimed his estate.

Mary Marie found herself suddenly catapulted into a world where 'maginations had to be supplanted with the game of a cold bread and butter reality, no better prepared to face it than any other young maid in her early teens with like education.

Excepting—she hadn't altogether forgotten how to fight back when delivered a blow.

She started out in pursuit of a job. And got one—folding circulars. From 8 in the morning until 5:30 at night she folded and inserted them in envelopes, with not enough time between folds to play 'magining they were love letters or checks she might be mailing out to make people happy. So many had to be completed within the hour; so many more within the day.

And then home. Not to the home she left five years ago when she was still child enough so that the faded Brussels on the front room floor might have been a priceless carpet from Bagdad as far as the joy of tracing the motif thereon was concerned; the age when a silk embossed wall covering would not have meant any more beauty, if as much, in the heart of Mary as the huge sunflower design which was more hospitable than elegant, perhaps.

"I'm wondering," she mused, "if it would not have been better had I never gone away at all. Maybe I wouldn't have thought the youngsters so crude and unruly. Maybe I wouldn't have thought mother——

"O heaven forgive me for such a miserable thought," she pulled herself up sharply, with a heart full of penitence. "She is the dearest, most self-sacrificing mother in the whole world. She needed me when I was there—and I hope I'm punished for life if I ever let another thing like that flash through my mind. Mary Marie Marooney, what's the matter with you?" she chastised herself.

On through the rooms where the sunflowers were still struggling against terrible odds to maintain a dignity she walked hurriedly to the kitchen, put her arms around her mother, kissed her with redoubled affection, and made her sit down while she finished preparing the meal and serving it.

Mary Marie's father was not always present at meal time. Sometimes it was away into midnight when he presented himself, and then with steps none too stately. Never querulous nor ill natured, his lapses were only periodical—sufficiently often to make a considerable drain on the funds for the household.

Mary imitated her mother in a patient stoicism regarding his weakness. She set her lips with a determination to find a way out somehow. Find it she did. She studied stenography and typewriting at night. By the time she was 20 her salary was of such decent proportions as to set the wheels of her household running so smoothly that even father's lapses became fewer and farther between.

There was many a time when Mary-Marie had to resort to her "pincher" to restrain her impulse to wander about the land of What Might Have Been. Martha Horton, good, faithful friend that she proved, sent her letters from Milan, from Paris, from Brighton, describing her travels and wishing she was there to enjoy them.

And Joey—what had become of him? He was gone out of her life almost as finally as John Henry Breakwater. She saw him once after the funeral of their mutual guardian and he told her he and his mother were going west to live with an uncle. Not a word had she heard from him since.

What had he done with the years of separation? Had he grown up big and handsome, and what was he doing now? Did he ever think of the time they played doctor and sick patient?

When she was dancing with Peter Jackson or Tom Smithson, both thoroughly nice boys, whose devotion to her she could not misunderstand, a pair of great, luminous eyes would peer out of space at her and a voice say, "What are you laughing at, you silly?" And a great longing for some one or something would settle over her heart. Then she would buckle down to work again and keep dodging the subtle flatteries that lead to proposals on soft moonlight nights.

By the time she turned twenty-three Mary Marie was to her employer a right and a left hand in one. So, when an emergency arose where some one had to be sent to Seattle to investigate a doughty problem of delivery of materials ordered, Mary was sent. She was sitting in the outer office of the president's suite out there one morning when a brisk, breezy young figure shot past her rapidly from out of the door she was waiting to pass through. Her heart stopped ten beats and her voice failed to carry the name on her lips.

Her business concluded, she looked hurriedly around the great office, hoping for just one more glance of the figure that had disrupted her heart action, afraid to ask if it were he for fear she'd been mistaken.

She was stopped just outside the main door with, "You're Mary Marie, aren't you," which was not out of his mouth before she exclaimed:

"And you're Dr. Joey!"

"I was afraid to speak to you in there for fear I'd kiss you before the whole force," he told her.

"And I was afraid to ask if it was you for fear it wasn't you and for fear I'd—I'd—

He led her swiftly down to the further end of the plant, held open a door with "Joseph Trenton, Superintendent" boldly inscribed thereon.

"O Mary Marie Marooney," he turned to her. "Your name has been ringing in my heart for years. I thought I had lost you forever."

"And I thought you had forgotten me, too."

"O Mary Marie, you're looney. I could never forget you," he cried with an impetuous embrace.

"O Mary Marie, you're spooney!" she managed to say between violent blushes.

own judgments. So he went to Mike Hillis, a former private detective, now a note shaver and loan shark, told him all the circumstances, and put the matter up to him. Hillis thought a moment and then said:

"Give you a hundred an' a half for the check."

Brutt held out for $200. Hillis refused. Brutt asked $175. Hillis gave it to him.

"Now, what are you gonna do with the check?" asked Brutt.

"Cash it," said Hillis.

"For how much?"

"Plenty."

Brutt looked at his $175—a lot of money, yet not as much as more money. Had he "done himself"? Probably. Hillis would not have bought it had he not been sure to turn a profitable transaction.

Hillis refused to discuss it any further. Brutt tried to look as though he had taken all the best of it and went away.

Hillis walked briskly to the A-B National, where he wrote in $4,000, crossing the "1" with an "L." He handed it in. The teller refused it. On what grounds? N. S. F.

"I thought," said Hillis, "that Barlow's fist would be good for $4,000 here, no matter what his statement shows."

"It would be—but in this instance we have been asked by Mr. Barlow himself not to allow an overdraft."

Hillis walked out and around the corner. He entered the C-D National.

"Has Mr. Harrison Barlow got an account here?" he asked.

The clerk nodded.

Hillis scratched out the name of the other bank and wrote in the name of this one. The teller gave him $4,000 without a question. One may not tamper with a signature, with a date, with a payee, with the amount in numerals or literals on a check. But one may line out the printed name of the bank and scribble in any other without harming it.

When Barlow got it back—from the wrong bank—he whistled, then smiled.

"And I thought Brutt was a piker," he soliloquized. "For $4,000 I could have enjoyed myself that month."

THE WHISTLE by W. Douglas Newton

It Was a Soft Thread of Sound Like the Slow Thong of a Bitter Whip and It Accomplished Grim, Sinister Things

I CANNOT explain the happening. I know nothing of the science of sounds or of the dynamics of vibration. I can only tell you frankly—I saw it done.

The other guides had been "joshing" Chaveau, and I suppose it was a day when he took their jolly laughter rather to heart. The sport in the minds of the other two guides was to express playful agnosticism concerning Chaveau's "Whistle." I didn't know what they meant by that. I sat by the big camp fire smiling with the uncomprehension of one who does not understand the joke but does not wish to appear outside it.

I believe the other guides were acting expressly for my benefit. They wanted me to see this quite marvelous thing. And from long acquaintance they knew how to touch the big French-Canadian on the raw. Anyhow they teased him, and I, watching the play of emotion on Chaveau's sharp and fine Norman profile, wondered why he should take the business so seriously.

Then suddenly he was up on his moccasined feet, with the single, soundless, lithe movement that is common to all the denizens of the woods, whether they be wild animals or guides.

"Catch hol' dat log, you Louis. The one wit' de beeg flame. Hol' it—so," he cried.

Louis stood up, now not smiling at all, with a blazing branch of spruce in his fist. Mathieu, the other guide, stood up also, with his laughter gone completely and his acute countenance keen with a quick interest.

And Chaveau began to whistle.

It was a strange and rather eerie moment. We all stood there in the perfect silence of a forest night. Intense blackness was all about us. The blood red flame of the fire threw but a limited circle of light; only occasionally did a flicker flash into vision the marshaled ranks of spruce that stood on the slope above us or the harsh, stratified rock that cropped out boldly everywhere. There was not a breath amid the branches of the spruce, and the muted and enigmatical lake close by gave off not a ripple.

And Chaveau was whistling.

It was a low and awful whistle. I cannot explain it save that it struck me as a terrible thing. It was a soft thread of sound that seemed to be whipping through the night like the slow thong of a bitter whip. Gentle, low, cruel it was. I could actually feel it on my tissues. I am not romancing, I could feel it physically. It was unpleasant, hateful, and I felt that should it develop a greater power I should suffer some grave hurt. But I could resist it at this pitch. I could stand by, uncomfortable but alert and interested.

Mathieu's lips loosed a little exclamation. My eyes swung from Chaveau's face to the flaming bough. From that moment they never left the bough.

The flame on that blazing branch was acting in an amazing manner. When Louis had lifted it out of the fire it had been burning fiercely. He had held it so cunningly that the snapping flames had gathered volume and were devouring more fiercely and brightly the resinous wood. Now their fierceness was being beaten down by some strange force.

The fierce flame was jerking. It was fluttering and wavering. It was expiring and leaping to life again in queer languors and spurts. It was as though something were beating it out, and it was fighting against it with a visible effort. You know how one can smother out a bit of fire, and then, as one turns to another portion of the flame, the old spot leaps and catches alight again. That sort of thing was happening to the fiercely burning brand. And yet nobody attacked it, and Louis, who held the branch, was watching it without movement.

And Chaveau was whistling.

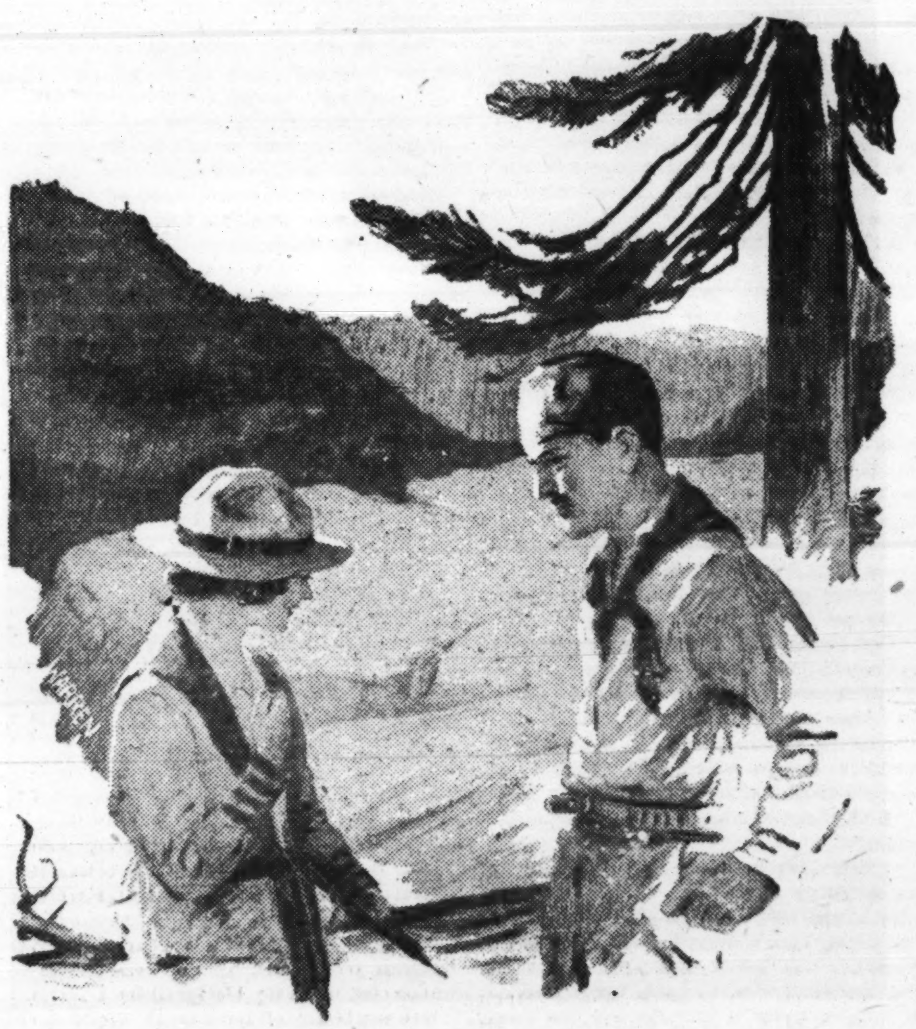
I saw suddenly that the movement of the flames was the movement of that whistle. Now and then the clear, cruel, physical notes of the whistle seemed to be directed against particular portions of the flaming mass. And the flaming mass went down under it as though a thin stream of water had struck that point. The flaming wood blackened, then the clear stream shifted to another portion of the stick, and the process was repeated. The first portion would re-ignite, but it would never catch with its old fury, and before the flames could gain strength the whistle was back again.

It was amazing, but it was happening. I would not have believed anybody if I had been told about it. I had to believe my eyes. There was nothing else for it. I stood there and saw that whistle put out the flame.

Chaveau stood ten feet away from the brand. Too far away for the power of any man's breath to affect flame, even if the spruce branch had not been burning so fiercely and his own effort so small, so easy. In those circumstances the breath he employed to whistle could not have reached the branch. Yet the flames were quenched. The whistle quenched them.

Again, I say, I do not understand the science of vibrations or sound. I simply saw the thing happen. Chaveau whistled his peculiarly compelling note and fought the flame with sound—and bit by bit the flame was vanquished. Presently there was but a feeble flicker of flame on a branch that had flared hungrily. In the end there was only a blackened branch that sent up a strong, straight coil of black smoke.

Chaveau stopped whistling. He looked toward the stick. Sent at it a whistle, a whistle on a different note. The coil of black smoke shattered and fled all whither in a thousand mad puffs, as though a devil in anger pursued each of them. With a soft laugh the strange fellow threw himself down on the heap of spruce bows, took up his pipe, and, smoking, resumed his reticent contemplation of the burning fire.



It must have been a queer love making.

The other two men flopped down also.

"Bon Dieu," cried Mathieu. "Every tam I see that, me, I feel it lak le diable is here." He turned to me. "Dat is heem, Bateese Chaveau, he is le diable de bois. Bagosh, he keel one bird with 'at whistle of hees. Mais, oui, it is me dat have seen heem do such a keel."

"Bateese," asked Louis, "could you keel de moose so?"

Chaveau shifted his pipe,

"Pourquois pas?" he said, and then went on smoking.

"But you know dat was true," said Mathieu to Louis. "Tonnerre, know you not de tam wen Bateese, he nearly keel de man. . . ."

He pulled up short, embarrassed. He shot a frightened glance at Chaveau, and I saw that Louis looked towards the silent guide with a touch of anxiety also. I don't think Chaveau had been listening (though I had, and was extremely curious). In his uncertainty Mathieu asked in a loud voice:

"'Ow long you know dat trick, Bateese?"

"Since I get born," he answered. "Do fader of me, he have it. So I learn from heem." He went on smoking phlegmatically.

"You learn it in de bois, so?" asked Mathieu, with palpable relief that his first incautious remark had not been heard.

"It is in de wood all de tam," said Chaveau. "You learn it too eef you not such beeg choomp."

When we went out after a moose in that harsh and rocky Algoma country the next morning, I saw to it that Mathieu went with me. I had come up to this lonely, wild, and uninhabited tract of Ontario after any sort of game on the wing or on the hoof. I had heard it was a good sporting place and that, also, the wild, untutored scenery of sharp bluffs and spruce filled valleys was lyric. The scenery was certainly magnificent, but I had struck a dull patch as far as game was concerned. It was because I was feeling a little bored that I jumped at the hint of drama that Mathieu's sudden confusion the night before seemed to offer. Behind that abruptly broken off sentence of the guide's there lay, I thought, a story.

We failed to track moose that afternoon, but as we walked through the woods I asked:

"When was the time that Chaveau nearly killed a man?"

Mathieu smiled back at me.

"I almos' mak tam fool myself dat tam. Bateese, he is ugly man wen dat ting come up. He try forget dat ting. Dat is how he so black an' quiet."

"Why did he want to kill a man?"

"It was de fader of de little girl he lof," he said quite simply, as if that explained everything rather than made it more teasing. I stated this latter fact in plain terms to Mathieu, and asked him to get on with it. And he did, telling the story in the delightful and matter of fact way of his kind and in the French-Canadian of his race, which I will not attempt to reproduce.

Bateese Chaveau was of the old race of woodsmen, a descendant of the old coureurs de bois. As there was now no Indian fighting, no raiding across the border, and but little fur to trap, and as his whole being and instinct forced him to remain true to the open air and to the forest trails, he continued the tradition of his forefathers in the milder modern manner of acting as guide.

He was, as a matter of fact, the most famous guide of the day. Here, in Ontario, his fame was not so well known, but in the Quebec and New Brunswick huntings, where he then worked, his name was one to conjure with. No man had a finer sense of woodcraft than he; his instinct for game was marvelous; as a guide his name had an almost magical ring.

And he carried himself as one who was great in his own right. His splendid and aquiline face showed the pride and bearing of the man. You could trace in it the blood of a race that was older than Canada, as old as old Normandy from whence French Canada sprang. He was a man of pride—quiet, courteous, full of youthful fire and laughter, yet a man of pride.

He was not one of your everyday guides. He was not at the beck and call of every man's dollars. He was the prince and pick of his company, and with him went the princely pick of sportsmen. No amateur upstarts could hope to have him as their companion in sport—for them the lesser guides. Money did not tempt him. That was why, with a fleck of scorn on his lips, he turned his shoulder on the man from Hamilton.

The man from Hamilton rustled with dollars every time he breathed. He had accumulated a vast fortune through fifty years, and somewhere after that age was meaning to spend it in a vast manner. A city man, he had come to understand that it was 'the thing' to shoot game from a camp in the wilds. Somebody had told him to go up the Little Saguenay after caribou. Bateese Chaveau had also been mentioned to him.

Flushed with the power of dollars the Hamilton man went up to the Little Saguenay and asked for Chaveau (Chaveau was then, be it understood, in that Quebec district, he only came to Algoma after). He ordered Chaveau into his presence, such was the man, and told him to prepare to take a party for camping and for shooting. He was so sure of himself in his money that he thought he had only to issue his commands to Chaveau to obtain his services.

Chaveau with an unerring woodsman's glance assessed the man and his blatant vulgarity in five seconds, and had turned his shoulder on the fellow before the stream of instructions had come to an end. He had turned about, was striding to the door of the hotel lounge, when the daughter of the man from Hamilton came in through it—faced him.

Her name, Mathieu told me, was Elena, and Mathieu also swore by St. Anne of Beaupré that she was magnificent to look upon. Never had he himself seen so lovely a girl. She was tall, she was built like a goddess; splendid bosomed, soft and yet superb in line and contour. Her head was poised in beauty on a neck strong and white and splendid. She had a face upon which man might gaze in rapture; delicate and yet firm, the features exquisite, the air proud and yet candid.

Mathieu painted her to me as a lover might paint his beloved. He said that he looked upon her with awe, as though she were some beautiful yet amiable saint. His own heart quickened when he looked at her always. It was thus he could gauge the tremendous passion that pulsed in the veins of Bateese Chaveau.

In these things the ardor of France is in the blood of the "Canayen." Love is a thing of an electric flash. Chaveau, still expressing his scorn of the father, saw her before him. He looked once at her, and his long, soft stride halted. He stood, and for a breathload of seconds allowed the rapture of her to capture all his senses.

Acute eyes like his would tell him at once who she was. To him there was never an instant's doubt that she was the daughter of the man whose very command had been an insult to his proud, independent spirit. She was the daughter of this man whose stupid arrogance had filled him with contempt. He knew that. But he knew as quickly that she was the one woman in the whole of God's world he could ever love; and he knew that if this rich city fool took a camping party into the wilds she would be one of that party.

He looked at her. Then he did the thing he had never done to any man before. He swallowed his pride, turned, and accepted the Hamilton man's commands.

You have to understand such a proud nature as that of Chaveau's to know what this humility to the contemptible meant. And if you understand that you will also know something of the huge passion for the girl Elena that possessed the soul of this man.

He swallowed his pride. He ate dirt. He took the man from Hamilton and his daughter out into the wilds. And presently, to use Mathieu's expressive words, "It is accomplis'."

about me at first, but that they were well pleased now."

"But it isn't your first real success," disputed Mary. "Your first real success began when you took hold so readily. And you have worked hard and steadily, so it hasn't come easily. It just seemed easy because you were interested."

"I believe you are right," he agreed, thoughtfully. "I never thought of it that way, but work isn't work if you are interested—the problem is to keep interested." Another pause. Then: "Mary, in your heart of hearts did you really believe I would make good?"

"I never doubted it for one single tiny instant! I just pretended I did, so you would work harder," she smiled demurely.

He laughed. "Knew me better than I knew myself, didn't you, Mary? One thing, though—I couldn't ever have put it over if I hadn't known you were here depending on me. A fellow has to have a motive for working, and you—you've been the motive, Mary." Gently he lifted one ringless hand. "Mrs.—Mortimer—Wright," he said, slowly, drawing a small box from his pocket. "You have no ring for that hand, Mary; will you wear one now? Will you stick by me always? We can be married all over again. Somehow, I don't want that first ceremony to stand in our minds as the real one."

She opened the tiny box, and, taking out the plain gold ring, turned it over and over, hesitating. "That's for you to decide."

"For me?" in surprise. "Then I'll decide right now. Put it on, Mary."

But still she hesitated. "You really want me to stay? You're not saying that just because you are sorry for me? I can always go back to the chorus, you know."

"Not much, you won't!" objected Mortimer, forcefully. "Why, Mary-girl, don't you know I want you to stay? Ever since that first morning when you stood up to me, just a wisp of a big eyed girl gambling everything on the chance that I was halfway decent, and had enough good in me to pull up, and told me you had gotten into a scrape and were going to stand by and help me out, I've seen myself as I never did before, and I've been determined to win your respect. Have I done it?"

She inclined her head without speaking.

"Then put on the little ring, Mary, and we'll keep right on fighting our way up together." He leaned closer, coaxing. "Please, Mary!"

"It isn't that I don't care," said Mary, miserably. "Don't think that. But I haven't played fair with you. Let me think it over until tomorrow. I want to do what is right by you." She held out box and ring to him. "Keep it until tomorrow, and then maybe I'll let you put it on if you still want to."

"Twenty-four hours can seem so long!" he groaned.

"You!" she exclaimed indignantly, in rosy confusion, and he roared with mirth.

So, on the next day, into the suite of offices presided over by Wallace J. Wright, came a wide-eyed, desperately calm young person.

"Mrs. Mortimer Wright to see Mr. Wright," she told a supercilious clerk calmly, and a second later stood in the private office, facing across a wide expanse of mahogany desk a big man with keen eyes and a voice rumbling out of an enormous chest.

"Well?" he said abruptly.

"I thought I ought to come and tell you I haven't played fair." The blue eyes met his squarely.

"Haven't, eh?" He studied her intently. "Sit down."

She sat down on the edge of a massive chair, looking downward at the heavy green carpet.

"Why haven't you played fair, and how?"

Mary gasped, gathered courage, and explained diffidently. "That night at your house when you ordered us out you told me to tell Mortimer he could come back alone whenever he was ready, but that he couldn't bring me. Well—" She stopped, swallowing painfully.

"Well?" curtly.

"I never told him. I—let him think you were through with him."

"Did, eh?" He was silent for a moment, but when he spoke an odd gentleness had come into his deep voice. "I wouldn't let that worry me if I were you. With all the cards stacked against you, you couldn't hardly be blamed for stealing one of the trumps from the enemy's hand, could you?"

"That isn't it exactly," she protested. "I was afraid he would go back. And I wanted a chance to help him. I wanted him to stand on his own feet. It was all he needed. He's made good."

"I know it," acknowledged Wright Sr. "I've kept up with the young rascal, and I'm proud of him." He cleared his throat. "That night you defied me, refusing my money, and telling me the kindest thing I could do for my own son was to let him alone and to disinherit him, you set me to thinking."

"You can't disinherit a man of the things he needs most," she interrupted eagerly. "Ability, a chance to use it, good health, a clean mind, you can't take those away, and with those you can win anything else worth having."

"But you have not told me why you come today to tell me you did not play fair," he reminded, playing with a handsome bronze paper cutter.

She flushed, raising honest eyes to his. "We've had an agreement, Mr. Wright, since that first day, that when he showed he could be a real man—" She held up a bare left hand. "I have no ring. He—Mortimer—wants me to wear his ring now. But I can't until I've told him your offer. It wouldn't be fair. And I wanted you to know." She stood up. "That's all. One way or another, you'll know tomorrow. I took your son away, but if he comes back you will find him a man. Won't—won't you please keep him one?"

"My dear," said Wright, Sr. gently, "come back with him. I need a little of that home treatment myself. I'm fed up on clubs, and it's a long time since his mother died. There's room for all of us."

"I've got to tell him," she insisted. "He must make his own decision. I must let him choose. In the beginning I forced myself upon him and left him no choice. Now I never could be sure he really cared unless he had an opportunity to leave me if he wished. And I do so want him to care!"

"I see," said Mr. Wright slowly, and then got up and went over to her quickly. "Bless my soul, you're crying about it! He won't leave you, my dear. I know he won't. If he does I'll make him come back, the young villain!"

She smiled at that. "But that wouldn't help any, don't you see it wouldn't? I—I've cared for him ever since the very first, and I just couldn't bear it if he didn't care."

Mr. Wright emitted a chuckle. "Maybe that hasn't been such a dark secret as you thought. I knew when you refused ten thousand cash to let him go and took him away with you—worth less than nothing, just a bundle of bad habits—to make a man out of him that you loved him, because nothing less than love could induce a woman to undertake a contract like that. And that's just why I stayed off of the proposition. I wanted to give you a real chance." He patted her shoulder awkwardly. "He'll stand by you, my dear, and we'll have another wedding. Then you can both come home."

"I hope so," wistfully. She went toward the door. "Good-by."

He called her back. "Wait!" And fumbled busily with a check book and pen. "I want to do something for you, my dear. Here's a little wedding present. Buy yourself something pretty."

She took the check with fingers which longed to refuse it, and then suddenly the meaning of his action was made clear; this lonely old man was trying to show his trust and belief in the one way he knew how. Quickly she leaned over and pressed her fresh young lips to his rough cheek. "You like me a little bit, don't you, father?" she murmured.

"From the very first," he admitted gruffly. And for several minutes after she had taken her fragrant presence out of his office Wallace J. Wright, weighty man of affairs, allowed his weighty affairs to remain neglected while he cherished the memory of a kiss.

"The young son-of-a-gun!" he exploided noisily at last. "If he doesn't stick by that girl I'll—I'll disinherit him!"

Young Mrs. Mortimer Wright returned home, where she proceeded to array herself in her very best to await Mortimer. And hardly had she seated herself beneath the pink glow of the lamp than he burst in like a whirlwind, stopping to admire her extravagantly.

"My, but we're very gorgeous tonight, Mrs. Mortimer Wright! Or are you to be Mrs. Mortimer Wright? See"—he held out his watch—"the twenty-four unending hours are up."

"I've something to tell you." Her eyes met his anxiously. "That night I brought you home with me your father offered me $10,000 to buy me off and I refused." She silenced him with a pleading gesture. "Wait—there's more to it. Then, after I refused, he ordered me to go, saying you could come back whenever you chose so long as you came alone. I—well, I didn't tell you. So you see I didn't play fair. I was afraid you would go back. But you can go now if you wish. The offer is still open."

"Alone?" inquired Mortimer Wright. She nodded. He held out the box containing the ring. "Will you wear it? I ask you again."

She drew a quick little breath. "You mean?"

"Did you think I would give you up when I've only just found you? Why, Mary, sometimes when I think what you must have gone through with that freak marriage, and me, a drunken fool on your hands, and even my father insulting you with his money, I feel as if I can never make it up to you. Father will come around, and if he doesn't—well, we'll have each other."

"He has come around," she told him, bright head pressed against his shoulder. "See, he gave me this today." She showed him a crumpled check. "And he told me to bring you home."

Mr. Mortimer Wright leaned down to her. "Do you remember what you promised me once?"

Mary dimpled enchantingly. "All day long I've been afraid you wouldn't want me to make good on that promise when you knew. Ah, Morty, it wasn't your money, it wasn't your name, it was you I needed!"

"Do you sit there and tell me you did all this for love of me?" demanded Mortimer huskily, closing his arms around her.

"Who else?" she pouted.

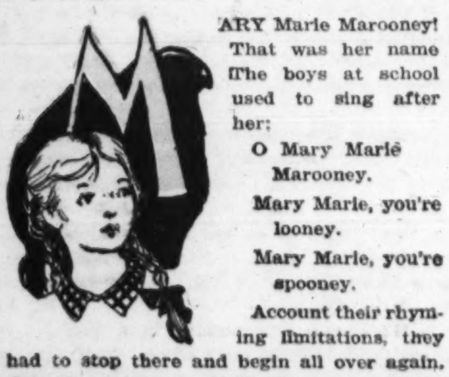
"O, girl—girl!" sighed Mortimer. "You've made me lots of trouble! Kidnaped me, took me out of my happy home, got me disinherited, but——"

"But I brought you the finest inheritance in the world!" she disputed, and they said it together, just a little word of four letters.

"Put on your ring, Mrs. Mortimer Wright" he said joyously. "Here it is; put it on!"

MARY MARIE MAROONEY

by Antoinette Donnelly



MARY Marie Marooney! That was her name The boys at school used to sing after her:

O Mary Marie
Marooney.
Mary Marie, you're looney.
Mary Marie, you're
spooney.

Account their rhyming limitations, they had to stop there and begin all over again. Providing, of course, by that time Mary Marie hadn't distorted the curves of her naturally merry little mouth into taut, tense line, inflated her nostrils, and jerked up the sleeves of her frayed blue middy blouse, which set the boys running top speed for the hole in the board fence at the back of the school yard.

Woe betide the last one in the line of retreat! He emerged none too triumphantly on the other side with a leg or an arm bearing a bright red mark out of compliment to Mary Marie's deft pinch.

For Mary Marie Marooney was not born of Patrick and Bridget Marooney with a taste in her mouth for defeat. She came from a long line of ancestors who did not spring from any illustrious branch; rather, sprang at them if the branch threatened to make life miserable in any way.

Mary's name was not all that provided the young demons with a chance to tease her. There was something else about Mary which helped to promote her pinch-hit to its exquisitely painful perfection. It grew on top of her head, this target delectable. Many a wail was evoked on account of it, a flaming thing in her early days. Not from Mary, the wails, however. "Red head, ginger bread, fire in the woodshed" would issue from some young rascal just about one second before a holler supplanted it that grew in volume as the pinch mark grew redder.

After a particularly notable victory over a boy a year older Mary, wiping the honest albeit unladylike sweat from her immature brow, was busy walking in the direction of home and mapping out in her heated young brain a line of campaign for the morrow, when suddenly there loomed up something dark and ominous directly in front of her. Before she had time to strike out with the arm well trained for defense the light went out of her eyes and her heart.

The next thing Mary Marie knew she was lying in a small white bed looking out on a world which seemed entirely surrounded by bandages. A white robed figure seemed to make up the entire populace of this new world. It approached her bedside so quietly Mary Marie was startled.

"Are you an angel?" she asked it.

"No, dear, I'm no angel. I'm just your nurse. You've been a very sick girl and you had me nearly frightened to death, but now——

"Did Jimmy James get me? He said he would get even with me for pinching him so hard. I guess he did.

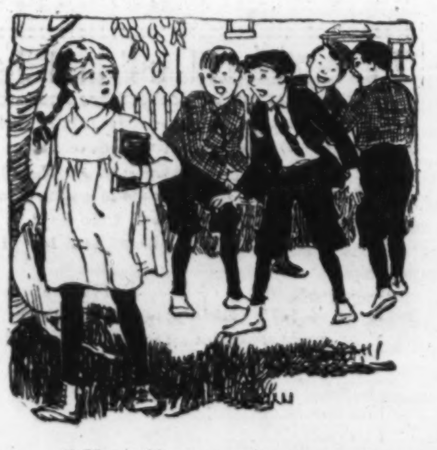
"If it was Jimmy he was in a great big automobile you were trying to fight right in the middle of the street," exclaimed nurse.

"I guess I got the worse of it, anyway, didn't I?"

"I'm afraid you did, Mary. You didn't even make a dint in the car. But you did in the heart of the man who came nearly killing you. He comes every day to see you, dear, and brings you flowers, and he is making great plans for your future. He said you were the gamest little rascal he ever saw. He is going to make you strong and well and send you away to school to be educated, and says that the best in the world is none too good for his little red headed girl.

"Did he say "red head, ginger bread, fire in the woodshed?" If he said that I don't want to be educated."

"No, he did not say that. He said you had the kind of hair he loved best in the whole world."



"Mary Marie, you're looney."

"Did he say that? Well, maybe he would lick Jimmy James for me for calling me names."

"I guess he would. He would do anything for you, Mary Marie. He left instructions that you were but to command and all of us to obey. Now, O Queen what would'st thou, for I am your humble servant. What would you like best in the whole world?"

"Ice cream. A great big dish running all over the sides with chocolate on top of it. Can I have that?"

"You can have that. Indeed you can, dear."

And Mary Marie was in the act of licking the last faint memory of chocolate from the back of the spoon when a shadow darkened the doorway and a big male voice preceded it by a room's length.

"Hello, little sister. I come to you with a heart full of apologies for what I have done to you. You've given me many an anxious moment, child. That is a selfish thing for me to say after what I did to you. But if it takes the rest of my life to pay you back in kindness for coming to life and fighting as gamely as you have done I am going to do it. Will you let me?"

"I tried to stop you from running over me—but I didn't get my arm up in time," Mary smiled up into the kindly gray eyes now bending over her. "Didn't I smash your machine ever a little bit?"

"Not even a little bit—but I came mighty near smashing every bone in your dear little body," he smiled tenderly down on her.

"I'm not very smashable, Mr. What's Your Name?"

"John Henry Breakwater. Do you like that for a name?"

"John Henry Breakbones, I guess I'll call you."

"You can call me John Henry Murderer, Mary, for that's what I deserve from you."

"O I didn't mean that that way, Mr. John Henry. I was just trying to be funny. But I 'spects I'm tired. I am awfully sorry if I hurt your feelings," she added penitently.

"You wonderful little girl. Afraid you

How it was managed I do not know. Possibly Chaveau's wisdom of the woods taught him how to act, for always in the hunting he became the companion of the beautiful girl. Always it was he who spent days in the silent, romantic, and mysterious forests as her sole companion.

The silence and the romance and the beauty of the woods; Chaveau's dark and flashing good looks, his charm of manner, the strange, wild, powerful, yet aristocratic quality of the man, the entire novelty of the whole thing in time had its effect. The girl responded. Apparently she came genuinely to love him.

It must have been a queer love making that. There must have been something rather primitive, yet rather exotic about the affair. And yet they were "Canayen" practical. Chaveau after his acceptance, after the first transports, began to discuss matters with a naturalness that must have been discomposing to the girl.

He said they must arrange for the day of the marriage and the settlements, and that he must talk these weighty things over with her father. The girl, startled into reason, tried to put him off. She pleaded for secrecy for a while. She hid the truth in her mind, and urged him not to damage the delicate pastoral beauty of their happiness.

Chaveau at first gave way, but he could not keep up the duplicity. He came of a race to which honor is a living thing. He said that as an honest man he must talk to her father. He must have this thing square and above board. He overruled her pleading. On the next day he went out with her father in the shooting and told him. He told him frankly that he was in love with Elena.

The man from Hamilton was too secure in his dollars to be even angry, at first. He said plaintly and with a few direct epithets, that these backwoods jokes were, from a Hamilton point of view, in the worst possible taste.

Chaveau in a manner which set aside all suggestion of humor, repeated his statement. The man from Hamilton let himself go. He summoned to his aid the full vocabulary of Hamilton, and it is full and extensive, and spoke his mind concerning rogues and vagabonds who dared make use of such unique opportunities as this to think thoughts concerning his daughter.

"You mistake my meaning," said Chaveau with calm dignity, and I am not going to reproduce his French-Canadian English, though that must have grated upon the ear of the man from Hamilton. "You mistake my meaning—I am asking your daughter's hand in marriage. I love her."

"You ask my daughter's hand in marriage," shouted the other, "a man like you ask my daughter's hand in marriage?"

"Yes," answered Chaveau, wondering what the other was driving at. "Yes, I ask. Why shouldn't I?"

Then the man from Hamilton told him why he should not. He gave his exact conception of Chaveau's social status. He did not mince matters. He was crude and cruel. He placed the guide exactly on the social scale. It was somewhere above the tramp and the vagabond (but not much) and rather below that of the farm laborer. He warmed to his task. He allowed the guide to see just how bitter his impertinence seemed to Hamilton. He spoke of Chaveau's life and methods of living in such a way as to make the habits of the men of the stone age seem civilized in comparison. He lashed himself into fury. It was outrageous that a man like Chaveau should dare even to think of approaching a daughter of his.

Chaveau allowed the fury to expend itself. He was in love. He could not afford to quarrel with the race of fathers, strange though the mentality of that race might seem. He said:

"Sir, my forefathers came to Canada with Champlain. You will find their names linked with De Monts in the history of Acadia—what is called New Brunswick now."

The man from Hamilton expressed his view of Acadia with a hearty oath. Chaveau held up his hand.

"My forefathers were great in Normandy before they came. They were great here. In the roll of the Seigneurs of Quebec you will find the name of Chaveau. It is an honored name. One branch of our old and chivalrous race adventured into the woods, became coureurs des bois. They remained still of the Seigneurs. They were still honored. They served their foster-mother Canada against Iroquois and New England fighters in that way. I am of that honorable branch. It is an exalted name and family I offer."

"It is the name of a scallywag—a hobo of the wood."

Chaveau swallowed even that. After all the race of fathers was a wild speaking one.

"I am not poor," he went on. "I have lived in a frugal manner, and I have added to the money my father left me." He named a sum that would have startled anybody but a millionaire. The man from Hamilton, however, was a millionaire. He said.

"Damn your dollars. I don't want to hear about your dollars. What the hell have they to do with it? It's you—you who makes me see red. You ask me for my daughter's hand. A man of your sort. Why—why if my nigger janitor asked me for Elena I couldn't be more galled."

Chaveau started back, stung.

"Me—and a nigger. You can compare me and a nigger?"

"You're beginning to see," snarled the angry father. "You and a nigger. I class you about the same."

The men stood staring at each other, deadly anger in both their eyes now. Then Chaveau, always the better able to command himself, turned and strode away.

While the man from Hamilton was trying to find his way back to the camp Chaveau had found the girl, had dismissed the guide with her, and had told her all that had happened.

The girl listened—perhaps with mixed feelings. Who knows? Perhaps Hamilton was in her blood, too, so that, while she had yielded to the domination of emotion, she yet knew all the time that, however mad and bad and glad it was, the thing could never really be. He was to her and her kind something of a pariah, an outcast, not to be considered on the same plane as civilized city dwellers.

But, all the same, she was still in love with him. The power and the fire in him still held her. She lamented the obduracy of her parent. She said that she was Chaveau's and that nobody had a right to tear her from him.

"You love me all the same?" he asked her.

"Yes," she answered, and no doubt she really believed it then. But she did not believe it as much as the passionate courier de bois to whom these things represented a fundamental, elemental right.

"Very well," he said, "we will humor your father. But if he is obstinate we will take the matter into our own hands."

The girl caught her breath.

"But I cannot go against my father," she whispered. "I love you, I will go to the end of the world for you—but my father is my father. I—I could not run away."

"No," he reflected. "There would not, I think, be need for that. Your father must be made to consent."

"Made," she breathed. "How can he be made?"

"I can make him consent," he said with the simplicity of finality.

To a girl of Chaveau's own nature and upbringing that sentence would have given fierce joy. It would have shown that in this matter of love the guide would stop at nothing—nothing at all. To one like Chaveau that would have called an answering passion as fierce. But with this girl it brought a touch of fear. She was different. She loved, but she was perceiving that she was playing with strange fires.

So she endeavored to soften him. She said that she would talk with her father. That she would plead with him, and he was to do nothing until she had spoken again.

"Very well," he answered, "but if he still refuses then we take the matter into our own hands. Love is a thing that cannot be balked. . . . I will show him tonight how strong I am."

And that night he quenched a burning stick at the camp fire. Quenched it with his terrible whistle, as I had seen him do the thing. When he had finished he told them all in his quiet voice that the whistle could be used to kill. He had killed with it. It was effective and it left no trace. It was entirely unlike the slaying of knife or gun, for it left no sign. As he said this he looked deep into the eyes of the man from Hamilton. And the girl Elena saw that look.

The next day he left Elena to speak to her father and went out with one of the other guests of the party. About midday, and out in the silent spruce glades, the sixth sense of the hunter seemed to warn him of some impending disaster. He felt the emotion of something wrong happening to him. He turned, and, with the guest toiling frantically and complainingly behind, struck straight back toward the camp as swiftly as his hunter's stride could take him.

His intuition had been right. He arrived in the middle of a camp in confusion. The order of tents and store lean-tos had gone. The camp was being struck. The man from Hamilton was running away.

His swift glance took it all in. They were there packing busily. Some of the things were already in canoes. Mathieu and other of the guides who made up the party had been told to pack posthaste, as the man from Hamilton had to rush toward the railway as fast as possible—because of his business.

As Chaveau stood looking Elena came from behind a tent, saw him, and uttered a cry of terror. Without looking round for her father she came over to him swiftly, caught his cuff, and tried to drag him into the woods.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"I have spoken to him, pleaded," she said. "It is no good."

"So—he is dragging you away?"

She wrung her hands.

"It is no good," she repeated. "I've talked to him, and he is furious. He won't hear of it even. . . ."

"So, he is running away?" he said again. He did not understand her even yet. He did not know that it was at her suggestion they were going away. He thought that it was the man, her father, who sought to thwart him in this manner. The man from Hamilton appeared on the edge of the river, his back to the pair. Chaveau's eyes flashed as he saw him. His passion dominated him.

"You love me," he said hoarsely, his eyes on his victim.

"Yes," she wailed. "I do—I do . . . but, you see . . ."

That had been enough for him. In swift strides he was across the clearing. He was behind the man from Hamilton. He stood still. He cried in a low voice:

"You are trying to cheat me, then?"

The man from Hamilton whipped round. He was still conscious of his dollars. He was even more conscious of the fact that he had a heavy revolver in his coat pocket and knew how to use it. The trick yesterday and the words that followed it had set him thinking; his daughter's hint of danger had made him think more, had made him think enough to agree with her that the best thing for all concerned would be to return to civilization as quickly as possible. Yet, though he thought this, he was still a city man, a millionaire—and armed.

He snapped with reasonable boldness—he never had been a coward:

"You go to hell. You get busy on striking camp. We're off in a hurry—see?"

"I see you are trying to run off before you have settled with me."

"I'll take none of that talk," snarled the man from Hamilton. "I'm boss here." His right hand slipped down toward his pocket.

"You will not touch that gun," said Chaveau. He made but the slightest movement of his hands. The man from Hamilton saw that the guide's shotgun would kill him before his fingers had a chance even to touch the grip of his pistol. He stood rigid, but his working lips snarled:

"I've only to shout to the men about here."

Chaveau shrugged his shoulders at the futility of that. He said in even tones:

"You will sanction my marriage with your daughter?"

"Not on your life," said the man from Hamilton with an oath.

"I will give you one chance. You know what I can do. You saw yesterday—well, I will show you. And I will ask again."

The man from Hamilton had conceived a brilliant thought. He grasped the lapels of his coat, to show that he was making no effort in offense or defense, and he began to walk over to the other guides—who were working busily and unsuspecting. As he went he snarled:

"You can't bluff me. I've told you blunt. I'll see you dead before I even start talking about such a thing."

He made three steps

Chaveau whistled.

Mathieu told me he heard that whistle and his blood ran cold. He said that, ugly as the fire quenching whistle was, the pain and terror in this one was something that made water of the soul. It was the hiss of a demon. Even where Mathieu and the guides stood the terrible and terrific sound seemed to strike and disintegrate the very fibers of their existence.

Mathieu heard the man from Hamilton scream. He looked up quickly and saw the whole personality of the man collapsing. He was making a clutch with an arm that seemed like jelly at the revolver in his coat pocket. Then his physical being caved, and he collapsed.

Chaveau stopped whistling.

They all stood gazing at the man on the ground. He twitched violently, as though he had lost control of his organs. The quiverings passed in about thirty seconds, and he seemed himself again. But he lay there dazed.

Chaveau spoke.

"Get up," he said, and such was the force in his command that the man, bewildered and shaken, scrambled to his feet. Once on his feet his individuality seemed to return. He gazed at Chaveau first in fear and then in hate and fear commingled.

Chaveau said.

"You understand now. The next time I do not stop. Now—you consent to my marriage with your daughter?"

The man from Hamilton made just one step forward. His face was wreathed in hate. His hand made a lightning dash downward to his coat pocket.

"Damn you," he yelled. "No—no; a thousand times no."

His hand was into his pocket as Chaveau whistled again.

And the whistle had a more awful note. It was keener, softer, more deadly. It made terrible the air with its monstrous magic. And again the whole personality of the man from Hamilton seemed to yield and crumple inwards. He seemed to fall within himself. He collapsed to the ground. On the ground he writhed and kicked.

And then the girl was between the victim and the slayer.

She swept in between them like a mad thing. She called,

"Stop! Stop! In the name of heaven—stop."

And the deadly whistling stopped.

They stood facing each other, those two. One panting and horror struck. One rigid in deadly calm. Then the girl said,

"I hate you! I hate you!"

"You love me," he answered her.

"No," she cried; "now I hate you. I hate you for what you are doing."

Chaveau could not understand.

"But he was running away," he said. "He was doing a dishonorable thing."

"I asked him to run away," she flashed back. "It was because of what you could do that I made him run away."

"You consented to go away—from me," he cried with a terrible light in his eyes.

"It was I who arranged this going away," she cried.

"But you love me," he repeated, dazed. "You planned to get away from me."

"I planned it," she insisted. "I want to get away. I never wish to see you again."

So, for a minute, they stood looking at each other. Then Bateese Chaveau turned, and without looking back again went straight into the heart of the spruce forest.

That was the end, Mathieu told me. He and the other guides took the party back to Quebec—the man from Hamilton was quite all right after Chaveau had gone. At Quebec he left them and returned to find Bateese. It was not easy to do that, for Bateese had disappeared.

It was only months afterwards that he found the man had come up to the Algoma country, and was hiding his heart in silence, and in his old work. Mathieu had come up from Quebec to join him. Their friendship was too old to admit a break.

"But," I protested. It did demand too much from reason. "But to kill with a whistle. To take away life with a whistle—it sounds impossible, incredible."

By that time we had left the spruce. We had come to the clearing of my camp beside the lake. As I spoke I realized that I was within sight of Chaveau, who was sitting working at a skin—within sight of him, but not within earshot.

But all the same that uncanny intuition of the woodman seemed to tell him that I was there—that I was incredulous. He looked towards me, and I felt that he knew. He looked across at a tree stump on the edge of the woods, where a little gold-furred chipmunk sat up and cleaned its paws. And as he looked at the tiny animal he whistled.

A terrible whistle, a soft and body-wrecking thing of sound. A whistle that seemed to get inside me, that seemed to be causing anarchy in all my physical fibers—a low, keen, bitter, matter-destroying sibilance. . .

And the chipmunk collapsed.

It seemed to cave in on itself—even as Mathieu had described. It seemed to fall inward onto the bank of timber. It twitched and kicked. The deadly whistling went on. With a great wrench the palpitating body fell off the bank on to the grass of the clearing. It lay still.

The whistling—thank God—stopped.

Chaveau went on with his work.

Mathieu and I went over to the chipmunk, picked it up.

It was quite dead. There was no sign on it as to how it had died.

a kiss in the spirit in which it should be given; to produce instead of wasting—then I promise to give you that kiss if you still want it."

"Whew!" he whistled. "All of that? You think something of your kisses, don't you? At any rate, you set a high price on them?"

"Yes," calmly.

"Not risking much, are you?" he smiled at her quizzically.

"No," indifferently. "For you won't be able to fulfill the conditions."

"The devil I won't!" wrathfully. "Well, just for that—we'll see! You—ah—are going to stick with me while I make good, Madam my Wife?"

She flushed at his exaggerated politeness "On certain conditions."

"I understand!" easily. "And I'll not trouble you. You shall be an own sister to me while I'm on probation." Light scorn filled his tone.

Tears of anger rushed to her eyes. "I think you're just horrid!"

"I am," he agreed. "But you picked me yourself. You've earned all this."

She was silent at that, pulling nervously at the dingy curtain. He looked around with distate. "How did we get into this far from charming abode?" His eyes went from sagging bedstead with thin mattress to ragged carpet and forlorn furniture.

"After"—she hesitated—"after we left your home we had to go somewhere. You—weren't able to decide anything, so I brought you here in a cab. This is my room."

"You poor kid!" said Mortimer Wright with easy sympathy. "I forgive you for everything. I'd have committed murder to get away from here. Pack up and we'll go to the Boston Prince hotel."

She smiled at that. "On what?" she reminded him. "The Boston is an expensive hotel."

He thrust a speculative hand into his pocket.

"I have your money," she said hurriedly, holding out a thin roll of bills. "Eighteen dollars in all. I had to take it to pay for the cab. I know where there's another suite near here, furnished for light housekeeping. We'd better take that. Then you can find work——"

He gave a wry grimace. "What kind of work?"

She considered. "What can you do?"

"I can mix a better cocktail than any of them; I can drive a tandem first rate; I pulled a good oar on the college crew——" His voice dwindled away as he recited his list of accomplishments. Even to him it was evident they were far from useful.

"Can you drive a car?"

"Of course."

"Then you can get a position as a chauffeur."

"As a chauffeur!" in horror.

She made a gesture of indifference "Please yourself. Try for something else first if you like, but when you go after a job you must have something to sell."

"I see. Well, I'll run over to the club and get some clothes; see some of the fellows and have a few drinks to set me up, and try and graft a good job." He mapped out his program swiftly.

"Listen," she came over to him, lifting slender, imperative hands to his coat lapels in her eagerness. "Your name is mine now I don't want it dragged in the mud any more. Promise me you won't drink another drop, not even one."

"Of all the nerve!" indignantly. "Kidnap me, steal a half interest in my name, and then try to shut down on my privileges first thing! I'm free, white, and over 21. I'll do as I like!"

"But you see where exercising your privileges brought you," she reminded him.

"Deliberately he gave her a glance which made the rich color rush up under her fair skin. "I see! But don't forget it also brought me you, and surely you will agree that the pleasure of your society amply compensates for everything I have lost?"

She released him with fingers which trembled slightly. "I'm sorry!" in a whisper. "I am only trying to help you, to make up for what I've done."

Mr. Mortimer Wright experienced an odd stir of compunction. "What's your name?"

"Mary—Mary Dorner."

"Mary Wright," he reminded her. "Well, Mary, I don't see but that the only thing to do is for us to pull out of this mess together since we got into it together. We'll go 50-50 and give each other a square deal."

"Then will you promise?" Her blue eyes turned upward eagerly and at her stubborn persistence in the face of his taunts a little flame of appreciation sprang up in him.

"A fellow ought to promise a little thing like that to his wife," he told her tantalizingly, delighting in the surge of color to her face. "All right, my dear, I'll promise—and I never broke a promise in my life."

"I'm—glad."

"I'm going—but I'll be back. And in the meantime you be thinking that I'm going to make you come through with that promise of yours some day. Where do I come when I come back?"

She told him. The door slammed and she heard retreating footsteps. For a little while she stood where he had left her, smooth brown head leaning against the window, blue eyes dreaming. "He's all right underneath!" she said out loud at last. "Only things were handed to him too easily for him to appreciate them. He needs a little hard sledding to make a man of him." The dimple dented her cheek. "Mary—Dorner—Wright! I ought to have a wedding ring, but I guess it's more honest not to wear one, things being as they are."

Still with the dreaming look in her blue eyes she began preparations for the transfer to the housekeeping suite.

By 5 o'clock, that hour in November when winter twilights descend upon icy streets filled with jostling crowds, the new Mrs. Mortimer Wright had the little suite scoured to shining cleanliness, the shades neatly drawn, the glaring electric light tempered with a bit of rose colored silk to inviting softness, and herself awaited the homecoming of Mortimer in a state of mind bordering on trepidation.

He was not long in coming. Footsteps echoed through the hall, a hand fumbled the doorknob nervously, and he came in, setting down two bulging suitcases in order to fasten the door behind him.

"This is a little bit of all right!" he told her with deep satisfaction.

She dimpled with pleasure. "You like it?"

"Should say I do! It's plain and shabby, but hanged if something doesn't make it look more like home than any place I ever saw before."

"Your home isn't much like a home," she suggested, remembering the Wright mansion, with its oriental rugs, spacious rooms, and wooden servants.

He frowned. "Our house was always just like a big hotel, just dad and I and an army of servants. He spent more time at the club than at home, and so did I."

"That explains many things," she said, thoughtfully. "I always thought——"

"Thought what?"

"That if you had had a happier home life you wouldn't have gone from one thing to another seeking to still the aching want of something you had never known."

"Well!" He stared at her in surprise. "You are a funny one, regular little philosopher, aren't you? So you think I was unhappy? Why, girl, I had everything in the world to make me happy!"

She shook her head. "Oh, but you didn't! You didn't have the things a man needs above all others—an interest in life, a home, and somebody to love you."

He laughed skeptically. "You're wrong. What more could a man want than to live life as pleasantly as possible? And I had a home many people have envied, for even you, my lady, aspired to a share in it. And as to the love part—why, several fair ladies have been kind enough at least to say they loved me. Money can buy a pretty fair imitation of anything, you know."

Her face went darkly red. "You don't mean that!" she exclaimed passionately. "You don't even know what love is, and you are only saying these things for the sake of argument. No real man is satisfied simply to kill time. And I didn't want your fine house——" She stopped.

"If you didn't want my home, then what were you after?" he asked keenly. "Speak up. For heaven's sake let's be honest with each other."

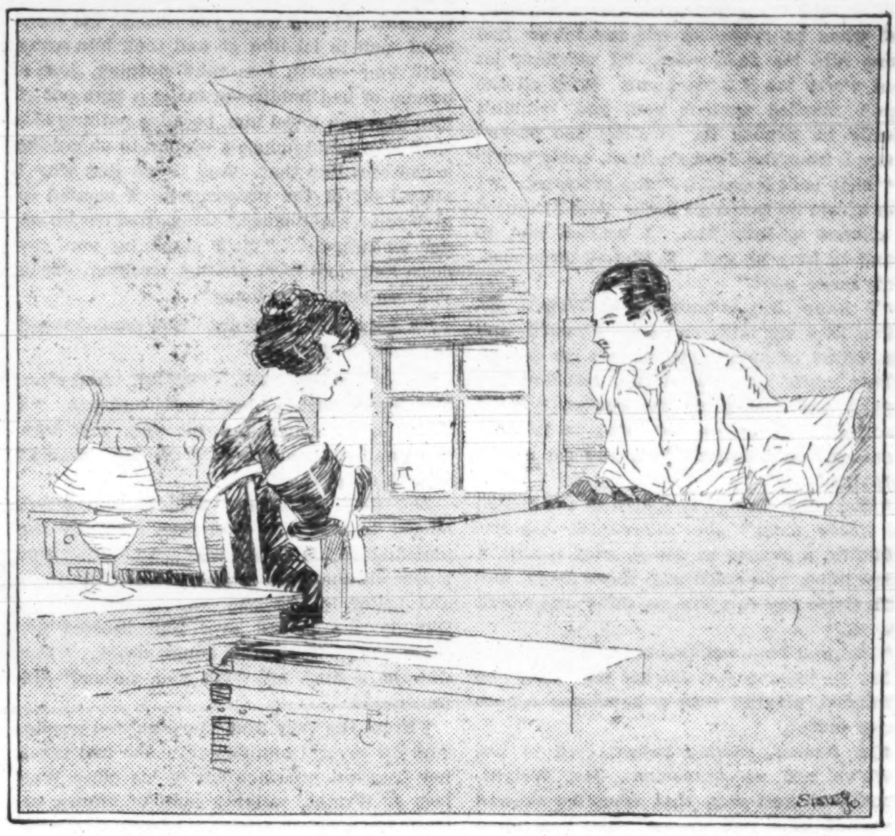
She clinched her hands until the sharp nails cut into the soft pink palms. "You wouldn't understand," she said, heavily.

"Try me," he urged. "Maybe I would."

She moistened dry lips. "I wanted to marry somebody."

"But why?"

"Because the world is a hard place for a woman alone. Marriage isn't heaven. I've seen enough to know that. But it's the best thing that has been figured out for women up to date. And the easiest way for a woman to climb up in the world is to work through some man. So, when the girls used to laugh and make fun of you behind your back——" She paused apologetically.



"Who in thunder are you?" "I'm your wife," the girl told him calmly.

Mortimer flushed a deep scarlet. "Did they?" he muttered.

"Yes. And it seemed such a shame for you to be wasting all your opportunities, throwing away your youth on a lot of painted women, who ridiculed you to your back while they flattered you to your face, that I—I couldn't stand to see such waste. I figured then you needed me as much as I needed you—that we needed each other. So——" She took a deep breath and stopped, continuing with a little rush of appeal, "Oh, wasn't that reason enough?"

"I know the rest," he said in a low tone, knowledge of the part he had played cutting like acid in his egotism. Silence fell for a minute or so.

"I didn't mean to hurt you," she said at last, with the penitent look of a child who has unwittingly given offense.

"You hurt as a surgeon does, in order to be truly kind." A pause. Then: "Tell me something about yourself." He began a tour of inspection of the room, ending up at the window.

She dimpled. "Beyond the fact that I kidnaped you, there has been nothing exciting in my history."

He smiled. "We won't talk of that any more. Somehow I feel that whatever you did was done with a good motive behind it."

"Then you trust me?" eagerly. "O, I did so hope you would! It makes things so much easier."

"Makes what easier?"

"Helping you to become a man."

"Ouch!" he winced. "That's a big contract.

"But it isn't!" she defended hotly. "All you need is some one to encourage you—a little blame when you are wrong, a lot of appreciation when you are doing well—why, you'll be surprised to see how quickly you climb once you have started."

"You really believe that?" he asked, slowly.

"Believe it? I know it!" She gave a hasty glance at the clock. "Mercy me! It's five-thirty. I've barely time to get dinner and be on time at the theater."

But he stopped her with a quick gesture. "You married me to escape from the chorus, didn't you?"

No answer for a minute, just a sudden rise of color in her cheeks. Then: "Ye-es," in a very small voice.

"Then you are not going back. You may have failed to land the matrimonial prize you maneuvered for, but this much of what you planned for shall be yours: The wife of Mortimer Wright shall not be the target for insults from men like—I was."

"But things turned out so differently from what I expected," she objected.

He pulled a roll of bills from his pocket and tossed it into her lap. "Here's three hundred dollars. Take it for expenses. There'll be more. If I might suggest"—he eyed her shabby dress critically—"you might purchase another gown or so."

"But where did you get all this money?" she asked, round-eyed with surprise.

"Sold some things. When I sell my car there'll be more."

She fingered her dress apologetically. "You can't wear diamonds on my salary and be honest," she explained. Then: "But we shall need this money until you have found work."

He smiled, thrilling to that unfamiliar "we" in her soft voice. "I know that in fiction the disinherited sons of rich men have an agonizing struggle to obtain work, during which they wear out quantities of shoe leather and join the breadline, but, as a matter of fact, when any man with many friends, good clothes, and an education goes out and shows he's in earnest, it isn't long before he lands something. I have a job."

"What!" she gasped. "Already?"

"Were you picturing a long, dreary hunt for one?" he asked quizzically. "Your worry was in vain. It isn't much—real estate, commission, with two hundred a month guarantee. But I don't think we'll starve on that."

"O!" sighed Mary weakly. All the strength she had piled up in anticipation of a long, hard struggle slipped from her now that the need was past.

"As bad as that?" inquired Mortimer Wright gently. Then, looking down thoughtfully at the lamplight falling on her bright hair. "You're a young thing; it must have been pretty tough all alone. Well, you can just forget your troubles from now on because I'll be looking out for you. Where do I put my things?"

"Back there," she motioned to an inner door. "And this door is mine."

"Right!" In the doorway, a suitcase in either hand, he turned with an infectious grin. "Better be thinking about that promise of yours, little kidnaper, because I can tell you right now you will have to make good on it." He vanished, and she heard a lusty banging of drawers and doors. Undoubtedly Mortimer Wright had come to stay.

Young Mrs. Wright blushed a little, smiled a little, and finally began to cry a little for sheer joy and relief. "I knew he could be like this!" she said softly to herself. "But he mustn't win too easily. All his life things have come too easily to him, and it's come close to spoiling him. And now he needs a bit of the rough road to travel."

If the business of living according to the alarm clock instead of his own free will seemed irksome to Mortimer Wright, he gave no sign of it, and in time the facility with which he became accustomed to a set groove of circumstances even enabled him to slightly anticipate the alarm clock. His flesh grew firmer, a sparkle came into his eyes, and he developed an amazing appetite for plain food. From being a waster he became a producer, a spender of effort intelligently applied instead of a squanderer of wealth too easily acquired. And, to his own vast surprise, he found out he enjoyed his work.

So, on a certain spring day some six months later, he came in one evening whistling. "Mary, my girl, things are improving for the Wright family," he said lightly.

Mary smiled at him from beside the lamp. Her face was rounder, the lines of worry faded away, the perpetually on guard expression of her eyes had given place to something softer, especially now, when she smiled at Mortimer.

"Don't be stingy with your news," she begged, holding up a brilliant skein of silk to the light.

"I've put over my first [illegible] deal," he exulted. "Sold the site for a [illegible] building. My first real success, Mary, and it all came so easily! Old Hartman himself congratulated [illegible]

The SOUL of a HEEL

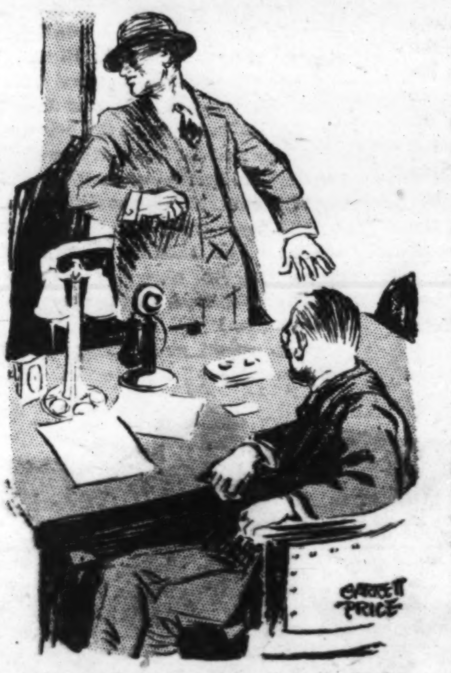
by Jack Lait

THERE have been many triliteral combinations known to fame—P. D. Q., S. O. S., F. O. B., C. O. D., G. O. P., and Q. E. D. But the one that has struck more terror than S. O. S., caused more cussing than C. O. D., and had almost as many qualified charter membere as G. O. P., is that blue notation of the teller's blue pencil—N. S. F.

In the sweet language of the banker, N. S. F., a trade term, signifies "Not Sufficient Funds." The letters are written on checks that fail to clear because they would take out more than the undersigned has in. Some people can get them cashed—some people have credit. Therefore N. S. F. on a poor man's check also means "Not Sufficient Faith."

Whatever it may not mean, this is clear: it means "Nothing doing."

There are many famous stories of N. S. F. There is the one about the lady whose check came back and, when she indignantly called up the bank and was told that she had drawn beyond her balance, she said it couldn't be because she still had four checks left. There is another about the man who found N. S. F., the cryptic triolet, on one of his "Pay to the order of" slips, and on inquiry was told that it meant "Not Sufficient Funds." He told his wife about it: "Can you imagine—a bank like the Twelfth National—not having sufficient funds to cash a check for $14.80?"



Brutt, being a detective, looked rapidly over both shoulders.

Return-trip checks, or boomerang paper, except the "No account" division, create no criminal liability except as evidence of a confidence game; an N. S. F. check is not prima facie felony; the law looks upon it as an "error," and a civil lawsuit will utilize one as a voucher of indebtedness, but a grand jury will not act on it unless there is strong collateral circumstance to support a deliberate plot to defraud.

Therefore, many honest men really grow careless and often get their bank balances jimmed; many ladies who keep books in their own darling way just guess at how much they have on deposit, and now and then a "kiting" operation gets buckled or some one issues a check with a hope of "covering" before it reaches its destination, a hope that goes wrong.

Because issuing a check beyond the signer's drawing power is no penitentiary transgression, check cashing has largely taken the place of the plain "touch." Many men cannot borrow, but almost any one can get a check honored by some one on this side of the teller's window. Few dare to pass demands on banks where they are not depositors; and, if they are depositors, that seems to give them some standing. Some men would rather die than have their John Hancocks on a dishonored check; others would much rather live.

This prologue, which might have been written by the oversigned in blood almost as well as in ink—for he has suffered—is a buffer to the start of a story. As the quick imagination of the reader may have already suspected, it has to do with an N. S. F. check. Rather, it has to do with the N. S. F. system of limiting a depositor within the bounds of his deposit instead of letting him write money like a mint. Or is it the government that writes money against the mint? Anyway, you get the idea.

Harrison Barlow was a rich man. He had assets, credit, good will, and an established name. No one ever associated him with any questionable paper.

He also had liabilities; among them was a peevish, jealous, and skeptical wife.

Mrs. Harrison Barlow did not believe that her husband spent all the time that he spent away from home in his offices and in his clubs. So she did that very unwomanly and very unladylike thing: she engaged a private detective agency to spy on her husband.

Sherlock Holmes and other private detectives have been immortalized and idealized. There are men like Pinkerton who accept certain decent lines of investigation and remain honorable. But it is no libel on the profession to state, after years of close observation and intimate contact with volunteer gumshoers, that the large body of them are of an unsavory order, ranging from swill-skimmers to blackmailers. Judges warn juries that their testimony is to be regarded with reservation and suspicion. Juries and prosecutors and newspapers sniff at their statements and usually smell something rotten there. The official police hold them in cold contempt.

Harrison Barlow shared the common opinion of the lot. And there was a sneer of displeasure, mingled with an expression of curiosity, as he sat at his desk waiting for the undersecretary to usher in the man whose card lay on his desk—Taylor Brutt, representing the Acme Detective Service.

Brutt slouched in. Barlow looked up, expectantly. Brutt, being a detective, did not forget his detecting. He took in the office with a comprehensive glance, sized up the fittings and proportions with studied and posed pains, looked rapidly over both shoulders to see whether any one else was in earshot, then slipped oilily into the chair.

"You wanted to see me?" asked Barlow.

"Mr. Barlow?"

"Yes—Harrison Barlow."

"How do I know you are Mr. Barlow?"

"Who gives a hang whether you know or don't know? I didn't send for you. As far as I know, I have no business with you. You sent your card to me. If you have anything to say that you think I will listen to, proceed; but don't put on your cheap tin star mysterious stuff with me. What do you want?"

"You're Mr. Barlow, all right. Nobody but a rich man would feel so sure of himself when a detective asks to see him."

"My wealth, as far as I can see, is none of your affairs; and if you are a detective that is between you and yourself. I never heard of you or your alleged agency. Kindly omit the comments and state plainly what you want—or get out."

"Thanks; I will."

"Will which?"

"State what I want. That is, I don't exactly know what I want—that is, how much I want. That is for you to decide."

Barlow rose. "That sounds to me like a shake-down of some sort. What its basis can be I have no idea. But, before you tell me, let me tell you: if you've come here to blackmail me you're in the wrong nest."

"My dear Mr. Barlow, where do you get this blackmailing stuff? You were never further from the facts in your life. I can do you a service, and, like most people, when I have services for sale I ask a price—that's all."

"I don't want any detective work done."

"This isn't detective work—exactly. You may not be so rough with me when I tell you that Mrs. Barlow has hired detectives to follow you wherever you go."

"What!"

"Just that. And I'm the man assigned to the case—I'm the operative what tails you an' trails you an' writes a report every night of all your actions. A duplicate o' that report goes to Mrs. Barlow."

"How long has this been going on?"

"It hasn't been—it's just gonna c'mence. Us boys don't pick up plums like Harrison Barlow every day. So I says to myself that I think I can make a deal with you, see? If I would o' shaddered you first, then you'd o' said I was tryin' to give you the shake becus I had it on you. But I come to you before I begun."

"And what is it? What do you want? What can you do for me?"

"Well, I've already done a good bit for you, slippin' you the tip-off that you're to be watched. So now you can act accordin'—see?"

"I shall act just as I would have. I have nothing to hide, though it is a rather sheepish sensation, I fancy, to know that one is being bloodhounded about."

"Suit yourself about that. Now, then, my offer is to sneak a copy of each report to you, so that you'll know exac'ly what goes to your wife. Bein' warned, you'll nach'rally see that nothin'll be done that'll make a bad report. But, if you wanna lose me for an hour or so any time—well, I'll listen to reason, gov'nor. Now, ain't that worth somethin'?"

Barlow drew up, and for a few minutes he sat in thought.

"Brutt," he said, "I ought to kick you out of my office. You are a rat that isn't on the level even with the dirty business you typify, that isn't faithful to the scavenger who employs you or to the misguided person who pays you.

"But I have a weak human curiosity to see reports on myelf and to know what my wife reads about me. I shall not betray you either to her or to your agency. I intend to feel no gratitude toward you, and you needn't expect any. But I will pay you—that is, I will tip you.

"How much do you want, demand or expect?"

"Oh," said Brutt, "I leave that to you. Pay me what you think it's worth. You know better than what I do what the reports is gonna say if they're on the square, an' what you wanna have 'em say if I shade for you."

"Let me repeat, there is nothing in the reports that I want except the truth and all of it. As for the value of knowing what's in them, that will lie entirely in my assuring myself that you are not lying. And I suppose that the only way now to prevent your lying is to pay you off. You should know what that is worth, having probably set a price on that sort of work before."

"Well, it depends on two things—how much there is to keep quiet an' how rich the party is."

"There is nothing to suppress, except slanders. As for my wealth, how much do you suppose I am worth, as a basis for estimating what I should give you?"

"Oh, I don' know—they call you a millionaire."

"They do, eh? Perhaps we had better not go too deeply into that. Tell you what I'll do.

"You come in here one month from today. If I shall have had my daily report duplicate during that time, and I find that each report is true in every detail—unsparingly, unwaveringly, and uncompromisingly true—I shall, within reason, let you name your own fee. You understand—fix your own value on your own services to me. Is that satisfactory?"

Brutt backed out, bowing, saying it was more than fair—nothing could be fairer.

During the succeeding month Barlow received in a plain envelope, daily, a thin sheet bearing a copy of one which went simultaneously to his wife. He believed that the copies were true, as they undoubtedly were, for he knew his wife well enough to know that had she received damaging statements he would have heard from her. His conduct during the month was exemplary.

One the thirty-first day Brutt called. "How was them reports?" he asked.

"They were correct."

"You bet they was, what's my hand-out?"

"I told you you could name your own, within a limit."

"Well, what's the limit?"

"Ah, you'll never know. I have arranged as follows: I opened a checking account in the A-B National bank for this purpose. I deposited there a certain sum of money. I have here a check against that bank, made to the order of Bearer, with my signature on the proper line."

"Yeh—but it don't say how much."

"No. You are to fill it in."

"Well, how can I fill it in if I don't know how much is in the bank?"

"That is for you to worry about. If you write in a sum larger than the check is good for at that bank, it will be turned down, N. S. F., and will be valueless. You cannot sue me on it as you cannot prove consideration—the law would not call what you did 'Value received.'"

"An' if I fill it out for less I'm cheatin' myself."

"Quite so. Now, there is no use in your trying to get any inside information from any of the clerks or employés of the A-B bank. The president is a close friend of mine, and I have had him instruct every attaché that if he violates the banking law by exposing the amount a depositor has in the bank, especially in this instance, it will mean dismissal and disbarment from any other bank in the national alliance. You need not snoop around my confidential employés, either, because in the first place they would not tell you if they knew, and in the second they have no way of knowing, as I made the deposit in currency."

"Then how do I guess?"

"By your judgment—your judgment of me and yourself, to guide you in your judgment of what I think you think this underhanded piece of treachery is worth. Here's your check. I assure you I am not hoaxing you. It is good for what I think I owe you—and no more. Good day."

Barlow had that morning faced his wife with his knowledge of her surveillance on him, and had commanded her to withdraw the sleuths, which she had done.

Brutt walked out, blowing on the check. His head was in a whirl. He had no idea whether the paper was worth $10 or $1,000—or maybe more. Barlow was a millionaire; true, he obviously disliked Brutt, but who knew what a millionaire's estimate would be in the circumstances?

He pondered and pondered and writhed and writhed. Then he got an idea. He walked feverishly to the paying teller's window in the bank, pushed in the check, and said: "Mr. Barlow wants to close this account. Please fill it in for the amount to his credit and give me the money in large bills."

The clerk examined the paper, then snipped it back.

"Don't make me laugh," he said.

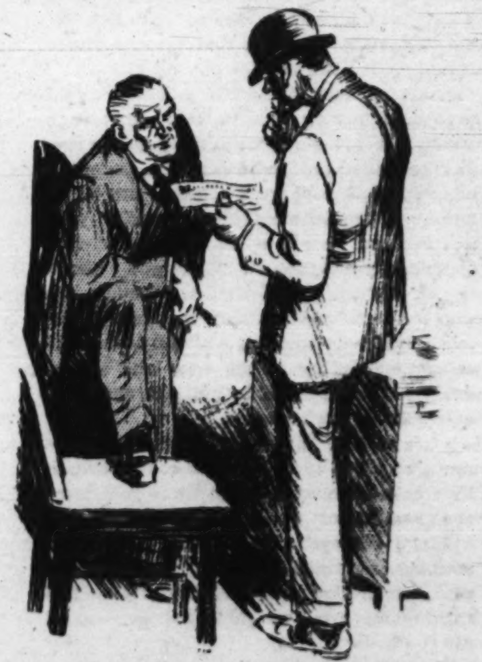
Brutt put his nose between the bars and whispered:

"They's a suit o' clo's in this for you—an' it ain't nothin' queer or crooked, if you'll gi'me a hint on how much this runs for. You see, it's mine, an' if you think I didn't get it on the level you kin call up Barlow. Only he's a kidder, see? Now, this chunk was put in here jus' for me, but Barlow is havin' some laughs seein' how much I'm gonna nick him for. He owes me his life. He wouldn' care."

The teller pressed a button under the window, and the bank policeman came double quick.

"Throw this heel out of here," said the teller. "He's trying to bribe me to expose forbidden secrets."

Brutt was on the sidewalk before he had time to swear. He returned to his room. He knit his brows and he poured perspiration. He decided alternately that the figure he had fixed on was too much and not nearly enough. Had Barlow given him $100 that morning he would have been overjoyed. Now—what if he was at the threshold of $1,000? He had never had $1,000. Was it worth the gamble? It certainly was, and it was not likely that Barlow would open an account with less or rate Brutt's help at less. No. Barlow had sneered at him. Barlow disliked him pointedly. He had probably stuck in $50 or some other low amount to trick Brutt into taking a picayune or losing even that.



"But it don't say how much."
"No. You are to fill it in."

For two days he trembled over that check. He lost sleep and neglected meals. Once he had fixed on $100 as a safe medium, and had written the first cipher—"1." Then his hand stopped and he realized that he had now limited himself to $10, $100, or $1,000. With 1 for the first figure, those were the only choices now. Chances of $250 or $500 or $800 or $999 were gone.

He cogitated and cogitated. It was too much for him. He had no confidence in his

Don't figure we are going to pull this thing without trouble. Harry Van Horn's got a good guess that Hawk is pretty well shot up, and that he's hiding out. He knows a man can't hide out without friends."

"I grant you that," interrupted John. "But if you can get him across the Crazy Woman, Jim, it's a cinch to run him into town."

"Don't figure that every mile of that road isn't watched, for it is. I ride it oftener than you and I see plenty of sign. And Harry knows what a rainy night means just as well as we do. He'll be on the job with his men—that's all I'm saying. Now, go ahead. You want Hawk brought in—that's your business. I'm here to bring him in—that's my business. Shoot."

Laramie and Lefever arranged things. Number Seventy-eight, the through fast freight, would be due to leave Sleepy Cat for Medicine Bend at 4:32 in the morning. The crew were friendly. Could Laramie make it with Hawk, starting by midnight? He could. It was impossible to meet Laramie outside town, because no one could tell which trail he might have to choose to come in on. But Sawdy and Lefever could look for him out on the plateau at the head of Fort Street. Henry Sawdy, his heavy mustaches sweeping his thick lips and his bloodshot eyes moving from one to the other of the two faces before him, only stared and listened.

"Why don't you say something, Henry?" demanded Lefever exasperated.

Sawdy turned a reproachful look on his lively partner: "When you're talking, John, there ain't no chance to say anything. When Jim's talking I don't want to say anything."

Laramie ordered his horse, got into oilskins, and, riding out the back way of the stable, started for the Falling Wall. The day was spent and the rain had turned soft and misty. He rode fast and with a little watchfulness, exercised before reaching the Crazy Woman, satisfied himself that he had not been followed out of town.

What had actually happened was that he rode north not long after Kate herself started for home. But Laramie followed old trails out of town—even at the price of rounding fences and at times dodging through wire gates for short cuts. Night was upon him when he reached the bluffs of the creek. Between showers the sky had lightened, but the north was overcast, and Laramie knew what to look forward to. When he had got up the long hill and reached the northern bluffs it was raining steadily again and night had spread over mountain and valley.

Abating something of his usual precaution in riding to reach Hawk's hiding place, Laramie went slowly into the bad lands by a route less dangerous than that he usually followed. As the night deepened, the wind rising brought a heavier rain. The trail became increasingly difficult to follow; rough at best, it was now almost impassable. Sheets of water trickled over stretches of rock, causing the horse to slip and flounder. In other places rivulets shooting out of crevices cut the loose earth from under the horse's feet. Leg-tired, the horse finally resented being headed into the driving rain and went forward slipping, hesitating, and groping like a man on hands and knees.

When Laramie got him to the old bridge the pony was all in. Laramie found shelter for him under a ledge and, rifle in hand, clambered along the side of the canyon toward the abutment. Close to the entrance he set his rifle against the rock, listened carefully, as always, felt down at his feet for the few chips of rock he had so placed that they would be disturbed if trodden by an enemy, listened again carefully, and, with his revolver cocked in his right hand and the muzzle lying across his left forearm, Laramie slowly zigzagged his way to the inside. Once there, he stood perfectly still in the darkness and called a greeting to Hawk. He failed to receive the usual gruff answer. This never before had happened, and, without trying for a light, Laramie moved slowly and with much caution over to the recess within which Hawk lay. There he could hear the cowboy's labored but regular breathing as he slept. The storm, waking the water crevices of the mountains into a noisy chorus, had lulled the hunted man into an untroubled sleep.

Laramie shook his oilskins in a heap on the floor, cautiously lighted a candle, and set it on the board that served as a table. In spite of his slickers he was wet through. He hung his hat on the end of a broken timber and laid his revolver beside the candle. Bethinking himself, however, of his rifle, he picked up the six-shooter again, stepped outside the entrance, brought in his rifle, wiped it, stood it in a convenient corner, and turned toward Hawk.

THE INHERITANCE OF MORTIMER WRIGHT

by Jay Gelzer

PEOPLE who knew young Mortimer Wright were apt to smile at the mention of his name, tolerantly, even good humoredly, but with a tinge of easy contempt. He was popular, he was a good companion in his gay, joyous, high spirited youth, but—well, there must have been times when his father, smoking alone in an armchair at the club, thought ruefully of another pair of merry gray eyes, and from the bottom of his troubled heart would give out something like this:

"If you had only lived"—puff, puff, puff—"maybe it would have been different." Puff, puff, puff. "But I hadn't the heart to be severe with him—he looks too much like you." Puff, puff, puff. "And because I love the young scamp, whatever he does!"

And that was just it. Whatever young Mortimer Wright did, people passed over it tolerantly, except for that slight tinge of easy contempt.

But all this was before the interference of Mary Dorner, back in a period fast receding from memory, in the days of the joyous wine cup, when lobster, gold necked bottles, and chorus girls formed an inevitable, close association, before the days of per cents and near beverages, in the very heyday of the reign of jazz.

On a chill November morning Mr. Mortimer Wright, opening bloodshot eyes to the familiar accompaniment of a throbbing head, reaching an unsteady hand for the pitcher of ice water beside his bed in an effort to connect up dimly remembered events of the night before with the gray present, experienced something of a shock. Everything was strange to him. Gone were the rose silk hangings of his bedroom, gone was the pitcher of water which should have been awaiting him, gone even—so his aching body told him—was the familiar and luxurious softness of his bed. It was, so his incredulous eyes told him, a perfectly strange bedroom he had awakened in. A most unattractive bedroom, with dirty wall paper, a cheap green painted bed from which the paint peeled leprously and shabby pine furniture masquerading as oak. Undoubtedly Mr. Mortimer Wright would have closed his eyes upon these horrors immediately except for the astonishing presence immediately opposite him of a perfectly strange girl, a slender, blue eyed young person resting a round chin in a cupped hand, from which position she studied him with dispassionate eyes holding no emotion whatever from which he could gain a key to the situation.

Mortimer Wright stared at her blankly, endeavoring to recall from the chaos of the night before something which might help him to identify her, gave it up as hopeless, and sat up awkwardly, to find himself fully dressed in evening clothes, except for his collar and tie. To find himself in evening clothes with broad daylight streaming in on him was a disconcerting experience, and he felt it placed him at a disadvantage. Furthermore, the girl's continued silence rasped on his out of tune nerves. To the best of his knowledge he had never laid eyes on her before, and awakening in a strange bedroom to be confronted by a stranger whose attitude was vaguely suggestive of a jailer was, to say the least, startling. Something of all this he conveyed in the question he put abruptly:

"Who in thunder are you?"

The answer he received was hardly calculated to allay his gathering alarm.

"I'm your wife," the strange girl told him calmly, even indifferently, her blue eyes serene and untroubled.

"My—what!" exclaimed the astounded Mortimer Wright. Then, hopefully: "You are joking."

"O, no!" she assured him, drawing from the bosom of her shabby dress a document which even to his inexperienced eyes looked oppressively genuine.

Mortimer passed a nervous hand over his head apprehensively. "Er—could you tell me?" he ventured politely.

"When we were married? Certainly. Last night you gave a party to the chorus of 'The Bluebird Lady'——"

"I remember the party!" interrupted Mortimer. "At least I remember the beginning of it."

"It was a very noisy party," she informed him with a distinct tinge of disapproval. "And you had a great deal to drink."

"I'm very sure I must have had," he grimaced.

"Exactly." Her cool blue eyes took in his disheveled condition disdainfully.

Hastily Mortimer felt of his bare throat, located his collar and tie with his eyes, and got up. "You'll excuse me?" he asked with mock politeness, and put them on.

"O, certainly!" she dropped her eyes.

"And the rest of the—er—adventure?" he reminded her.

"Toward the end of the evening, when you were—were not quite yourself, you stood up on the table and announced there was only one thing in life you hadn't tried and that the time had come to try that. Then you threw your watch in the air, saying you would marry the girl who caught the watch."

Mortimer groaned ruefully. "I must have been drunk," he admitted.

She held out a handsome gold watch to him in one slender hand. "I got the watch."

"I see." He wrinkled his brows thoughtfully. "But I don't seem to remember you," he hazarded at last.

"Third from the end, last row of the 'Bluebird' chorus—I'm thin," she explained succinctly. "You invited the whole company."

A pause while he digested the unpalatable information she had given him. The blue eyed girl sat stiffly in her chair, eyes looking out over the untidy roofs to be seen through a window opaque with dirt. Presently she got up and went over to the window, standing with her back turned to him.

Freed of the scrutiny of her eyes, he in turn studied her closely, from the plainly arranged brown hair to the small feet in shabby clothes. For some obscure reason her very shabbiness was reassuring to him.

"And we were married?" he questioned finally.

"Over in Jersey at midnight."

"But it isn't legal!" he cried hotly.

"Indeed it is," indifferently. "I saw to that." Her voice was tired and he could not help but reflect that she must have sat there in that uncomfortable chair all night waiting for him to come out of his heavy slumber.

"And what do you expect to get out of this?" he asked abruptly.

She faced him at that. "I want to get away from the chorus. And you looked like a good opportunity to me." She shrugged her shoulders as if denying further explanation and turned back to the window, pulling at the imitation lace curtains.

"So that's it, eh!" retorted Mr. Wright. "Permit me to inform you that when my dad gets through raising merry hell about this you won't think I'm such a grand little opportunity."

"He has already finished."

"Wha-at!"

She nodded. "You insisted on going home last night and taking me with you. He——" she halted at a memory plainly painful to her. "He put us out and told me to tell you he was through with you."

"He doesn't meant it," confidently from Mortimer.

"But I'm afraid he does," quietly.

"O, my Lord!" groaned Mortimer, his conviction that he had made an utter fool of himself gaining force. "I've done it this time. He told me if I got into the newspapers once more he was quits."

She nodded toward the cheap pine dresser. "There is the morning paper."

He picked it up guiltily, and from the front page screaming headlines leaped at him: "Millionaire Roisterer Weds Chorus Girl; Father Disinherits." The paper dropped from his listless hand. "This means the end," he said moodily. "I've less than $50 in my pockets."

"Less than twenty," she told him. "But this is the beginning and not the end."

Recalled to recollection of her presence, he turned resentfully on her. "Were you drunk also?" he asked bitterly. "Or are you out for blackmail? If so, you're wrong, for the old man won't try to buy you off now. He's done with me."

She winced at the violence of his tone, shrinking back. "He offered to buy me off, as you put it, last night. And I refused. Then he ordered us both out. And I don't drink. I'm on the water wagon forever," she said in a spent little voice. Blue shadows of exhaustion rimmed her eyes, blurring the vivid youth of her face.

"You spoiled my chance of patching it up?"

"Yes."

"But for God's sake, why?" he exclaimed in exasperation. "What's your little game? I can't make it out. I know you don't care anything about me."

She hesitated. "I'm tired of being a chorus girl, insulted by every traveling man who thinks the way to see high life in New York is to ask a chorus girl out to supper, when all the time he's carrying a photo of his sweetheart or his baby in his pocket and is shaking in his shoes for fear somebody from the home town may see him. I'm tired of all that. And I know you if you don't know me. I've heard lots about you, and I can see that you haven't a chance in the world to make a man out of yourself if some one doesn't help. Well, I'm going to be that some one. I can't get up alone and neither can you. We need each other."

Mortimer Wright drew a long breath of utter amazement. "And you mean—you actually mean that by gyping me out of my home and my prospective fortune you are helping me! Well, of all the nerve!" He hunched a hostile shoulder toward her, perceptibly sulking.

"I am helping you," she said steadily. "The first thing any man has to learn is how to stand on his own feet. You will have to learn that now, and you never would unless you were thrown on your own resources."

"So you think hustling for a living is going to be good for me, eh?" retorted Mr. Mortimer Wright with outraged dignity.

"I know it is," confidently. She appraised him with critical eyes. "You've a lot to learn and a lot to forget, but there's good stuff in you."

A fugitive dimple dented the corner of her mouth and the not unpleasant realization came to Mortimer Wright that she was delicately pretty, with lovely modeling of throat and chin. Unexpectedly he had a sudden impulse to kiss that slender white throat.

"But where do you get off now?" he asked with a perplexed smile, smoothing his rumpled black hair with his fingers. She offered him a rhine studded comb silently. He took it, used it, and handed it back with an amused look. "You know," said Mortimer Wright with a malicious glimmer of enjoyment, "it's rather a good joke on you, isn't it?—expecting to marry the only son of a rich man and ending up tied to a pauper who can't even earn his own living! You'll pull out now, of course?"

She considered, knitting her arched eyebrows in deep thought. "No," she decided at last. "I'll stick. You see, I feel that having dragged you into all this trouble I've got to see you through it. It wouldn't be good sportsmanship to get you into a hole and not get you out."

"Well, I'll be—be blanked!" exclaimed Mortimer helplessly. "You're a queer one with your notions of what's sporting and what isn't. What makes you think I'm going to let you stick?"

She flushed, then gave a propitiary little smile. "You are going to be so lonely you'll be glad to have me stay," she told him.

"That's pleasant!" he declared shortly, and then watching the slow scarlet blot out the stray half dozen freckles on her straight little nose, his mood changed. He gave a gay, reckless laugh and move toward her, putting heavy hands on her slight shoulders. "I'm glad you are not one of the 'I seen I done it' kind," he chuckled. "And if you are too thin for the beauty row of the chorus you're a pretty girl anyhow and a darned clever one. Since you've robbed me of a fond parent and a fortune I'm going to look to you to make up for it. You owe me something, you know." He leaned down toward her, and immediately found himself caressing a cheek branded by a stinging slap.

"O!" she said helplessly. "O!"

For a minute they stared at each other, her face paper white, blue eyes wide, an ugly smile twisting his lips.

"So you're a welcher, too, eh?" he asked sarcastically, and then he saw something which drove the smile from his lips. The sapphire blue eyes were bright with tears and behind them was a real fear.

All that was good, all that was generous in Mortimer Wright came immediately to the surface. "Don't be afraid," he said more gently. "I was only going to kiss you. I'm a gentleman, not a kidnaper. Really, of the two of us you are the kidnaper." He tempered his words with a smile.

She drew a quick breath of relief. "I'm not afraid," she told him stiffly. "But if you want that kiss you'll have to earn it."

"Earn it?" He was puzzled. The girls he had known had been more than glad to kiss Mortimer Wright.

"When you've learned to be a man instead of an animal with appetites; to give or accept

THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father,

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before and about whom the girl knows little or nothing. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he offers his daughter a home at his ranch, and here she quickly adapts herself to her surroundings with the aid and friendship of

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood who runs an eating house in Sleepy Cat Junction, the nearby town. Kate hears mystifying references to her father's affairs from

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman, whom she likes, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seem to be sharp differences of opinion. A bitter war is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country, and Laramie's position in these feuds is a matter of some doubt. Kate is inclined to be hostile when she meets him, but Laramie falls in love with the girl, and in spite of herself she is interested. Then Laramie bluntly refuses an invitation to line up with Doubleday and his men in the cattle fights, and war is declared. Doubleday and Van Horn organize a raid on the Falling Wall country, where Laramie lives, directing their operations chiefly against

ABE HAWK, known as a cattle rustler and "bad man," and three of his associates—Dutch Henry, Stormy Gorman, and Yankee Robinson. In the fighting Dutch Henry, Gorman, and one of Van Horn's men are killed. Hawk gets away, badly wounded, and with the aid of

JOHN LEFEVER, the marshal, Laramie covers the outlaw's escape to an inaccessible retreat in the foothills, thus incurring the open enmity of the Doubleday outfit, who have their suspicions as to who is protecting Hawk. The same night Laramie goes to the office of DOC CARPY, the town physician, to "steal" medical supplies for the wounded man. Carpy is friendly, but Laramie does not want to involve him in the fighting. In the doctor's office Laramie unexpectedly encounters Kate, who denounces him bitterly and charges him with "harboring cattle thieves." Much dejected over the apparent wreck of his love affair, Laramie makes his way to Hawk's hiding place, dresses the outlaw's wounds, and then goes home and to sleep.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

The Shot from the Roadside.

IN getting home safely, Laramie had not flattered himself that he was not actually under what in mountain phrase is termed the death watch. In matter of fact, Van Horn and Doubleday had gone home to stay until the excitement should blow over. But they had left Stone and two men charged with intercepting Laramie on his return. The investing lines had not, however, been skillfully drawn and Laramie had slipped through.

He slept undisturbed until the sun was an hour high. Then, peering through a corner of the blanket that hung before the window, he saw Stone and two companions half a mile from the house, riding slowly as if looking for a trail; particularly, as he readily surmised, for his own trail. As to his horse betraying him, Laramie had no fear, knowing the beast would make straight for the blue stem north of the hills. It was no part of Laramie's plan of defense to begin fighting or to force any situation that favored him—as he believed the present one to do.

Few men that knew his enemies would have agreed with him in this view; they would, indeed, have thought it extremely precarious for Laramie to be caught in any place he could not escape from unseen. But Laramie was temperamentally a gambler with fortune, and he put aside the worries that occasionally weighed on his friends. Standing at his one small window—though this was by no means the only peephole in the cabin walls—he watched without undue concern the scouting of the trio, who beyond doubt had been hired to kill him and were only waiting their chance.

After a long inspection of the ground—much of it out of sight of the cabin—broken by frequent colloquies, the three rode from the creek bottom out on the upper field and, halting, surveyed the distant cabin with seeming doubt and suspicion. Two of them reined their horses toward the creek. The third man spurred up the long slope straight for the house.

This put a different aspect on things. Laramie tightened a little as he watched the oncoming rider. If it should prove to be Stone—he hesitated at the thought, deciding on nothing until sure who the man might be. But watching the approach of the unwelcome visitor coldly, Laramie put out his hand for his rifle. He thought of firing a warning shot; but to this he was much averse since it would mean a fight and a siege—neither of which he sought. As the man drew closer it was apparent that it was not Stone and Laramie decided that milder measures might answer. He held his rifle across his arm and waited. But the man, as if conscious of the peril to which he was so coolly exposing himself, galloped rapidly away, rejoined his companions, and the trio disappeared.

Laramie at the window watched the departing horsemen. It appeared, from what he had seen, as if the watch had really been set on him. He got out his little bottle of oil and a rag and ramrod to clean his rifle. He made the preparations and sat down to his task in a brown study.

The rifle had not been fired for some time, and it was a very long time since it had been trained on a man. He took it apart slowly, thinking less of what would next appear through the range of the sights than of Kate, as she confronted him the night before in Carpy's office. He realized with a sort of shame that he was trying to forgive her for calling him a thief—which, in point of fact, he argued, she had not actually done. And though she had certainly spoken carelesslike, as Bill Bradley might say, she had only credited the tales of his enemies in her own household.

Laramie poked and squinted as he pondered his difficulties. He had refused to give up Hawk to be merely murdered; he could not do less and respect himself. It had made her father more than ever his enemy; still he wanted Kate. Stone would assassinate him at any time for a hundred dollars; Van Horn, now that he was aware Laramie loved Kate, would do it for nothing. Laramie, indeed, realized that if he stood in Van Horn's way with a woman he would not figure any more in Harry's calculations than a last year's birds' nest. And back of all loomed rancorous Barb Doubleday.

How, he asked himself, could a girl like Kate pick such a bear for a father? All of which troublesome thinking brought him no nearer a solution of his difficulties. He had his life to look out for, Hawk to take care of, and a strong willed girl to bring to his way of thinking.

He reached, at last, the conclusion that the sooner he knew whether he could leave his own place and ride to and from Sleepy Cat without being "potted" from ambush, the sooner he would know what to do next. Persuading himself that the watch would wait for him somewhere down the road, Laramie, making coffee and cooking bacon, breakfasted, made his final preparations for death by shaving himself with a venerable razor, and, rifle in hand, got down as directly and briskly as possible to the corral. He got up a horse, rode back into the hills, and, recovering his saddle, started for Simeral's. Having spoken with Ben, Laramie made a detour that brought him out on the creek a mile below his regular trail. Thence he rode as contentedly as possible on his way.

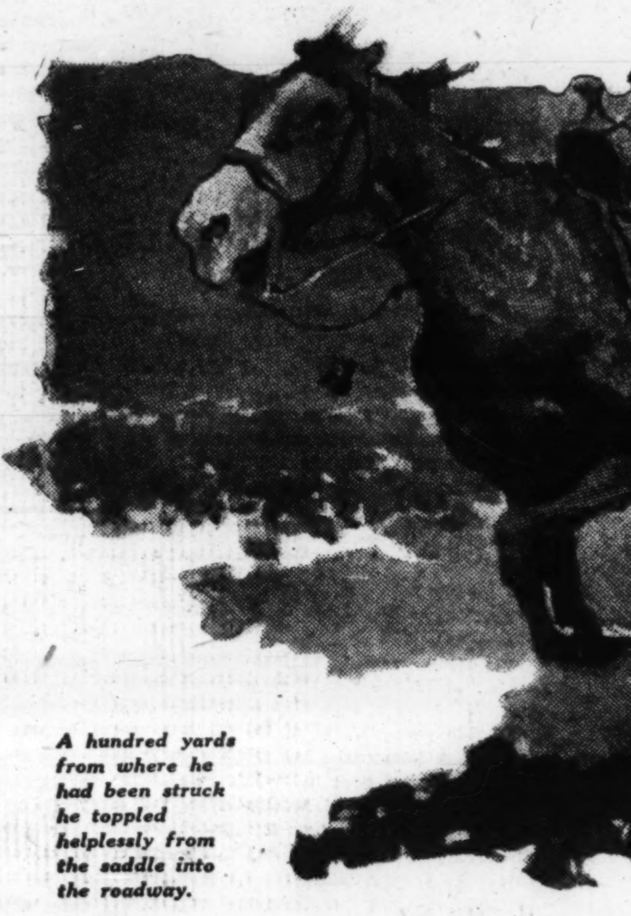
The country for a few miles ahead was adapted for ambuscades. The valley was comparatively narrow and afforded more than one vantage point for covering a traveler. It was wholly a matter, Laramie felt, of bluffing it through. And beyond keeping a brisk pace with his horse, he could do nothing to protect himself. "You're a fool for luck, Jim," he remembered Hawk's saying once to him, "but you'll get it some time on your fool's luck, just the same."

When old Blackbeard, as he sometimes called Hawk—though no one else ventured to call him that—uttered the warning, it made no impression on Laramie. Now it came back. Not unpleasantly, nor as a dread—only he did recall at this time the words—which was more than he had ever done before. And he reflected that it would be very awkward for Hawk, if their common enemies should get his nurse at this particular time.

While this was running through his mind, he was not sorry to notice ahead of him the dust of the down stage. At that particular stretch of the road it would be less nerve wearing to ride beside it a way. He overtook the wagon and to his surprise found McAlpin on the box. McAlpin, overjoyed to see him, explained with a grin he was filling in for a sick man. In reality, he had substituted for the northern trip in the hope of seeing some fighting while out and the sight of Laramie was the nearest he had got to it. Laramie, after a long talk, made an appointment to meet him in town in the evening and as they reached the foot of the hill where the road climbed to the Sleepy Cat divide, Laramie, feeling he had no further excuse for loitering, put spurs to his horse and took a bridle trail used as a cutoff to get into safer country.

He rode this trail unmolested, crossed the divide, and, coming out of the hills, could see, to the south, Sleepy Cat lying below. He made up his mind that his judgment was more nearly right than his apprehension, and rode down the slopes of the Crazy Woman, over the Double-drawbridge, and up the south hill in good spirits. He had, in fact, got half-way up the long grade when he heard a rifle shot.

Knocked forward the next instant in his saddle, Laramie drooped over his pommel. As his heels struck the horse's flanks, the beast sprang ahead. The rebound jerked back the rider's head and shoulders. While the horse dashed on, Laramie, with as little fuss as possible, pulled his rifle from its scabbard, trying all the time to get his balance. A careful observer could have noted that the rifle was drawn but held low in the right hand as if the rider could not bring it up. Yet even a close observer could hardly have detected in his convulsive swaying that the wounded man was closely scanning the sides of the narrow road along which his horse was now flying. At all events, he seemed with failing strength to be losing his seat as he lost control of his horse, and a hundred yards from where he had been struck he toppled helplessly from the saddle into the roadway. The speed at which the horse was going sent the fallen rider rolling along the grade, the sides of which had been torn in spots by summer torrents. Near one of these holes, Laramie had left the saddle, and into it he rolled headlong.



A hundred yards from where he had been struck he toppled helplessly from the saddle into the roadway.

The hole, between four and five feet deep, looked like an irregular well with an overhang on one side and to the bottom of this Laramie, covered with dust, tumbled. He righted himself and, turning under the overhang, took breath, put down his rifle, whipped out his revolver, looked toward the top of his well, and listened.

Not a sound broke the stillness of the sunny morning. With his right hand, but holding his eyes and ears very much at attention, he drew a handkerchief, wiped the dust from his eyes and face, and twisted his head around to investigate the stinging sensation high on his left shoulder, almost at the neck. The rifle bullet had torn his coat collar and shirt and creased the skin. He could feel no blood and soon inventoried the shot as only close. But he was waiting for the man that fired it to appear at the hole to investigate; and with at least one of his enemies he was in a mood to finish then and there.

Taking off his coat, as his wits continued to work, he spread it over a little hump in front of him so it would catch the eye for an instant and, with patient rage, crouched back under the overhang. He so placed himself that one could hardly see him without peering into the hole and that might mean any one of several things for the man that ventured it—much depended, in Laramie's mind, on whose face he should see above the rim.

An interminable time passed. The first sound he heard was that of horses toiling up the long grade and the creaking of battered hubs; this he reckoned must be McAlpin with the stage. Where his hat had rolled to, when he tumbled out of the saddle to simulate death, he had no idea. If it lay in the road he might expect a visit from McAlpin. But, without stopping, the stage rattled slowly up the grade.

It seemed then as if the distant gunman, after waiting for the stage to pass, would not fail to reconnoiter the hole. Yet he did so fail. The high hours of midday passed with Laramie patiently resting his Colt's up between his knees and studying the yellow rim of the hole and the heavenly blue of the sky. His neck ached from the cramped position, long held, in which he had placed himself; but he moved no more than if he had been [illegible] in stone. Neither hunger, which was slight, nor thirst, at times troublesome, disturbed his watch. But it was in vain.

He sat like a spider in its web through the whole day without an incident. A few horsemen passed, an occasional wagon rumbled up and down the hill; but none of the travelers looked in on Laramie. Toward dusk he heard a freighting outfit working laboriously up from the creek. Resolving to give up his watch and go into town with this, he felt his way cautiously out of his hiding place. Without really hoping to recover it, he began to search for his hat and, to his surprise, found it in another gully near where he had tumbled from his horse. The driver of the freighting outfit wondered at seeing Laramie on foot. He explained that he had been hunting and that his horse had taken a short-cut home.

Stone's companions, under instructions, had left him and returned to Doubleday's before the shot across the Crazy Woman. Stone himself got back to Doubleday's ranch at about the time that Laramie started for Sleepy Cat in the evening. But Barb Doubleday and Van Horn, he was told, were in town. He followed them and discovered Van Horn in the barroom at the hotel.

"I hear you got him," muttered Van Horn, bending his keen eyes on Stone.

"Who said so?" demanded Stone.

"His horse came into Kitchen's barn this afternoon, all saddled. McAlpin is telling he heard a rifle shot on the Crazy Woman. They're wild down at the barn over it. Did you get him?"

Stone paused over a glass of whisky; his face brightened: "I tumbled him off his horse, if you call that getting him."

Van Horn asked questions impatiently. Stone answered with the indifference of the man that had turned a big trick. But Van Horn insisted on knowing what had become of Laramie.

"He tumbled into a hole," said Stone. "I didn't cross the creek to look for him."

"Why didn't you?" asked Van Horn nervously.

Stone dallied with his glass: "I watched the hole all day. He didn't come out. That was enough, wasn't it?"

"No," snapped Van Horn.

"Well, I'll tell you, Harry, next time you and the old man want a job done, do it yourself. I never liked Laramie. I didn't care for getting too close to the hole he tumbled into. After he was hit he stuck to his horse a little too long to suit me," said Stone shrewdly.

Van Horn's retort was contemptuous and pointed. He laughed: "Afraid of him, eh?"

Stone regarded him malevolently. "Look here," he exclaimed harshly, "I'll make you a little proposition! When I get shaved we'll ride over to the Crazy Woman and you c'n look in the hole for yourself."

The uncertainty irritated Van Horn. When Stone, newly plastered, emerged from the barber shop, Van Horn took him with his story to Doubleday, whom they found in his room, chewing the stub of a cold cigar and looking over a stock journal. He did not appear amiable, nor did his face change much as the news was cautiously conveyed to him. When Van Horn announced he would ride out with Stone to examine the road hole Doubleday, whose expression had grown colder and colder, broke in:

"Needn't waste any time on that," he said with a snap of his jaw.

Stone snorted: "Maybe you think he wasn't hit."

"Hit!" exclaimed Barb. "Hit!" he repeated, raising a long forefinger with deep-drawn disgust. "He's sittin' in that room across the hall right now."

"What's he doin'?"

"Playin' poker," muttered the old cattleman grimly, "with Doc Carpy and Harry Tenison."

In strict point of fact, Laramie had left the room across the hall and at that particular moment was sitting down for a late supper at Belle Shockley's, whither Sawdy and Lefever had dragged him from the hotel. Carpy had come with them.

At the table—after Laramie had told part of his story—the talk, genial to cheerfulness, was largely professional criticism of the shot across the Crazy Woman. The technical disadvantages of shooting uphill, the tendency to over-elevate for such shots, the difficulty of catching the pace and speed of a horse—all supplied judicial observations for Lefever and Sawdy, while Laramie—so nearly the victim—leaving the topic to these Sleepy Cat gun pundits, conferred with Carpy about the care of gunshot wounds and protested against Flat Nose George and the Museum of Horrors in the Doctor's office.

"But I want to tell you, boys," remarked the doctor, when the talk turned on the discomfiture of the enemy group, "what Barb asked me tonight—this is on the dead." The doctor looked around to include Belle—who was standing with folded arms, her back against the sideboard and listening to the conversation—in his injunction of secrecy. "He came to me at the hotel. 'Doc,' says Barb, 'I want to ask you a question. There's stories circulating around about Laramie's getting shot this morning, on his way into town. Has Laramie been to you to get fixed up, at all?'

"'Well, Barb,' I says, 'that's not really a fair question for me to answer—you know that. But since you spoke about it, Jim was in a while ago——'

"'Was in, eh?'

"'For a few minutes——'

"'Hit?"

"'That I couldn't say. What he asked for, Barb, was a bottle of Perry Davis' pain killer—said the rheumatiz was getting him to beat the band.'"

Carpy paused: "'Rheumatiz!' says Barb. He didn't stop to swear—he just bit his old cigar right square in two in the middle, dropped one end on the floor, and stamped on it." The Doctor leaned forward and spoke to Laramie: "How's longhorn, Jim?"

Laramie looked troubled: "If it wasn't for dragging you into it I'd ask you to go out and see him."

"Jim, a doctor's place is where he's needed."

"I left a twenty dollar gold piece in your medicine chest for the stuff I took."

"You go to hell!" The Doctor pulled a handful of money from his pocket and threw a double eagle at Laramie. "There's your gold piece."

"Belle, look at them fellows," exclaimed Sawdy moodily; "pockets loaded. I never had more than twenty dollars at one time in my life. My mother told me to take care of the pennies and the dollars would take care of themselves. The blamed dollars wouldn't do it. I took care of the pennies. I've got 'em yet—that's all I have got. Jim, I'll match you for that gold piece."

"Gamblers never have a cent," commented Belle darkly.

"That gold piece," explained Laramie, "is not my money, Harry. It's Carpy's money, and he'll keep it if I have to make him swallow it."

That's not the question," declared Carpy. "Did you get what you wanted?" Laramie told him he did. "And by the great Jehosaphat," added the doctor, "you bumped into Kate Doubleday!"

"What else did you expect?" retorted Laramie, not pleased at the recollection.

Carpy, throwing back his head, laughed well: "After Kate Doubleday told me she was going for the dressings herself I says to myself, 'There'll be two people in my house tonight—a man and a woman—I hope to God they don't meet."

"Jim," intervened Belle, "you ought to get Hawk to a hospital."

"He's got to get him to one," affirmed Lefever. "I've seen that man," he added emphatically; "I know."

"How's he going to do it," inquired Carpy, "without starting the fight all over again?"

Lefever stuck to his ground. "Get him down to Sleepy Cat in the night," he insisted.

"Can he ride?" asked Sawdy.

"He may have to have help," said Laramie.

"There's a moon right now. They'd pick you off like rabbits," objected Sawdy, "and they've got the whole trail patroled to the Crazy Woman. They're watching this town like cats. You'll have to waste a lot of ammunition to get Hawk to a hospital."

"From all I hear," observed Carpy, "if Abe gets any more lead into him you won't need to take him to the hospital. He'll be ready to head straight for the undertaker's."

"We've got to wait either for a late moon or a rainy night; then we'll get busy," suggested Lefever.

"He might die while you're waiting," interposed Carpy.

Lefever could not be subdued. "Not as quick as he'd die if Van Horn's bunch caught sight of him on the road," he said sententiously. "We'll get him down and he won't die either."

"Well, pay for your supper, boys, and let's get away," said Carpy. "I want some sleep."

But for Lefever and Sawdy there was little sleep that night. The echoes of the "fatal" shot—almost fatal, as it proved, to the prestige of the enemy—were being discussed pretty much everywhere in Sleepy Cat, and wherever men that night assembled in public places Sawdy and Lefever swaggered in and out at least once. The pair looked wise, spoke obscurely, looked the crowd, large or small, over critically, played an occasional restrained and brief finger tattoo on the butts of their holstered guns, and listened condescendingly to every one that had a theory to advance, a reminiscence to offer, or a propitiating drink to suggest.

Wherever they could induce him to go they dragged Laramie—at once as an exhibit and a defi; but Laramie objected to the thoroughness with which his companions essayed to cover the territory, and unfeelingly withdrew from the party to bed. Sawdy and Company, undismayed by the defection, continued to haunt the high places until the last sympathizer with Van Horn and Company had been challenged and bullied or silenced.

But the differing sympathies on the situation in Sleepy Cat were not to be adjusted in a single night, either by force or persuasion. The whole town took sides and the cattlemen found the most defenders. What might be designated, but with modesty, as "big business" in Sleepy Cat stood stubbornly, despite the violence of their methods, with Van Horn, Doubleday, and their friends; the interest of such business lay with the men that bought the most supplies. The banks and the merchants were thus pretty much aligned on one side. The surgeon of the town professed neutrality—at least as regarded operations—for he was needed to administer to both factions. Harry Tenison, as dealer of the big game in town and owner of the big hotel, was of necessity neutral; though men like himself and Carpy were rightly suspected of leaning toward Laramie, if not even as far as toward Abe Hawk. The open sympathizers of the Falling Wall men were among trainmen, liverymen, the clerks, the barbers and bartenders, and those who could be usually counted as "agin the government."

The attempt to assassinate Laramie had intensified every one's feelings, and for days only a spark on that subject was needed to fire more than one Sleepy Cat powder magazine. One afternoon rain caught Kate in at Belle's and kept her until almost dark from starting for home, and one magazine did explode.

The two women were sitting on the porch watching the shower. McAlpin, on his way uptown from the barn, had stopped at Belle's a moment for shelter.

"I'll tell you, Kate," said Belle, after listening as patiently as she could to what Kate had to say about the Falling Wall fight and its consequences, "I like you. I can't help liking you. But the only reason you talk the way you do is because you haven't lived in this country long. You don't know this country—you don't know the people."

McAlpin nodded strongly: "That's so; that's true."

"I at least know common honesty, I hope."

"But you don't know anything at all of what you are talking about," insisted Belle, "and if you think I'm ever going to agree with you that it was right for Van Horn and your father and their friends to take a bunch of Texas men up into the Falling Wall and shoot and burn men because they're rustlers you're very much mistaken. And I can tell you the people of this country won't agree with you either, no matter what some folks in this town may say to tickle your ears."

"Do you mean to say you stand up for thieves, too?" asked Kate, hotly.

McAlpin looked apprehensively out at the clouds. Belle twitched her shoulders. "You needn't be so high and mighty about it," she retorted. "No, I don't. And I don't stand up for burning men alive because they brand mavericks. You talk very fierce—like everybody up your way. But if Abe Hawk or Jim Laramie walked in here this minute you wouldn't agree to have them shot down. And don't you forget it, Jim Laramie doesn't claim a hoof of anybody's cattle but his own."

Kate would not back down. "Why do they call him king of the rustlers?" she demanded.

"King of the rustlers, nothing," echoed Belle in disgust. "That's barroom talk. No decent man ever accused him of branding so much as a horse hair that didn't belong to him."

"Bring over my pony, Mr. McAlpin, will you?" asked Kate, very much irritated.

McAlpin looked surprised: "You wouldn't be ridin' home tonight?"

"Yes," replied Kate, sharply, "I would."

As McAlpin started on his way she turned on Belle: "And you mustn't forget, Belle, that vigilantes, no matter whether they do make mistakes or go too far, have built this country up and made it safe to live in."

Belle's face took on a weariness: "O, no—not always safe to live in—sometimes safe to make money in. There's nothing I'm so sick of hearing as this vigilante stuff. The vigilante crowd are mostly big thieves—the rustlers, little thieves; that's about all the difference I can see."

"Well, is there any difference between being a rustler and protecting and being the friend of one?"

Belle's restraint broke: "You'd better set your own house in order before you criticize me or Jim Laramie. He's never yet tried to assassinate anybody."

"Neither has my father, nor the men that raided the Falling Wall."

"Don't you know," demanded Belle, indignantly, "that the men who raided the Falling Wall are the men that tried to murder Laramie?"

"I don't believe it," said Kate, flatly. "Father doesn't believe anybody tried to murder him."

Belle's wrath bubbled over: "Your father's as deep in it as anybody."

Kate sprang to her feet. Even Belle, used to shocks and encounters, was silenced by the look that met her. For a moment the angry girl did not utter a word, but if her eyes were daggers Belle would have been transfixed. Kate's breast rose sharply and she spoke low and fast: "How dare you accuse my father of such a thing?"

Belle, though cowed, was defiant: "I dare say just what I believe to be true."

"What proof have you?"

"I don't need proof for what every one knows."

"You say what is absolutely false." Kate's tranquil eyes were aflame; she stood child, indeed, of her old father. Belle had more than once doubted whether Kate could be the daughter of such a man—she never doubted it after that scene on the day of the rain. Barb himself would have waited on his daughter's words.

"You're glad to listen to the stories of our enemies," she almost panted, "because they're you're friends; you're welcome to them. But my father's enemies are my enemies and I know now where to place you."

White with anger as she was herself, Belle, older and more controlled, tried to allay the storm she had raised. "I didn't mean to hurt you, Kate," she protested; "you drove me too far."

"I'm glad I did," returned Kate wickedly, as she stepped back into the living room, pinned on her hat, and made ready as fast as possible to go. "I know you in your true colors."

"Well, whether I'm right or wrong, you'll find my colors don't fade and don't change."

A boy stood at the gate with Kate's pony.

The two women were again on the porch. Belle looked at the sky. The rain had abated, but the mountains were black. "Now, Kate, what are you going to do?"

Kate had walked out and was indignantly throwing the lines over her horse's neck. "I'm going home," she answered, as sharply as the words could be spoken.

Belle crossed the sidewalk to her side. "This is a poor time of day for a long ride. We've quarreled, I know, but don't try a mountain trail a night like this. The rain isn't over yet."

"I'll be home before it starts again," returned Kate, springing into the saddle. "I'm sick of this town and everybody in it."

So saying, she struck her horse with the lines and headed for the mountains.

For John Lefever the rainy night promised to be a busy one; darkness and the storm would, he felt, give Laramie a chance to get Hawk safely into town; but to do this successfully would call for precaution.

The rain had hardly begun to fall that afternoon—to the discomfiture of Kate and her undoing with Belle—before Lefever began to cheer up in speculating on what might be done. He found Laramie at the hotel and set out to round up Sawdy. The rendezvous was set at Kitchen's barn, and half an hour later the three men were shut up in the old harness room back of the office to talk the venture over.

Laramie made no effort to discourage John concerning the project; it had become a pet one with the big fellow; but he did not give the idea strong indorsement. "You're too blamed pessimistic, Jim," growled Lefever.

"No, John," protested Laramie evenly, "I'm only trying to see things as they stand.

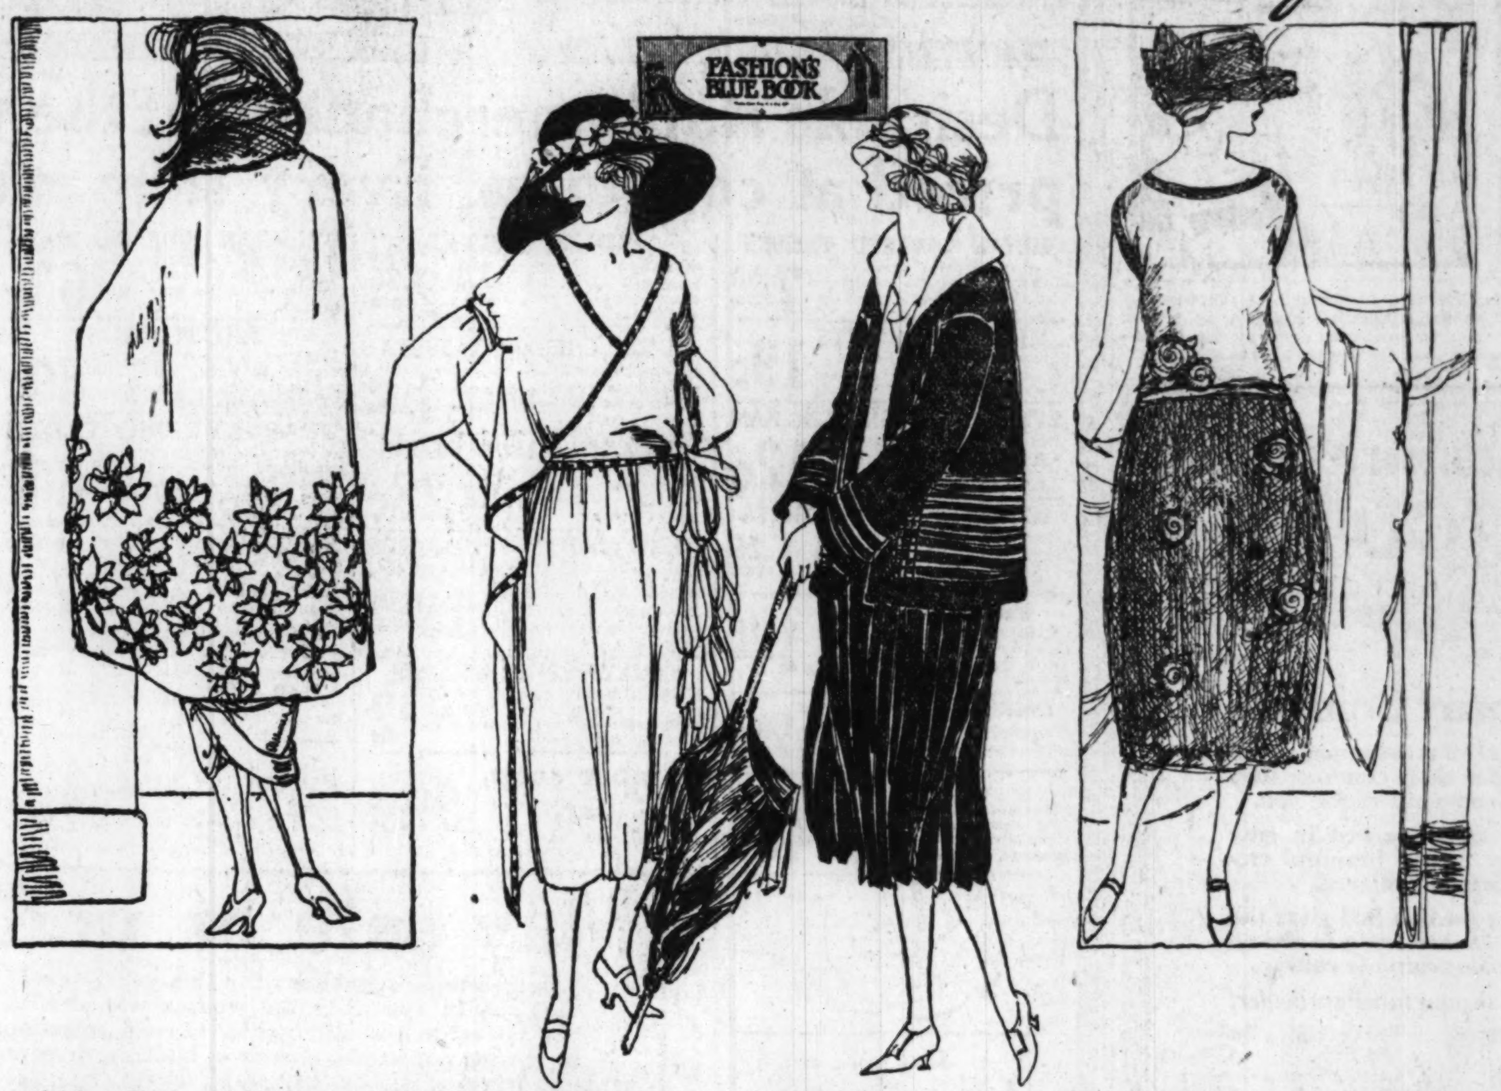
THIS IS THE CREPE DE CHINE AGE

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.



THAT crepe de chine keeps no regular hours is seen from the wide choice of garments reflected on this page. At the left a navy blue crepe de chine cape is trimmed with appliqued motifs of self-material and collared in gray squirrel. Next comes a charming mauve crepe de chine banded in coral and black braid and trimmed with the fashionable loops of ribbon—these in coral. Next, an enthusiastic devotee of the crepe de chine sport elects suit of black crepe de chine, blouse and hat of the same fabric in white. Last, an ashes of roses crepe de chine with finely plaited skirt is draped with self-toned net, trimmed with roses made of the dress material, and worn with a hat of black crepe de chine finished with black net.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We might as well say crepe de scene and have done with it, for never has a landscape been so thoroughly permeated and overcast by one single fabric as it is at the present time by crepe de chine. Suits, millinery, wraps, all kinds of frocks from the simplest little morning affair to the most elaborate evening one—each has bowed to this imperious Caesar of fashion. And one may add here that children's clothes have felt the sway of crepe de chine as much as have those of their mothers.

Of course, when one uses this term one includes all the various relatives. The heavier Canton crepe, crepe Moroccan with its slight tussah mixtures, crepe Romain—considered by many the beauty of the family—and a number of other similar weaves that bear trade marked names, share in the popularity of crepe de chine. The other important thing to commit is—crepe.

As for the wraps—well, it would really be sensible of us to get a code word and say—cepe. That would avoid the cumbersome crepe cape. And certainly when any garment is dotting the landscape so awfully much we should do something about it.

The usual crepe de chine cape is trimmed with some kind of fringe—monkey, self-fringe, or ribbon fringe. For fringe is real, fringe is earnest, and the evening is no longer its goal. The fact of it is that this accessory keeps no hours. One finds it in all sorts of forms after 6 o'clock—notably in the fringed Spanish shawl which, accompanied by the high Spanish comb, is being done by everybody nowadays in the evening.

But it also infests the street and, really, there is no more possibility of getting away from it in New York than in one of those mid-Victorian furniture houses where everything was fringed except the glass dome with the wax flowers. For day wear we even see from Paris a miniature edition of the Spanish shawl.

If you don't fringe the crepe cape you usually applique it with designs of self color. This is the treatment accorded the charming cape of navy blue crepe de chine shown at the left of the page. Here the design is worked out in flat poinsettas of self-fabric, and the fur collar is of squirrel.

Right here we may mention, too, that the black and navy duvetyn capes are often trimmed with one of those crinkly, lamby pelts—the black duvetyn in white and the navy in gray. For, be it remembered, the average well dressed New York woman is one of two things—she is black and white or else she is navy and gray.

One of the popular methods of trimming the crepe de chine frock is not to trim it at all. The success of this mind cure was well established by Vionnet, the French crepe de chine composer, whose draped and faggoted or hemstitched models have been so widly copied. Nowadays, however, some of the smartest crepe de chine frocks are trimmed with fringes or loops of ribbon, the dead black grosgrain on black crepe de chine being entered as one of the most chic things you can do in the grand free for all crepe de chine hurdle race.

Second from the left we are showing a new and stunning model from Paris which makes use of this loop trimming of ribbon. The frock itself is of mauve crepe de chine, and the ribbons on the skirt are coral colored. The braid binding the novel and effective drapery, which, as you see, gives the cape effect back, is of black and coral. The sleeves contribute an added touch of distinction. With this frock is worn a large hat of fine black straw with slightly drooping brim wreathed in waxed flowers of coral and mauve.

With the black or navy crepe de chine frock—indeed, with that occurring in color—the fashionable millinery choice falls to this type of hat—the fine black straw either capeline or cloche in shape which is trimmed either with glycerined ostrich, plain ostrich, or a wreath of flowers.

One of the most arresting of such hats was worn by a girl at the Ritz the other day to top a frock of black Canton crepe. Here the trimming consisted of a fine, fountainlike spray of two white peacock feathers encircling the crown in a wreath. It was so smart that one then and there discarded that old superstition about peacock feathers being unlucky. The same day I saw worn with a frock of navy crepe de chine embroidered in black and metal threads a wide brimmed black straw with a wreath of white waxed flowers.

In passing we may remark, in fact, that the extension of the vogue of the black and white hat to the cheaper models does not seem to have seriously affected its popularity with fashionable women. One continues to see this stunning contrast of black straw with dead white flowers sponsored by the smartest of New York women.

Crepe de chine and Canton crepes are still embroidered—particularly with a touch of metallic thread. However, braid, applique trimmings—these are often in petal form—fringe, and beads are all just now a bit more dashing. For the formal afternoon models lace is frequently draped over the crepe de chine foundation. This last named mode is stunning when carried out in the colored crepe de chine draped in lace that is dyed to match.

Speaking of these colored crepe de chines, one notes such delightful tints as amber, lilac, citron, ashes of roses, apricot, apple green, and the most beautiful shades of blue. Do not let us forget to interpolate, either. Yellow and green are both much to the fore. For sports clothes they are both particularly good just now, and on the frocks worn at any fashionable tea hour one finds a lavish sprinkling of green against the dark background. This green is bright in tone and is used not only for trimming but for blouses, waistcoats, and millinery.

At the right of the page we find one of the dressy colored crepe de chines—this in attar of roses, with a finely plaited skirt draped not with lace but with net to match. The net is punctuated by roses of the crepe de chine repeated at the long waist line, and it is echoed in the binding of the elliptical neck line and of the short sleeves. The sash ties in the back.

With this is worn a hat of black crepe de chine, veiled and trimmed with black net. A delightful little costume, this, and one which would fit in many a niche of our summer festivities.

Crepe de chine hats deserve a whole chapter to themselves; for they, too, show the same wide range of variety as do the frocks of the same material. For example, opposed to the elaborate little model at the right is the one accompanying the black crepe de chine suit with plaited skirt and the smart box coat. This hat is one of the simple little tailored types which crepe de chine accomplishes in such masterly fashion. Made of white, it is trimmed with little loops of white grosgrain ribbon.

By the way, the figure wearing this hat is the most confirmed of crepe de chinists. For not only are suit and hat of the material but blouse of white also. The trimming used for the jacket is narrow white braid.

The more elaborate models of this millinery employ some lace draping or else much embroidery. For example, one of these types, imported by a leading specialty shop here, is a cloche shape in white crepe de chine with folded crown and intensive embroidery of white floss and pearls. Another imported by the same house is a shrimp crepe de chine fairly imbedded with embroidery of ribbonzene flowers.

FACING UNHAPPINESS.

MY DEAR: In our life together we have used many extravagant endearments, but the casual, every day "my dear" seems sweetest of all to me. Perhaps because I seldom hear it lately; perhaps because I am wondering whether you are saying all the flowery phrases to somebody else.

She has just gone—the one I fear. Men—all of them—are so blind. You cannot see the designing deceit in her pretty brown eyes; the primitive cruelty of her exquisite manner toward me; the empty soul beneath her leisurely, gay exterior.

My dear, do you long for romance? Ah, so do I! Are you tired of the endless duties of housework, so weary of dispensing slices of bread and butter and sugar, wiping little noses, washing grimy little hands and faces! But sometimes, my dear, when I am ready to be bitter, Bobby looks at me with the blue gaze so like yours, or one of the others suddenly pats my hand in the loving way you used to do. Then I am ready to go on.

In times of such discontent, I look at you, and see—not the slightly stout slightly bald, almost middle aged man you have become. I am not in the shabby living room with you. I am out in the fragrant moonlight, and I meet the ardent eyes of my young lover. I do not hear what you say. I hear only the tremor that shook a boyish voice long ago on a summer's night.

How I wish I could see the reflection of my old self in your eyes! I have tried to keep attractive for your sake—but the little blossoms of our love need so much unending care. When I think I have a moment to myself, there is an S O S from upstairs or downstairs or out in the yard, and I must answer it at once.

As I write this, two of them are climbing on the back of my chair trying to take hairpins out of my hair, and I fear, from the sounds that come from the kitchen, that Bobby is trying to take a bath in the sink.

How The-Girl-I-Used-To-Be would have loved him! I fancy sometimes that she speaks to me of courage and laughter in the face of unhappiness. "Nothing can go wrong," she says, wistfully. "Just think, you are his wife, and the mother of his children!"

And The-Boy-You-Used-To-Be seems to say: "Be patient with him. These new responsibilities and burdens are as strange to him as to you.'

And so, my dear, for the sake of those two wistful watchers, I will cling to you, faithfully as ever, even if you seem to forget me. Together we shall pass successfully through this part of our way which seems so beset with bitterness and danger.

O, my dear, no matter what happens, through every possible experience of happiness or sorrow, one fact remains which cannot be changed by you or me, by death, or even by life itself—my love for you will always endure.

Always your own ELIZABETH.

When Woman Wills.

I was bound for St. Louis from a northern Mississippi river town. It was spring, and high waters made the trip monotonous. When we were about 100 miles from St. Louis water covered the tracks and washed out the line, stalling our train. It looked as though we might be delayed for days with no chance to detour. Night came on and the passengers—eight men and myself—became restless. It was imperative that I reach St. Louis that night to keep an appointment at a suffrage meeting, and I wanted to get back home to my children as soon as possible.

I decided that if I could get one of the train crew to get word back to the closest town we could secure a skiff, row to dry land, and resume our journey some way. I let one of the men passengers in on my scheme. He talked with a husky trainman secretly, and in a few hours a little boat came up to the side of the coach and my fellow conspirator and I, bag and baggage, stepped into the boat. When safely seated we called out to our astonished companions that they might continue their journey also if they could figure out a way.

Our oarsman got us to shore, where he had arranged for a taxi to meet us. After a night of wild riding through heavy rain I reached my destination in time to make my speech. I often wondered if the other seven men had any bright ideas. I. S.

Ahead of Time.

I was scheduled to arrive in North Philadelphia at 7:15 in the morning. Before retiring the night before I instructed the porter to call me at 6:30. He said that he went off duty during the night, but would give my instructions to his successor. I heard some people in the section opposite giving the same instructions to him.

I did not sleep well and looked at my watch often. After what seemed to me a long nap, I was astonished on looking at my watch to find it was 6:45. Hastily dressing, I thought of my traveling companions, and wishing to do a kind act I aroused the woman. She thanked me, and they rushed for the dressing rooms.

My hat was missing, and I rang for the porter. I said coldly, "I have been much inconvenienced by your neglect of your duty. I cannot find my hat, and I must be ready to get off at North Philadelphia at 7:15."

The porter grinned, took his watch from his pocket, and said: "Well, miss, you'll have plenty of time. It's just 5 now."

How I made the mistake I do not know. I was relieved to find my victims could take a joke and laugh, not only at me, but with me.

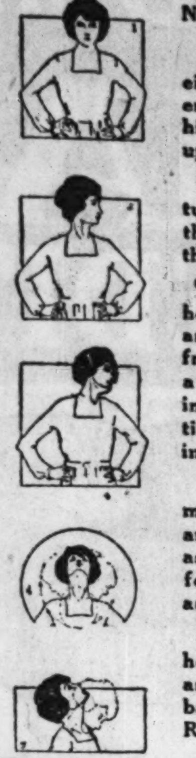
Next time I'll be sure before I appoint myself official alarm clock for traveling companions. H. U.

DAILY SET-UP EXERCISES

Do These Daily for Youth and Beauty Sake

by Antoinette Donnelly

NECK AND DOUBLE CHIN



Stand with feet about eighteen inches apart, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high, hands on hips, head up; chin in, as in figure 1.

Without moving the body, turn head sharply to left three times, then to right three times, as in figure 2.

Then, same position, turn head as in figure 2, and with another sharp movement from this position give head a sideward back stretch as in figure 3. Repeat five times, alternating with moving head to left.

Then relax head and neck muscles and roll head around in a complete circle, as in figure 4, going as far forward and back on neck as you can.

Then, as in figure 5, let head fall forward on chest as far as possible, then backward as far as possible. Repeat 5 to 10 times.

BUST, SHOULDERS, ARMS AND BACK.

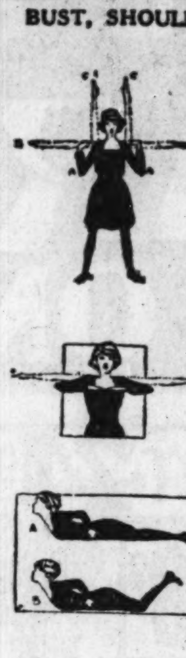


Fig. 1. Take standing position, head up, feet about two foot lengths apart, knees straight, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high, back straight, shoulders square and easy, hands down at sides. Then as in "a", figure 1, bring hands up to shoulder height, fists doubled and turned in. With sharp command, shoot arms from "a" straight upward as in "c." Stretch to finger tips, and back. Do this 3 times at first, then to the side as in "b", stretching to finger tips. Do these movements on sharp command; one, two; one, two—and without moving the body. Repeat ten times, gradually increasing.

Fig. 2. Assume correct standing position, as described. Bend arms quickly and raise until the elbows are in line with the shoulders, palms downward on chest as in "a".

From this position, fling arms outward as in "b" and back with quick, sharp movement, counting, one, two; one, two.

Repeat ten to twenty times.

Fig. 3. Lie face forward on floor or couch or bed, with head resting easily on flat surface, hands on hips. Raise from the trunk backward, keeping heels together and feet on floor, as in "a", and back again. Repeat three times at first, gradually increasing. Then add, lifting legs at same time as upper part of body as in "b"

WAIST, HIPS, ABDOMEN AND SIDES.

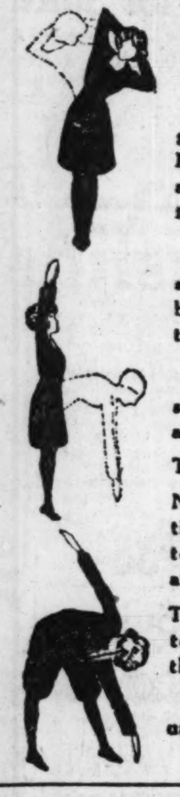

Fig. 1. Stand with feet together, hands back of head. Bend from side to side as far as you can without moving the lower part of the body.

Fig. 2. Rise on toes and stretch arms overhead; bend body at trunk and try to touch finger tips to floor.

Fig. 3. First assume correct standing position with feet about two foot lengths apart.

Then stretch arms sideward.

Now try to touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toe of your left foot, keeping abdomen flat and knees stiff.

Then reverse, touching the toes of the right foot with the finger tips of the left hand.

Repeat ten times each, gradually increasing.

LEGS, ANKLES, HIPS, THIGHS, AND BUTTOCKS

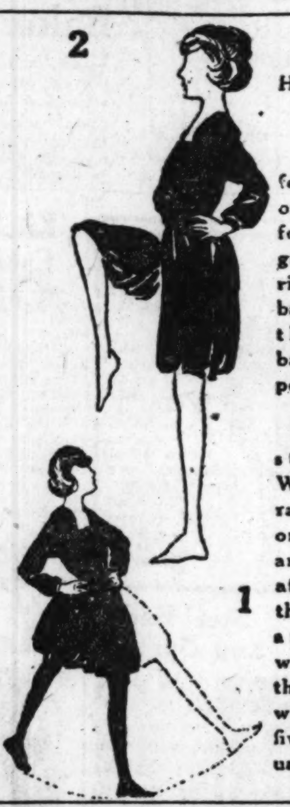

Fig. 1. Stand with feet together; hands on hips. With left foot firmly planted on ground, swing the right forward and backward five times, then sideward and back, five times. Repeat with other foot.

Fig. 2. Get good standing position. With hands on hips, raise right knee vigorously to form right angle with trunk and at same time stretch the toes downward and back. Repeat with left leg. Do these movements with snappy motion, five times each, gradually increasing.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Here's the Answer.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am not in love, but I come in contact with lots of young men and women. I have discovered one thing which I am greatly puzzled over. Why is there in every woman a desire to please her man? Why can't she make her man please her, not she him? As you are an authority on love questions, will you please enlighten me? P. D."

That's not such a hard one, P. D. How could he please her if she did not aim to please him? You may read once in a long time about a man loving a woman in spite of a cold indifference on her part, but this happens on desert isles among shipwrecked survivors, mostly, and where there are no other women about to distract him. Better get that idea out of your head, because you may never be shipwrecked.

The Best Remedy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am keeping company with a girl almost a year now. When I first went out with her she was nice and attentive and never quarreled with me. On New Year's day she took me to her home and introduced me to her mother (she has no father). Ever since then we have been quarreling and got mad at each other about thirty times. I know that I have spoiled her within the last three months, because I have taken her out constantly each week. All I would like to know is how can I bring her back to her normal self, as she was at first? CHARLIE."

Maybe you have spoiled her, Charlie. In that case the best and only cure is to stay away for awhile.

Find One Younger.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 years old and my friend is about 28 years. They tell me he is too old for me, and I love him dearly. Do you think he is too old? Does it matter how old he is as long as you like him? He never tells me whether he likes me or not. What would you advise me to do? "JENNIE."

Jennie, I would try to get interested in a younger man. Particularly when the older one gives you no word of encouragement.

Pretty Strong for 16.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 years of age, and go with a boy friend 18 years of age. I have been going out with him for three months. Do you think it right for him to call every night, as I care for him very much. "TOOTSIE."

I think that is going pretty strong for a 16 year old girl, don't you, honestly? Does your mother let you have company every night? I shouldn't think she would.

Beauty Answers

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. STENOGRAPHER: HAIR, HEELS and nails! Yes, with the addition of clean, clear skin and appropriate dress you have the requisites of a smart looking business girl. Cleanliness is the greatest of these virtues, for that being a dominating virtue the well kept hair, straight heels, and neat nails follow as surely as the night follows day. Appropriate dress will exclude temptation to lace stockings, to boudoir blouses, and to ballroom slippers.

MABELLE: YES, I HAVE THE formula for rouge you wish. Take a raw beet and grate it, then press through a fine cloth. Add a little alcohol to this juice. You know strawberry juice also makes a good rouge.

HELENA R. P.: WHAT TO DO for that o'erhanging basket of fat which the corset supports? Will you exercise? Then send me stamped addressed envelope for an illustrated and plainly descriptive set of movements which will do the work in a comparatively short time.

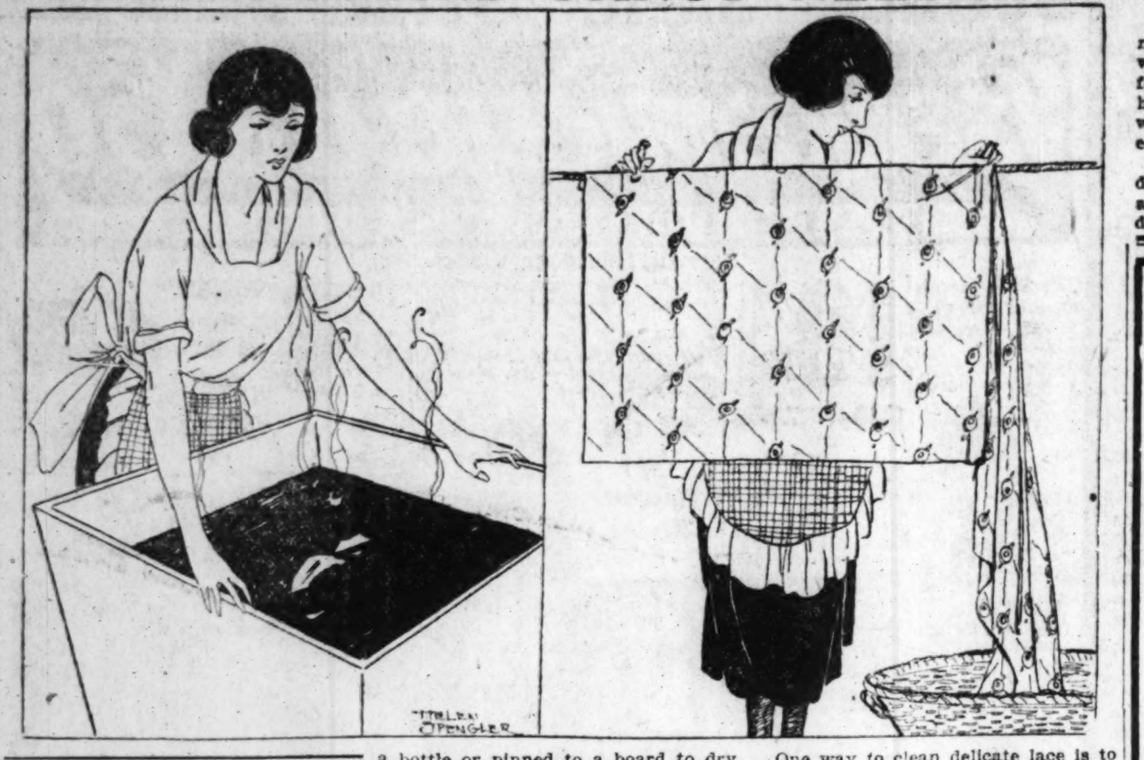
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE



Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

TO SET COLORS.

WASH materials are still expensive, and no pains should be spared in making them to insure their being satisfactory. It seems too bad to put them in water before making up, but it is generally the part of wisdom to shrink and set the colors first. It will save having the dress too short and maybe too narrow in the skirt and waist lengths and widths, after the first several launderings, to say nothing of having the colors fade or run.

Most materials will be thoroughly shrunken if they are well covered with boiling water and allowed to remain until the water is cold, then pulled straight and hung up smoothly until just damp enough to iron easily. A cloth that shrinks badly can have this operation repeated—not the ironing—but putting twice into the boiling water, allowing it to dry perfectly after the first wetting, and ironing it after the second.

If it is possible to get ox-gall so it is fresh and suitable to use, it is supposed to set any color in silk, cotton, or woolen. One tablespoon of ox-gall to one gallon of water—soft water—is the right proportion. If too much ox-gall is used it turns white yellow.

One ounce of sugar of lead dissolved thoroughly in twelve quarts of boiling water will set any color except blue in cambrics, calicoes, or muslin.

Saltpeter, one ounce to twelve quarts of water, will set blue.

Alum, one ounce to twelve quarts, is good for blue and green.

Calicoes with blue or pink can be set by putting one tablespoon of baking soda in twelve quarts of water. Vinegar can be used in the same way for pink or green. But be sure to use the pure cider vinegar. Boiling water is meant in all cases for putting the setting substances in.

Pearl ash used the same as vinegar will set purple or blue.

Three gills of salt dissolved in four quarts of boiling water will set most any color except blue, and that color it sometimes injures.

For buffs, grays, or any delicate color one level tablespoon of black pepper dissolved in twelve quarts of boiling water will set the color. Allow it to remain until cold.

For gray linen a strong tea made of common hay is sometimes used.

In setting the color in any material always rinse thoroughly before hanging up to dry.

A good quality of ribbon can generally be successfully cleaned by dissolving some good white soap in boiling water so a good suds is made, and when cool enough to bear the hand pass the ribbon through the water, rubbing it gently. It must be rinsed well in lukewarm water, and wound around a bottle or pinned to a board to dry. White ribbon should have a small quantity of bluing added to the rinsing water. In washing bright yellow, maroon, crimson, or scarlet, add a few drops of oil of vitriol to the rinsing water.

One way to clean delicate lace is to spread it on a piece of clean white paper, covering it with calcined magnesia; then place another paper over and put away between the leaves of a book for a few days. Then shake the powder out carefully.

To return to wash materials for a moment: Hanging them in the sun and wind will most always fade them—in fact, no clothes should be allowed to hang after they are dry. The wind whipping them about makes them tear easily if nothing worse happens.

If you have a laundry where the windows can be opened on several sides to admit plenty of air, colored clothes will dry well and keep their colors longer.

Downtown Store, 226 to 232 S. Wabash, Near Jackson

Promptly at 8:30 tomorrow morning we inaugurate at both of our stores a sale that will startle all Chicago. Heywood Brothers & Wakefield Company offered us for spot cash their surplus stock of genuine reed furniture at about one-half its actual value. Realizing that this was a wonderful opportunity—and a mighty rare one—we took this entire surplus stock of high grade merchandise.

Northwest Branch, 1327 to 1333 Milwaukee, Near Wood

The assortment is tremendous—and embraces even a greater number of articles than we show on this page—but the quantity of each is limited—and we therefore urge you to come early, so as to run no risk of being disappointed. Although we made this purchase for spot cash we give you the opportunity of taking a year and a half in which to pay us. That's the Hartman liberal credit plan.

THE FRIENDLY HOUSE.

KIPLING tells us that "all good families are alike." With all respect due to the greatest living master of English, that statement is true only in a few basic, fundamental things. In many ways all good families are different, and their dwelling houses should express their differences as well as their common human likeness.

Some like to keep pretty closely to their own circle, and the homes of such should express their reserve and desire for privacy. Others like to "live by the side of the road, where the race of men go by," and these should have houses that give due and proper notice of the hospitable, friendly nature of their inhabitants.

This house is designed for one of the side-of-the-road families. Hospitality is stamped all over it, from the deep shadows of the porch to the hovering protecting lines of the roof. Privacy is not lacking, but genial fondness for human companionship comes first. No cold, exclusive man could keep such a house; he would feel so out of place in it that he would sell.

As figured here, the house is newly built, and lacks the close planting of shrubs and vines which will complete the warm welcome of the building lines. Any stucco dwelling calls for the close companionship of growing things, and here there is no reason for not yielding to the call. Vines cannot cling close enough to hurt this house, or bring dampness through its walls.

Those walls are of hollow tile, covered with magnesite stucco, and the air spaces of the tile form an impenetrable barrier to moisture. If that were not enough, the building is furred on the inside, and finished with gypsum plaster on steel lath; a combination that bars out storm and fire alike. If ambitious climbers reach the roof, they still can do no harm, for that roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

In a word, this house contains the smallest practicable amount of material that can either rot or burn, and that little is carefully protected from flames and decay.

The inviting porch forms the most delightful of reception rooms, as well as lounging quarters in the restful part of the day. If necessary, owing to local conditions, all but the entrance part can be screened and glazed; but it would be better to do without these things, if possible. The front door leads into a passage which broadens to a central hall, with the stairs to the upper floor at the back and a coat closet beside and under the landing of the staircase.

At the right of the hall is the living room, 13x24 feet. The front porch incloses the front part of this room, but at the rear a jog in the living room partly incloses the porch and gives a pleasing irregularity.

Light comes from three sides, but especially from a fine window group toward the rear. There is no fireplace—quite a number of people do not care for a fireplace—and in this instance the wall space usually assigned to a grate is saved for the placing of other furniture

Across the hall is the dining room, 13x14 feet, large enough to accommodate the gatherings which such a hospitable house invites. It overlooks the garden, but the main light comes from a triple window at the side. This window is so handled that it both balances and varies from the corresponding window group in the living room—another instance of the way in which a skilled architect adds to the charm of his creations.

From the dining room at the rear of the house you go forward through a good sized butler's pantry to the kitchen, which is at the front. This is an arrangement increasingly popular, provided the cooking smells can be kept from pervading the living quarters, and in this case that is done.

The kitchen wall is broken by only three doors, leading to the pantry, the basement, and the service entrance. This last is at the front of the house and is covered by an extension of the porch roof, yet remains entirely separate.

Upstairs are four bedrooms, all with cross ventilation and plenty of closet space. There is also a rather large bathroom, with a linen closet opening from it, and over all is an attic which supplies storage space as well as an air blanket to regulate the temperature of the house.

The right sort of family will find this a home of which they will never grow weary. Moreover, it is a home within the reach of people of moderate means.

N. T.: For the average window 33 inch goods can be used if made into pairs, but it cannot be split. 50 inch material split to make a pair of curtains is more advantageous. The curtains are made on little celuloid rings and the fullness is laid either in little box plaits or gathered to the rings. The rings should be quite close together. Instead of an overdrapery a little ruching of the same material is sometimes placed on an extra rod to cover the rings. These are lovely made out of casement cloth or silk gauze. You might make your curtains in oyster gray to match your walls, and trim them with little bands of robin's egg blue taffeta, and have your ruching of robin's egg blue taffeta. Have your sun porch roller shades of oyster gray, and use the cretonne as you suggest. Thanks for your many compliments.

VICTIMS OF RUMORS.

IS there, I wonder, an office, store, or factory that hasn't buzzed like a veritable beehive, at some time or another, with rumors—some of them wild, some merely ridiculous, others seemingly bearing the stamp of authenticity? Most of us, I'm sure, have been amused or exasperated by our own persistent credulity in falling victims to these intangible rumors, even to the extent of passing them on to others as absolute facts.

We were talking about this at lunch the other day. Marion had told us of a rumor that's been going about among the employés of the firm she's with for the last two or three weeks to the effect that they're to get a larger bonus at the end of this year than they got last year or the year before. It amused her, and she was sure there was no foundation for it.

In the first place, she said, business isn't as good this year as it has been other years, and secondly, they've been getting a generous bonus as it is. They'll be lucky, she said, if they get their regular bonus this year. But the rumor has persisted and is current in every department of the house. Nobody, however, seems to know whence is came, nor how.

That story reminded Ann of an incident that happened at her office some time ago, and she told us the following story:

"A report was suddenly and curiously circulated about our offices that our business was to be sold. All the owners and officers of the company were to be replaced, so the rumor went. When I first heard it I laughed and put it down as a hoax on the part of one of the employés. I didn't attach any importance to it, though—not enough to pass it on to Mr. Andrews.

"If it were true, I thought, I would have been one of the first to know it. I don't see how it could have escaped me. I do all Mr. Andrews' confidential work and as important a matter as that could hardly have been under contemplation without my getting some inkling of it.

"I heard it again, however, after a few days and from another person. I said at the time that I didn't think the story was true and was rather annoyed that it should have cropped up again. But it persisted. I heard it again and again. Everybody seemed to be talking about it, and taking it seriously.

"Finally I told Mr. Andrews, merely as an amusing story, but it wasn't until I saw how disturbed he was at hearing the report that I attached any importance to it.

"He didn't think it was funny for a minute, and explained to me the danger of such a rumor. He said that if it had got outside our offices, to some of the firms we do business with, for instance, it might do us some serious damage—cost us thousands of dollars by the failure of deals, then under consideration, to go through.

He immediately set about getting at the foot of the matter. He called a meeting of department heads and officials of the company, issued an order to them to have every person in the house questioned in regard to the rumor until it was run down.

"I'll never forget that time. It was awful. We were all examined and cross-examined. Nobody escaped the ordeal. And it was a terrible job for the examiners, too, but they finally traced it to its source.

"It seems that one of the girls from the stockroom had been sent down to the office of the purchasing agent with a message. He was talking to some one over the telephone, and she waited for him to finish his conversation. Well, it turned out that he had been talking to the house engineer about installing some new ventilating fans in the boiler room. He said something about changing fans in about two weeks and the clerk from the stockroom heard it as 'change hands.' That's absolutely all she had to go on, but she went back to her own department and said she heard Mr. Thompson say the firm was to change hands.

"I don't think I'd be guilty of jumping to a conclusion as quickly as that, but anyway I made up my mind at that time that I'd not pass on any bits of information or news as facts when I had only a vague notion of them.

"The girl didn't lose her job, but she was given a good stiff 'calling down,' and it was a long time before a rumor of that sort got any headway in any of our departments."

Bride Lore

by Doris Blake

ONE part of the wedding ceremony among the Babylonians was to take a thread from the garment of the bride and one from the groom and tie them together into a knot. The groom gave this to the bride. This is probably the origin of the saying of "tying the knot" when we speak of marriage.

For a marriage to be fortunate among the Negritos, a tribe of people in the Philippine islands, the couple with the whole tribe assembled and the affianced pair climb two trees growing near each other. The elders then bend the branches until the heads of the couple meet. When the heads bump together the marriage is legally accomplished, and great rejoicing takes place, a fantastic dance completing the ceremony.

In Spain it was considered a good omen to tie around the necks of the bride and groom a silk sash fringed with gold while they knelt before the altar, thus binding their love the stronger.

In Spain, also, when returning from the church, it was considered good luck for the bride to be carried on the groom's horse.

If you take the family cat where it can witness the wedding ceremony it will bring good luck to it.

It is unlucky in France to have a person older than the bride enter the church door first.

It is lucky for the couple to run out of the church hand in hand, for rapid progression in business.

A stick is held at the church door for the bride to jump over. If she clears it, all will go smooth with her, but if she falls, woe be unto her.

The bride and groom must not look about or recognize any one on going up the church aisle, for the one who does it will go elsewhere for love in a short time.

The more steps the couple go up when entering a church to be married, the more happy their lives will be and the longer they will live.

Going to a wedding, the bride should be a few steps ahead, so that the husband will follower her advice.

The one of the betrothed who gets up first from the altar will always in after life be the one to get up first in the house.

If a woman signs her maiden name instead of her new married name on the church register when she married, it is a sign of bad luck and separation.

The bride will insure to herself a long and happy wedded life if she goes out of the church right foot forward.

It is unlucky for a bride to be married in a church where there is an open grave in the churchyard.

When the priest has tied the knot at the nuptial altar, his clerk throws a handful of hops on the head of the bride to insure good luck to her.

If the officiating clergyman has trouble to find his glasses, it is a sign that one of the two before him will not bear inspection.

If the officiating clergyman makes a mistake, some one is present who is opposed to the match.

It is considered a bad omen to the young couple to have a minister refuse, from any excuse, to perform the ceremony.

If the pastor drops the prayerbook while reading the marriage service, the married couple will be blessed with twins.

It is considered a bad omen if, during the wedding ceremony, you hear the knocking of the woodpecker on the church. It is a sign that one of the couple will die soon.

It is a bad omen for the wedded couple if a person in mourning passes the church door when the ceremony is being performed.

When a wedding pair join hands before the altar, the one whose hands are colder will die first.

When the bride goes to the altar, she should leave one of her gloves unbuttoned so that she will not be bound so tight as to have no freedom.

Lucky for a marriage to be solemnized in a ruined church.

It is a bad omen if the groom coughs at the altar.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune Chicago.

A FOOTBALL OF FATE.

A DOZEN years ago in a small city of western Montana, I was living at a house where, including myself, there were about fifteen boarders.

One evening after supper all the young fellows were out on the front lawn kicking a football around. Older members of the household sat on the veranda watching the fun, while I stood in the doorway.

Some one noticed me and immediately sent the ball to me. It landed on my chest, to the amusement of all. I was a stranger in a strange land, but wishing to show no ill feeling I kicked the ball. Not being well aimed, it landed on a young man who was walking down the sidewalk, and I disappeared at once. My victim, a cashier of a bank, enjoyed the joke and being acquainted with the owners of the boarding house, and after taking in the situation, decided to stop until my reappearance. The incident furnished him with plenty of jesting material which I always took in good faith.

It was a blow for which he fell and never survived, as I accepted a diamond in honor of the first anniversary of the incident and now with our family of six ruddy kiddies we are well on our way to a baseball nine or a football eleven.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

This is the second article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

AND now to give some of the general rules for cleaning, all of which tend toward success. First of all, for dry cleaning be sure that everything you are going to clean is thoroughly dry. It is well to hang the garments near the fire for a while, or out in the sun in the summer time. For if there is any moisture in them, it turns the clothes gray if they are made of white wool, and yellow if they are made of silk. And not only does it affect the garments which themselves were moist, but the moisture getting into the benzine makes all the rest of the clothes dingy.

All professional cleaners run a piece of dry cheesecloth through their machines before putting the garments in, and let the cloth take up any moisture which may be in the solvent. Another way is to throw in a handful of plain salt to absorb the water.

In cleaning large pieces—suits, coats, portieres, etc.—a good beating and brushing to take out all the dust is half the battle.

Don't dry light goods in too warm a room, as they become yellow.

Use Plenty of Gasoline.

Have plenty of gasoline or benzine and strain off what you have left; bottle it, as it is perfectly good for everything but white goods. Never use less than one gallon for a coat and skirt, and if possible economize by cleaning a lot of things at once. Then you will have three waters of varying dirtiness. The first one, the one in which you soak the garments, will be made up of some fairly dirty liquid left over from a previous time, the first rinsing liquid—if you use two—may also be not entirely clean, but if there are any white goods see that the last rinsing liquid is pure.

It saves the hands if you do your cleaning in an ordinary dairy can with a plunger in it. The five gallon size is splendid, as there isn't a great evaporating surface at the top and the can is of a shape to stand in a bucket of hot water. For under many conditions heated solvents work better than cold.

Never clean on a damp day.

The routine for the cleaning is first to dry the garment thoroughly; then shake and heat; turn the pockets inside out and brush with a stiff brush. Then spot. Then soak ten minutes in gasoline soap solution, working up and down, then rinse and wring gently by pressing in the hands and hang up to dry.

Rubbing Injures Fabrics.

In spotting, which should always be done before the general cleaning, work as quickly as possible, and dry at once with a piece of buckskin or by dusting plaster of Paris through a fine sieve over the spot to absorb the moisture.

Daub, don't rub, as rubbing not only separates the threads and injures the fabric but also produces a whitish shiny spot which in some materials, like charmeuse, can never be restified except by redyeing.

An embroidery hoop is a good thing to use in spotting to stretch the stain tight within the hoops. Always keep a little acetic acid solution on hand for cleaning silks or colored goods or restoring the color which may be affected by acids.

Find Out Nature of Stain.

The first thing to know is what kind of spot it is you are going to take out and the kind of fiber you have to work in, as some acids are harmless to cotton, but destroy wool at once. If the nature of the stain is unknown, try lukewarm distilled water first. There are various tests with litmus paper to discover whether the stains give alkaline or acid reactions, but it seems to me that they would only complicate matters for the amateur. If you don't know what the stain is and distilled water doesn't seem to change it at all, use a mixture of benzine and chloroform when you are sure the material is quite dry again. After all there are only two classes of solvents, water and a spirit detergent.

European cleaners use a small oar about 8 inches long of thin wood with the head well padded, and they daub or paddle the spots with this, especially on thin, light goods, as voile, taffeta, and chiffon.

In sponging silks avoid wrinkles, dry streaks, and slowness.

Stocking the Cleaning Cabinet.

In your cleaning cabinet have a tampon made of a wad of cotton firmly sewed into an old linen square, a couple of pieces of buckskin, two brushes, one soft, one hard, a couple of sponges, spotting sticks for acids, two small pans, one for distilled water, and one for soap. And then a little box of acids for special spots; acetic, oxalic, hydrochloric should be enough.

It is also well to have a little glycerin, ether, peroxide, and possibly chloroform in the medicine cabinet, then your benzine soap, and solvent. For the laundry eau de Javelle, ammonia, and borax. This seems like a lot, but, of course, a small amount lasts forever. My oxalic acid has been in my box for the last four years, and I think I got only two ounces in the beginning.

In using acids it is usually well to drop with a medicine dropper.

In working on spots always work toward the middle, letting the dirt drip through the central spot stretched on the embroidery hoop. This avoids rings. The advice given on most patent cleaners is to work away from the spot, but European cleaners never do. In fact, they often make a ring of pure solvent around the spot about an eighth of an inch from it, so that the grease in the stain may not spread beyond the ring.

Distress after Eating may follow eating your favorite foods.

To relieve this condition promptly try one or two

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

after each meal.

They neutralize the acid stomach, giving the alkaline effect, the same as when in normal working order.

These tablets are sold in every drug store in the U.S. and Canada at 60c a box. Known to a host of people for 25 years as the one thing needful in an attack of indigestion.

BRIGHT·SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

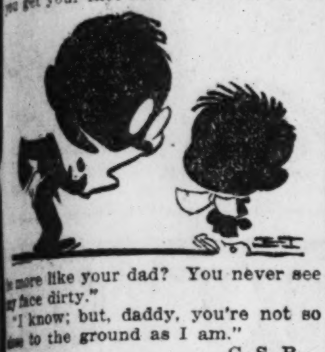
The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

We recently took our little girl to the movies for the first time. After gravely looking over the famous comedian, she said, "What's the matter with his feet? Can't he steer straight?"
M. E. P.

Arthur came running in one day with an unusually dirty face.

His father said: "Arthur, how do you get your face so dirty? Can't you be more like your dad? You never see my face dirty."



"I know; but, daddy, you're not so close to the ground as I am."
C. S. B.

Louise was sent to the drug store on an errand.

"Good morning, Jane," said the affable clerk.

"My name is Louise and my sister's name is Jane," said she.

"Well, I guess there isn't much difference in your ages, is there?" he continued.

"Only half an hour," replied the twin.
P. A. D.

Dorothy Jane seemed reluctant to went when, upon leaving her home after a pleasant visit, I had insisted upon taking her, her sister Betty, or her doll home with me.

"Well, then, whom shall I take?" I remarked to Dorothy.

After considering for a second she pointed to the young man who had accompanied me and said: "Take him home with you; you brought him."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

A COAT BY PAQUIN.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

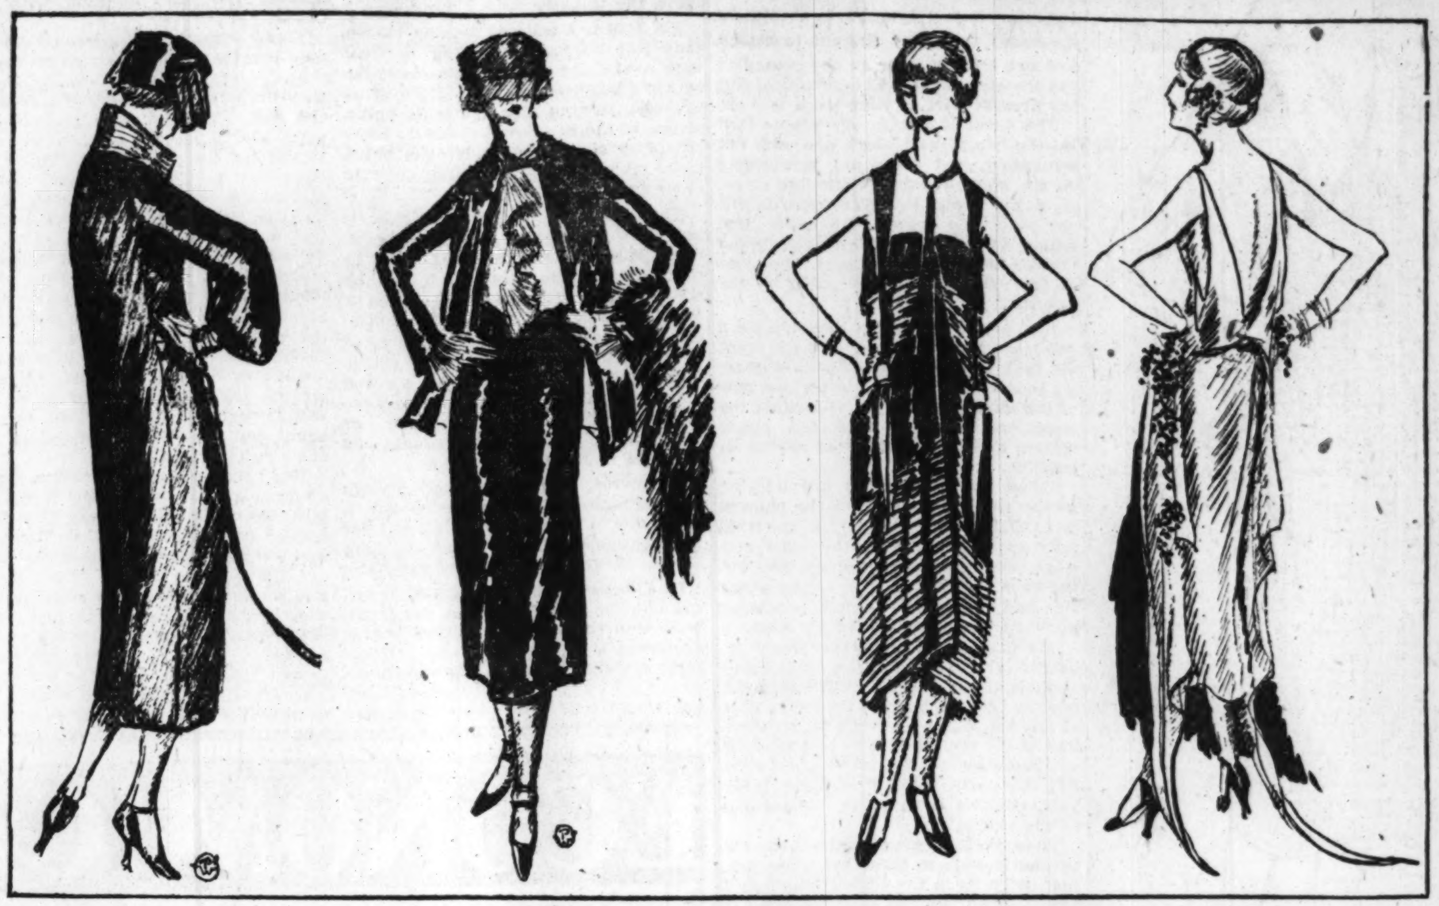
PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Do you want to know what next fall's silhouette is going to be? I do not furnish any written guarantee with my information, but I bought a coat today which I expect to come into its own along round that time. In other words, I feel sure enough to put up my own money on it.

It is a long, flat back, with a low, wide, and extremely tight belt, a front so severe and tight fitting in the bodice that the men call it "uninteresting," and a skirt that is circular—but not across the back. All of the ripples point toward the front. It is fine for the Americans with their tall, graceful figures. I don't know how the French will make out, but hope for the best, for if they do not wear it, I fear it will not be the style for long.

The first offering represents it. There are really more ripples across the front of the skirt than the artist denotes. And the belt is across the hips. The coat shows the tendency of the times as to "fantaisie" in sleeves. They are getting even longer, as a general proposition, or else disappearing altogether. The collar and the tight cuffs are heavily embroidered in copper, and there is a little half moon effect on the wide part of the sleeve, as well as some horizontal bars of it down the front. And the low belt is exceedingly tight. The material is black broadcloth, lined with black silk. Every dress looks like a funeral dress nowadays. Mme. Paquin is the author of the coat.

The second was a typical spring blossom, flowering along the paths of the Bois until the April blizzard of yesterday chilled its exuberance. If your tailleur isn't nipped in at the waist (according to last week's model), it ought to be extremely straight. This one is of the latter type. It is of black faille, lined with white crêpe de chine, and the blouse accompanying is of the same piece.

The girl carries a silver fox fur over her arm. Last week she was too warm to wear it, and now she is swathed in her fur coat. Note that Parisian shoes are getting more pointed. The eye shield of a veil still holds its own. It is so becoming that maybe it will become permanent.



Paquin coat of black broadcloth; collar, cuffs, and motif embroidered in copper.

Tailored suit of black faille with white crepe de chine lining and blouse.

Dinner dress of black faille with small bolero coat and drapery drawn upward.

Gown of white chiffon softened with a ceinture of grapes in pale colors.

The third offering is valuable from two standpoints. First, it again depicts your kinswoman, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, as she appeared at the Ritz in a dinner dress, and, secondly, it shows a new tendency in drapery to drape upwards. We old-fashioned ones used to think that the whole point to a draper was that it should fall heavily. For modernity, note the upward droop.

One other feature distinguished this contribution. It is in black faille silk—which in olden days was considered to be mourning, and not the material for evening. The blouse is in the form of a bolero jacket. The entire front of the dress is drawn upward and held in place by a piece of the material going round the neck and fastened with one large pearl.

Following the tendency of the day, the highest ornamentation is on the skirt. The belt and the bottom of the skirt almost to the knees are a garden of color—mauve, blue, and yellow—in silks beautifully blended and put on by hand, giving the richness of embroidery, but withal a crudity, like the rag rug of old that has been made of the wedding silks of a generation or two in some middle western family. Two long pink tassels hang like pendants from the ends of the bolero jacket to the knees.

The fourth sketch does not represent Ophelia, strong as is the resemblance, but "the beautiful Mrs. Addison," whose husband is a secretary of the British embassy. All over Paris her name is mentioned, always with the qualifying adjective in front of it. She is beautiful in a city where chic prevails and beauty is rare. Of the former attribute this lovely lady has also a share.

She is seen here in a white chiffon dancing frock, which she wore one evening at the Ritz. Sometimes I ask the artist to describe people to me, even when I am looking at them myself. I think this lady must have gone to his head. This is what he said: "The beautiful Mrs. Addison in a white chiffon dancing frock made distinctive by the choice of soft blending colors in the clusters of grapes that ornamented the ceinture. Purplish browns and bluish greens in contrast to her pink hair and pale skin and dark eyes; quite exotic."

What is there to add to that in the way of the specific? I, who am practically minded and have always at heart the styles of the future, will make just one generalization based on the presentation. Note that the ceinture of grapes does not go across the back. Neither does my more matter-of-fact ceinture of black broadcloth on my street coat. It begins on either side. I think people are getting jolly well tired of ceintures that make the full circuit, and that the model of the near future will present a belt only across the front.

Only Too Accurate.

While living in a small town I became acquainted with a young doctor. After he had been practicing in the town for several months it was whispered around that Dr. Blank was going to be married. This seemed strange to some while to others it was apparently amusing, due to his disposition in the past.

One day we met and were passing the time of day when I said, "Say, doc, I hear that you are going to be married."

He said "yes."

I said, "And they say that your intended is red headed, freckle faced, bow legged, and has a glass eye,"

"Well, what of it, is it any of your business?" he said.

Try to imagine my embarrassment when a day or two after the ceremony I found that the description was almost exact. Trying to straighten myself with doc was useless.
J. E. W.

Her Dignity Gone.

For several years previous to the time here described I had been known to my intimates as a dignified girl, and their opinions to that effect had not, to say the least, diminished my self-esteem. When, therefore, at a social function one evening, they proposed a game of what they termed "Barnyard Echoes," I rather reluctantly consented on their assurance that it was great fun. So it proved, indeed, but they omitted to advise that I was to be the victim of the fun.

The plot was laid with malice, aforethought, and largely owing to my exalted opinion of myself it worked beautifully for the plotters. A director for the game was appointed, and announced that each participant must do exactly as told, in order to insure a successful outcome. The orders were to be given to the players privately—that is, they were whispered to each, by the director, after she had publicly stated that upon counting three, everyone must immediately do as instructed, without the slightest hesitation. I afterward learned that she advised everybody else to keep perfectly quiet when the signal was given, but I was ordered to slap my arms vigorously, representing a chanticleer's wing's, and crow enthusiastically, in double-forte fashion.

The director took position at the center of the room and slowly counted, "One, two, three," whereupon I performed precisely as planned, with great emphasis and full action, before realizing that I was a soloist; in fact, with such vigor did I operate my arms that a part of my dress was loosened, causing me to grasp my skirts with both hands and rush precipitately from the room, in order to prevent a more serious catastrophe. Compliments have never ceased since then on my ability to imitate the barnyard king in action.
M. K.

They Look Alike.

My twin sister has been visiting me this week. We are the same build and look remarkably alike. She is engaged to a lieutenant. Yesterday my husband was sitting in the library when sister's friend was announced. He entered the drawing room where I stood, seized me in his arms, and kissed me. Much confused I looked up to see my husband and sister standing in the doorway.
D. K.

Pursuing Brother James.

We were having our house wired for electric lights. One young man working was particularly dignified and lofty, and I liked him. My little brother, James, was unruly that morning and at last I jumped up to catch and punish him. Quick as a flash he was out in the kitchen and I after him. Around the corner of the door I ran, and, stumbling over the rug, landed in that particularly dignified young man's arms. Heavens! and I had wanted to show him how good and kind I was. Recovering from the surprise, he attempted to pass it all off as a joke, saying smilingly, "Too fast for me." But I knew what he meant, and I was burning with embarrassment as I mumbled something about pardon.

1004—Woman's waist. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2 yards of 36 inch or 1⅞ yards of 40 inch material.

1005—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting and 8¼ yards of binding.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

ONE of the large plaids in a French gingham will be just the material for pattern No. 9662, and you can have a smart looking dress without much labor. Plaids in themselves are so decorative, little or no trimming is needed.

To get the right effects in plaids, stripes, or many figures it is absolutely necessary that they are cut to match and are put together in the seams to get the best effects. This arranged for, the greater part of your work is over.

The dress is cut in one piece—that is, the waist and skirt are not cut separately, and there are just seams on the shoulders and under the arms. At a hip depth the skirt part is cut out each side beyond the under arm seams, and this extension is gathered and set on to the waist part. For size 36 the skirt measures 2 yards at the bottom.

Now about working so that the plaid will match in the seams. Cut the front out first, marking the seam lines clearly; then turn the seam in on one side of the skirt part and lay it against the uncut material so that the plaids match, and of course be as saving as possible.

While the two pieces are laid together so they match, pin the pattern for the back on the uncut material, pinning it on so that the skirt sections come together perfectly, and cut the back out. Then turn to the under side and cut where the cloth is pinned, allowing the seam beyond the pins.

When ready to baste the seams together lay your work on a large table, and, beginning at the bottom one one of the skirt seams, pin the turned in edge of one side of the skirt on to the seam line of the section it is to be basted to, so that the plaids match perfectly. Pin the seam together at close intervals, sticking the pins in horizontally to the seam.

Then with basting cotton hem the turned in edge to the other seam line, just catching in the edge of the folded seam. Then you can turn the dress to the wrong side; baste and stitch. The hemming does not interfere with the stitching or basting, but serves perfectly to keep the matched parts together. After the seams are stitched cut the basting and hemming threads at close intervals and pull out.

Bastings should never be taken out any other way, and an ivory or steel stiletto is better than scissors to remove the threads.

No. 1004 is a tailored looking blouse, that will be just the thing to wear with a suit for a morning's shopping, or for a business woman. Plain white in voile, marquisette, crêpe de chine, or one of the linens will make up beautifully, or one of the lovely plain blues, tans, pinks, or any becoming color in chambray.

The fullness on the shoulders is bound to be becoming to any figure, and little or no trimming will be needed. Threads could be drawn on the fronts to make horizontal lines or small squares, and these could be hemstitched; then corresponding lines could be drawn across the ends of the collar, finishing the collar edge with a rolled hem, to which is sewed a narrow edge in Valenciennes, filet, Venetian, or other lace. The cuffs should be trimmed to match the collar.

Of course, there are nearly always perforations on all patterns for a short sleeve if it is preferred; but for this particular kind of blouse the long sleeve will be much more appropriate.

No. 1005 is a one piece house dress, cut kimono fashion, having the front, back, and short sleeves all cut in one. The dress is open in the front, perforations showing the depth to which the opening is cut. White Indian head cotton would make up attractively, and for trimming one of the small checks in gingham could be used.

Shrink your material before cutting out, and then allow for a deep hem on the skirt. If you don't like the idea of having pockets, collar, cuffs, and belt of the checked gingham, cut these pieces out of the dress material and trim with bias bands of the check, binding the front opening with the check.

These trimming strips must be cut on a true bias, which, you know, means that the length is folded exactly across the width, and the cutting is done on the fold. This gives a perfect bias edge, and a square rule is the best to use for the measuring. This trimming will not be at all good looking unless the work is accurately done. So take time to do careful measuring and cutting, overhand the strips together and then press quite smoothly.

It is not a bad idea to press them folding through the center. After this it should not be hard to turn in the edges on both sides so that the banding is even. Where it is basted around a shaped surface, slightly stretch the lower edge of it, and it will fit perfectly. Stitch close to each edge, and go slowly enough so you don't run off in places.

The pockets give the dress a jaunty air, and a little embroidery would not be amiss on them. One will have to be careful not to catch them on furniture and things about the kitchen, for there are times when we all hurry about, and these pretty pockets stand out so, they are apt to catch and tear. Buy shank pearl buttons, and work eyelets for them, then the buttons can be removed before the dress is laundered. The dress will iron more easily, and there will not be any broken buttons

Reed, Fiber and Collapsible Baby Carriages

BACK from the daily outing they come—baby soothed by the fresh air and the smooth gliding of his roomy Sidweave Pullman Sleeper. His slumber is deep, for the long, flexible springs have absorbed all jars and bumps, and the "floating" of the pivoted front axle has allowed no roughness of the pavement to pitch him sideways. Then too, the 3-fold pillow mattress is most comfortable, and the back and sliding hood fixtures allow adjustment to exactly the right position. Comfort! Yes, and beauty too. Mothers choose this vehicle for its uncommonly graceful shape, its decorative steel wheels, and for its extra fine fibre weave which rivals a fine dress fabric in regularity. It's Sidweave—the new method of weaving which retains the wide range of designs heretofore limited to hand woven reed carriages. The very latest!

Write for dealer's name and valuable book.

SIDWAY MERCANTILE CO.

Chicago Office (Wholesale Only)
1411 S. Michigan Ave.

For every taste there's a Sidway style and design. Perhaps you prefer a hand woven reed body instead of the fine-texture Sidweave. You may also prefer a body of slightly different shape with round-reed roll-edges, and such appointments as nickel-framed glass windows in the hood. Then this luxurious, and roomy Sidway Reed Body Pullman Sleeper will probably just suit. It's a beauty. The most discriminating are highly pleased with it.

For all-round use—in any weather—for travel far or near—the Sidway Collapsible is the vehicle. You can fold it flat and put it under the car seat; yet when it's in use it's roomier than other baby carriages. The Fabrikoid upholstery is waterproof; the whole carriage is washable. The long-leaf, flexible springs are adjustable as baby grows heavier. A most practical and handsome vehicle.

Sidway reed, wood, fibre and collapsible vehicles are made in endless variety by the world's largest manufacturers of baby carriages.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

I am 85 years old and just getting over a bad spell of sickness. If any one among your readers has some disc records I would be thankful to have them, as I will be in the house a lot. "G. P. C."

I hope this request will be granted and soon. An appeal from one of advanced years should not go unheeded.

"Could you help me get a wheel chair for my poor crippled mother? I have been out of work since November, so it is impossible for me to buy one. Mother has been in the house for twenty months, and she is so anxious now to be taken out into the fresh air. "D. S."

I trust that this invalid will soon receive the chair she wants and needs so much. It will afford me great pleasure to send her address.

"Have been reading your column and was wondering whether one of your readers has an old typewriter not in use. Am a widow and am doing addressing at home evenings and it certainly would be a great help to me. Thanking you in advance. "MRS. A. B."

If there is an available typewriter, I know it will be appreciated by Mrs. A. B.

"I write in behalf of my sister. She has been deserted by her husband, and is about to become a mother. She is going to the county hospital. I am in poor circumstances and cannot help her any. She has no clothing for the expected baby and none for herself. She wears size 38. Will you please ask some kind soul to help her, for she is not well now, and her heart is broken. MRS. E. B."

This plea speaks for itself. Who can and will help?

And we have added to it magnificent facilities for canoeing, sailing, bathing and driving, tennis courts and a sporty nine-hole golf course. Pleasant rooms, excellent cuisine, elevator service and modern hotel staff. Orchestra plays twice daily in music room and evenings for dancing. THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THE QUICK LOAF OF BREAD.

PROBABLY the quick or baking powder or soda or egg breads, baked in loaves—on which good country cooks used to place such dependence—have been unduly neglected. If called upon to defend them, there are a number of good arguments that you or I may bring forward in support of their more frequent use.

First, these breads may be exceedingly palatable. A graham loaf made with sour milk and a little soda and baking powder requires, and also in[illegible] chewing. That is an excellent argument, it seems to me. The graham loaf of the bake shop does not inspire anything, as far as I am concerned, even if it has two raisins to a slice as did some I ordered at a fine eating place recently—two thin slices for fifteen cents. The graham had been sifted so it was not a true graham bread.

It is a great advantage to a housewife to be able to go into her kitchen and come out at the end of an hour and a half, or perhaps a little sooner, with a nice supply of little loaves of bread for sandwiches, breakfast toast, afternoon tea use, and so forth. In that hour and a half she has made and baked the bread, cleaned up after it, and if she is a wise filler-in of her time she may have done a good many nice little bits of work besides; in fact, have had every one of the top burners of her stove at work, as well as the oven. But these efforts make another story. However, sirups for beverages, beans and peas for soups, oatmeal for breakfast, hominy for various uses, mush, and so forth may be made while the bread is on the dock. Or the bread may be started just before the dinner preparations are made.

To Get Fine Grained Bread.

It is not necessary to put a dough on a board in order to knead it, and the doughs of the quick loaves do need a little kneading. These doughs are most of them spongy, especially if made with sour milk, and in order to get a fine grained bread it is necessary to work the sponge somewhat. A good sized wooden spoon, the cake spoon with the slits, is a good instrument with which to work the dough.

Then if we are going to add some shortening, we should add it last, and melted for two reasons. It gathers and binds the dough somewhat, and our little loaves will then have a smooth instead of a ragged top, if we take the pains to smooth them down with a spoon wet in cold water. The spoon will not stick to a dough thus finished with melted shortening, and it usually will to any other sort.

Now as to the size of our loaves. If we use a pound bread tin it will take about an hour and a quarter or a half to bake most of these breads as they should be baked. Underdone graham breads are risky foods, producing uncomfortably laxative effects. The country women who have been making quick graham breads for almost a century now have often used a tin like one designed for baking small sheets of gingerbread. This gives a thin, wide loaf which cuts into long and narrow slices, really needing to be cut in two before served.

Tiny Bread Pans Preferable.

No one who has once become acquainted with the nice little bread pans—either in tin or aluminum and perhaps in Russian iron—which are only four and a half inches long by two and a half wide and about two inches deep—will ever want to give them up, especially if her family is small or she likes to give away a little loaf of bread or cake frequently, or if she likes the daintiness of the slices from loaves baked in these. An ordinary three cups of flour recipe—a pound of bread recipe—will make five nice little loaves when baked in these.

There are also the tiny covered brown bread tins which will not hold half the dough these little oblong tins hold. Brown bread can be baked as well as steamed in these, and other doughs as well. If we want to make tiny round sandwiches of our loaves these are the tins to use.

Of course brown bread sandwiches are a favorite thing in the best of families for afternoon tea and so forth. The bread is cut extremely thin and often has no more filling than the butter, but is excellent with cream cheese and any of the spicy sardine or smoked herring fillings.

When preparing for the entertainment of men bake the brown bread. Perhaps they like, better than you imagine, the little sandwich of which they can make a mouthful, though it may be large enough for four bites. The good mouthful size which the French call "bonne bouche" and make much of is worth more attention from us. There are various arguments that may be adduced in its favor besides the fact that this portion of food is convenient and wonderfully attractive.

Graham Bread.

But to our breads! We may take almost any graham bread recipe, if the source be a reliable one, and begin our practice of making the quick loaf. But some of these recipes will call for molasses and some for sugar and some for no sweetening. How shall we choose? Well, graham bread is quite as laxative as bran bread, as is also the ordinary brown bread with molasses. There is always the danger that it may be too laxative for some people. In making bread for such we must not use the recipe which calls for molasses since that makes it extra laxative.

But because of its extra palatability we may want to use some sweetening, so let us take white sugar. With the sugar, too, we get a bread that has a crisper crust than one without sweetening and one that makes a pleasanter toast, inspiring long chewing. Having a knowledge of the principles governing dough, we may almost choose at random from any authentic source. I tried this the other day, having in mind to discover how one of our home economics people settled the relation between sour milk and flour, but I juggled the ingredients a bit, as follows:

One-half cup of white flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder, three-fourths of a teaspoon of soda, and a teaspoon of salt; two cups of graham flour; one-third cup of sugar dissolved and beaten with one and a half cups of sour milk; one-fourth cup of shortening. To lighten the graham sift it partly, then pour what is in the sieve back with the sifted part, mix this and the white flour thoroughly, then stir them, part at a time, into the liquid.

Add the melted fat last, or the recipe, partly followed, said mix it with the sugar and sour milk, for one small loaf taking fifty minutes to bake. I baked five small loaves almost that length of time. They were put into a hot oven, the fire lowered and increased again after half an hour. The hot oven is needed to bring up dough quickly and swell it, then steady baking to set, and hotter sometimes to crisp.

Raisin Bread.

Health advocates sometimes say that raisins should not be used in brown breads of any sort, including the graham, since they make it too palatable. But suppose we are making bread for the entertainment of well persons—then we may make it so palatable that those who are not instructed may eat it for cake—without butter. I gave away a little loaf of raisin bread the other day, made by the following recipe, and it was taken for cake:

One cup of graham flour; two cups of white flour sifted with one teaspoon of salt, and three teaspoons of baking powder; one egg; one and a half cups of sweet milk, and one cup of raisins put through a coarse disk of the food chopper. Into the middle of the thoroughly mixed dry ingredients in the bowl, make a fountainlike indentation, pour the liquid into it, and gradually incorporate the dry in it, then add floured raisins. Or the flour may be added to the liquid, part at a time. Have oven hot at first, but lower the heat for the continued baking.

By the way, some good old fashioned housekeepers and many a French cook get a flour into a liquid in this fountain manner—quite as slowly as in adding the flour part at a time to a liquid, folding it in—with a great saving of motions. They even make a yeast sponge or dough in this same fashion. The French cook not only saves motions, but utensils, when he is making a dough to be kneaded on a board, by sifting the flour directly on to the board, making the fountain, pouring the liquid into it, then working so scientifically that not a drop of wet is spilled on the board.

Nut Breads.

It was a discovery to me, though to other people it may have been no new thing, that salted peanuts with the salt rubbed off in a little flour make a most satisfactory addition to an egg dough well sweetened. After rubbing them with the flour this was sifted off and the nuts put through a coarse disk of the food chopper. This bread cut in deliciously thin slices.

One egg, one-half cup of sugar, one cup of milk, two and a half cups of flour sifted with three teaspoons of baking powder, and one teaspoon of salt, one cup of chopped nuts, stirred into the dough at the last. Bake in moderate oven, but one quite hot at start.

Note in this recipe that there is less flour to a cup of milk than what is generally called for in making quick doughs. Nuts will swell somewhat, when cut up like this, especially peanuts, and so take up liquid. In this case it is a sweetened liquid, and they are improved in flavor by the sweetening. And there is another thing worth noting: quick breads made with less flour than the amounts prescribed for doughs, will cut in thinner slices than those made with the least bit too much flour, especially if not well worked. The quick breads need never be crumbly, no matter how spongy the dough when first mixed.

Unleavened Graham Bread.

If graham flour is lifted up with a spoon in measuring it, if the batter made is baked in a covered brown bread tin so that the flour swells in the steam generated, an excellent bread may be made without egg or leaven of any sort, with one cup of sweet milk, one-fourth cup of molasses, and two cups of graham flour — unsifted unless to lighten—with the bran mixed in after.

Beat the milk, salt and molasses together with the egg beater, and then stir the two cups of flour gradually into it. Butter a brown bread tin with a close fitting cover—hermetically sealing—and pour in the batter. Bake for an hour or a little more in an oven a trifle above medium, or at about 400 degrees.

Boston Brown Bread.

Take one cup of corn meal and one cup of rye flour sifted together; one cup of graham flour; two cups of sour milk, one-half cup of molasses, two level teaspoons of salt, and two level teaspoons of soda, mashed smooth with a knife, and finally dissolved in the cup in which the molasses and then the sour milk are measured. Stir the graham into the milk first and then the mixed rye and corn meal—rye meal is preferable to rye flour, if obtainable. The sour milk and molasses should be beaten thoroughly with an egg beater.

This is enough for two good loaves of brown bread which are quite as good, or better, baked for an hour in a medium oven as when steamed in the same sort of a tightly covered tin for three hours. This is superexcellent with candied apple or other fruit.

Real tooth danger lies under the gums

Under the gums is the important foundation—the bony root sockets which hold the teeth in place.

Healthy gums guard and preserve this foundation of your teeth. Soft, bleeding, tender or receding gums allow pyorrhea infection to creep beneath them. If unchecked, the germs spread to the bony root sockets, weaken and destroy them.

Then your teeth become loose and eventually fall out, or must be extracted—because pyorrhea has eaten away their supporting foundation. You may have kept the visible surface of the teeth white and glistening by daily brushing—you may have had all cavities skillfully filled—but all that care has gone for naught because you neglected your gums.

Watch your gums if you want to save your teeth!

Pyorrhocide Powder was compounded for the specific purpose of maintaining and restoring gum health. In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, it is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Free trial package to prove what real gum health means

Send coupon for free sample of Pyorrhocide Powder. Note how it leaves a refreshed, cleanly feeling of the teeth and gums long after brushing. To you who have used other dentifrices, it will prove a revelation. We will also send our educational booklet on the Prevention and Treatment of Pyorrhea.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

UMBRAGE has been taken with this section of THE TRIBUNE because, in its report of Mr. Ben-Ami's performance of "Samson and Delilah," there was contained the inference that the actor and the play were worth an evening's observation.

Many good people went to the Playhouse last week at large expenditure of time and comfort, all keyed up for amusement, and finding it not, felt [illegible] with THE TRIBUNE for directing them on a fool's errand. One pouting [illegible] writes to complain that THE TRIBUNE said that "Happy-Go-Lucky" is good, and that Mr. Ben-Ami is good. "If one is, the other isn't," she continues, "and how are we to tell where to go in the face of such inconsistency? We went to 'The Bat' at your suggestion, and liked it, but Ben-Ami bored us."

Confronted with an indignation so thoroughly justified, the drama reviewer [illegible] ponders his function as friend and counsellor. Pale-eyed in his esthetic cell, he peers into the infinite secrecies of the play-patron's mind and tries to fathom its operations. Himself, he knows, of course, the noble things, but preach as he will in their behalf, the large majority of his acquaintances (he has no friends) retain their preference, as he, too, does, for Samuel Shipman over Lope de Vega. He recalls that it is his moral duty to tell the public not what it likes but to tell it what it ought to like; and, loving his fellow men, he desponds that he is unable to improve them by his virtuous instructions. With Medea, he cries, "I will endure!" Like a limpet on its rock he clings, if he is youthful, for almost a season, to his lofty ideals, and then is borne away from them by the so-called fell influences.

Still anxious to be of use to humanity, the critic tries to be a sort of tipster, advising his subscribers where to go to have fun, doping his esthetic conscience, meanwhile, with slinking hints between the lines. He becomes that [illegible] brother of "yes-man," the "yes-and-no man," than which there are few things littler. And his reward, oddly enough, is inconsiderable. Those who like the play think he doesn't like it; and those who don't like it, think he does. He is outcast, and in his desolation he discovers little comfort. So baffling is the public taste in the theater that if Harry Pratt Judson, the president of the University of Chicago, or Frederick Stock, the director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, or Gen. Dawes of the Opera, or Mr. Hutchinson of the Art Institute were to tell me that he was fond of the show, "Shavings," I should say, "Atta boy! Atta boy!" And I should be no more dishonest than I was during my experience as a peace-correspondent, when I told a sincere waitress in Brest that I was fond of tripe.

Ben-Ami was the topic of these remarks at their beginning, forgot in consideration of you and me and the others. I felt safe in my encomium of Ben-Ami because, among other things, a literate lady friend told me between the acts of "Samson and Delilah" that next to Miss Fay Bainter in "East Is West" Ben-Ami was the greatest artist she had seen in the theater this season. She believed him to be better than Lowell Sherman in "The Tavern" or Miss Charlotte Greenwood in "Linger Longer, Letty." So I take refuge in this remote fissure, and whisper that Ben-Ami is a fine actor and that "Samson and Delilah" is a bit beyond the average play. I ask you to remember that "Samson and Delilah" has only one ring instead of three, that it is a drama rather than a circus, with no zoo and with but one or two clowns, and that the star performer is not in the least like Frank Tinney or George M. Cohan. It may intrigue some of you to know that Ben-Ami stands upon his head in the first act, having been an acrobat in Russia, years ago, and that his animal kiss upon the mouth of the woman he loves, though God only knows why, is of a width and longevity not permissible even in the movies. He is honest in his acting, utterly without the charted tricks, but with new ones, fresh from nature. His diction and demeanor are alien, his accent is often put upon the wrong syllable; he is, in appearance, a trifle Dill Pickle, if you know what that means, in its best sense. But he has the mind of a creator and the knack of a [illegible] mimic. He is able to take realism beyond the familiar into the believable realm of right romance, following, better than most actors I know, the strange irregular rhythm that is said to mark the zigzag of human life. He is "like," if you have imagination, and if you haven't, join me tomorrow evening in Mr. Bert Williams' performance of "The Broadway Brevities," where we won't need it.

MISS HELEN HAYES in "BAB"
AT THE BLACKSTONE PHOTO BY LEWIS SMITH

Miss Alice Brady's new drama, "Drifting," is based, they say, upon a story entitled "Cassie Cook of the Yellow Sea," and it will assign her to parts and experiences undreamed by Burton Holmes and the other eloquent pilgrims to parts unconventional. Felix Krembs, who lately made stage love to Miss Willette Kershaw in "Woman to Woman," will provide the broad-shouldered heroics of Miss Brady's breathless and feverish experiences.

George Alison, who has been competent but unobserved in the cast of "Dulcy" at the Cort, has moved over to the Blackstone, and is playing Bab's father in the place of Sam Edwards, who died bravely last week, making his last exit without a whimper.

The leading part in "Irish Dew," a new comedy of American life written by Abby Merchant, which William Harris Jr. will produce in Baltimore tomorrow, will be played by Mary Shaw. In "Irish Dew" she is to act an Irish washwoman, said to be a rich comedy characterization. In the cast with Miss Shaw will be Arleen Hackett, Glenn Hunter, Sydney Booth, Betty Linley and Jay Wilson, among others.

"The Wren," in which Miss Hayes is to be a star next season, is a drama of that Maine neighborhood wherein Mr. Tarkington spends his summer holiday. Miss Hayes' rôle will be that of a young woman endowed dramatically with the maternal instinct, and its text is Shakespearean: "She will fight, her young ones in the nest, against the owl."

Karl Gardner, who used to be America's favorite German comedian, is destitute and some philanthropists of the Loop theaters are giving him today at the Grand a benefit performance that he may have funds with which to finish. One ventures cynically to predict that many actors will be present and that the bill will be good, but that the audience will be scant.

Mr. Barrymore (John), now appearing with Miss Barrymore in Mrs. Barrymore's cryptic "Clair de Lune," contemplates a performance of Lord Byron

Echoes of Sonorous Dance Hall Music Source of New Musical Comedy Scores

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, May 7.—[Special.]—I know where the musical comedies come from. I was there last week. Happy Rhone, with an orchestra of a hundred sonorous instruments operated by the élite of Harlem's colored musicians, played for 4,500 of his brethren as they writhed about the floor of the Manhattan Casino in the throes of the latest dance step, known as "steppin' on the cootie."

A week later I heard faint echoes of the impulsive rhythms of Happy Rhone's players in the sounds that rose from the orchestra pit in front of "Two Little Girls in Blue," the new thing in the George M. Cohan theater. And, a night later, I had a mild memory of the muscular commotion involved in "steppin' on the cootie" when I saw the dancing of a band of eight trained girls in the new "Princess Virtue" in the Central theater.

It took a trained musical professor to discover that Irving Berlin borrowed lilts from the chants of the country Negro of the south. Any ordinary man about town may discover that the pure source of a good deal of what will make this year's musical comedies slightly different from those of last year is the town Negro, the rhapsodic colored flat dweller of the upper reaches of Harlem.

The man who guided me about the floor and galleries of the Manhattan Casino on the night of the Grand Annual Ball with Favors discoursed on this year's fashions in Harlem music. He told me that Mr. Rhone had specialized in oboes. The congested nasal note of the oboe is prominent among the tones that come out of the orchestration of the score of "Two Little Girls in Blue."

"The oboe," lectured Mr. Rhone's spokesman, "makes 'em crazy. The minute Mr. Rhone put an oboe in his orchestra and played for a dance the other night 'steppin' on the cootie' just occurred spontaneously."

And I looked out over the packed and swaying mass on the Casino floor and saw 2,250 couples crazed with dancing and agreed with my informer.

"Perhaps," he speculated further, "the oboe makes the dancers crazy because it is played by a crazy musician. Mr. Rhone tells me that all oboe players go crazy sooner or later. The way they have to hold their breath up in the backs of their mouths produces pressure on the brain. They get chronic mental congestion."

It is strange that Mr. Rhone has made the discovery once made by Arthur Nikisch, director of the Gewandhaus Symphony orchestra in Leipzig, Germany. He wrote a monograph ten years ago on his first oboist in which he told how that expert had gradually lost his cheerful disposition and had finally become a hypochondriac from years of legato breathing. You do not always suspect what personal sacrifices of health and happiness are made for your pleasure by your entertainers.

The originals in the Manhattan Casino of the novelties of last week's music shows were grosser but infinitely more vital than their downtown imitations. The oboe in the orchestra which plays Rudolph Friml's tunes to "Two Little Girls in Blue" is merely a tonal perfume of the melodies. Even so, it adds a restive element to the orchestra. It animates some moments which otherwise would drag. "Two Little Girls in Blue" is a modest production. They tempered the immodest reed to fit the play. Mr. Rhone, having to do more directly with the fundamental passion of rhythm, uses it more immodestly. The result was "steppin' on the cootie."

This new convulsion probably will spread among the musical comedies and ballrooms. Its plot is in two movements. First you shimmy slightly, with the figurative result that the villain of the mimeodrama is dashed to the floor at your feet. Then you raise your right foot coquettishly and bring it down gently. The villain is crushed. The next step presumably disposes of his brother. You may see the innovation in a moderated form in a step used by the eight girls in green who are called "Eight Little Nobodies" in the program of "Princess Virtue."

It will be a sorry day for the purveyors of musical comedy when the town Negroes lose their musical impulse. The Harlem dance halls are frequented

Car Buyers Won BY THE $1000 Saving Velie

Publication of the actual figures showing how Velie 48 saves buyers $1,078.50 cash has aroused motorists everywhere. No such bargain in a superb five-passenger, six-cylinder car has ever been offered before. Some over-priced cars have been compelled to reduce their prices recently, but they are still far above Velie. The latest figures show conclusively that the average price of all cars having one or more of the same features found in the Velie is $1,078.50 higher than the Velie. You can easily take published prices and find the result yourself. The comparison also shows that no other one car combines all the Velie splendid features.

In addition to its matchless construction, you have the Velie's attested records in long mileage per gallon, and in low upkeep costs — over many years of service, a point in which it is unequaled. You have the Velie's style leadership, everywhere acknowledged —its exceptional room—its lasting mirror finish—its complete equipment.

Eight new 1921 models: 5 and 7 passenger touring, sedan, coupe, roadster, speedster and a smaller six with cord tires all around at the price of fours.

That car buyers everywhere appreciate these Velie values is shown by Velie's big production with Velie factories going strong. To make sure of having your Velie when you want it, see your nearest Velie dealer today.

The Theaters

in a play entitled "Lord Byron," by Melanie A. W. Kroll of Chicago, Ill.

Chicago, April 24, 1921.—A. H. Woods Theater: Manager:

Mother may I go to a show?
Yes, my darling darter;
Don't mind what Percy Hammond says,
But go see "Gertie's Garter."
Bessie Simpson,
301 West Division street.

Seats have been sent by Mr. Woods to Miss Simpson in reward for the above poetry.

Law Offices, Malato, Wolf & Love, Chicago, April 29, 1921—Percy Hammond, Esquire, Chicago Tribune:

Dear Sir—As chairman of the entertainment committee, I have been delegated to make inquiry regarding your comment recently to the effect that "Linger Longer Letty" is "for the Elks rather than the Woman's club."

You know the Elks is not only a fraternal order, but a civic institution, and as such the interpretation that may follow in the wake of your comment to the effect that the standard required for the Elks is, by contrast, much lower than that required for the Woman's club is rather unkind.

May we not be favored with a correction through the same channels for the edification of the million Elks and the hundreds of thousands of readers of your column? I am,

Yours very respectfully,
Alexander Wolf,
Chairman of the entertainment committee, Chicago lodge, No. 4, B. P. O. E.

Beg pardon.

Deep thoughts from Mr. Rosenthal, my Boston critic, are also the breathless emissary of Mr. George M. Cohan:

RN Boston, Mass., May 4 1921
Percy Hammond, Trib, Chicago, Ill
OBrien girl another real cohan triumph opened tremont theatre Tuesday night twenty four hundred dollars which is absolute record house for anything anytime turned away fully thousand people public and press declare it sure fire cohan hit continual line at box office and Cohan excellent musical organization which is conceded best he ever had will surely spend summer in Boston. J J Rosenthal

By wire from Mr. Kaufmann, in New York: Arnold Daly, as intimated in these columns a few weeks ago, will undertake next season to restore the Greenwich Village theater to its ancient and respected footing. On Oct. 10, to be precise, Mr. Daly will take over the Greenwich for the presentation of Shaw's "The Man of Destiny," and Carl Shoner's "The Children's Tragedy," and thereafter he promises a change of bill each two months with "Candida" and "The Master" among the prospective offerings. Such a promise from Mr. Daly means more than it would from most sources; of all our actors, he chafes most under the necessity of the long run, and is quite as willing to shelve a success as a failure.

Helen Hayes, after a season and a half in "Bab," will have a new comedy by Booth Tarkington as her portion for next season. Mr. Tarkington, setting out to write for Miss Hayes a rôle as distinct as possible from any that she had yet played, has written a play entitled "The Wren," in which Miss Hayes will take charge of a Maine household to good effect. The play was written in a few weeks, and the manuscript was received by George C. Tyler about ten days ago. "The Wren" will begin its career in Boston in September, and will go to New York some time next season. Miss Hayes' leading man will be Leslie Howard, a young English actor seen here during the last season as the Prince of Wales' friend in "Just Suppose."

William H. Crane probably will play his farewell to the stage next season with a tour in "Three Wise Fools." . . . After all Frank Craven did write "The First Year" for Ernest Truex, even though it was recently intimated in this spot that he did not. . . . There is a rumor from the coast that Al Jolson may desert musical comedy in favor of the films. . . . Gertrude Vanderbilt, and not Julia Sanderson, is likely to take up Ina Claire's rôle in "The Gold Diggers" when that actress leaves the cast. . . . "The Scarlet Man" is the title of the Le Baron comedy in which John Cumberland will be seen next season. A second play by Mr. Le Baron "Nobody's Money," is also about to be produced. . . . "Blossom Time," the Schubert-Schubert operetta recently tried on the road, will not be seen in New York until next season. In the meantime Arthur Hammerstein is preparing a musical piece bearing the same title, and belligerently announces that he never will surrender it.

A musical version of "Polly of the Circus" is in process of manufacture. This year's "Follies" is being written by Channing Pollock—as much of it, that is, as can be written. . . . Robert Milton has gone abroad to produce a play, entitled "Ladies Must Live," in London—the work of himself and Alice Duer Miller. He will return in the fall, it is said, to form a producing partnership with William Elliott, formerly allied with the Messrs. Comstock and Gest. . . . Miss Julia Sanderson will be seen in musical comedy next season, under the direction of Carle Carleton. . . . Cosmo Hamilton's "The Silver Fox," contrary to the original plan, will not be seen in New York until next season. . . . Miss Billie Burke will make her annual return to the stage next season, probably in a musical version of Clare Kummer's "Good Gracious, Annabelle." . . . "The Right Way," a play by James Faller, hitherto known as "The American," has been placed in rehearsal by Richard G. Herndon.

At least a dozen plays with Lord Byron as their hero have been going the managerial routes for some months, and now it appears that two of them will reach production in a single season. In one, entitled "Lord Byron," John Barrymore will play the rôle; in the other, tentatively called "The Pilgrim of Eternity," Joseph Schildkraut will be the poet—provided Brock Pemberton is able to convince the Theater guild that he is entitled to Mr. Schildkraut's services.

A most attractive company of players. Those who assembled at Powers' last evening admitted it and the manner of its presentation.

"Call the Doctor" is a bit of light fun, well served; peopled with players whose names here or elsewhere are household words.

Belasco comedy is delight; brings genuine laughter wreathed with delicious humor.

The cast gives the production the customary gilt-edged style of a Belasco production.
ASHTON STEVENS, Herald-Examiner.
The ladies, bless 'em, have everything their own way in Mr. Belasco's knightly presentation of "Call the Doctor." Very chatty play—bright without burning, real when it frivols, and the chat is delightfully chatted.

HOPE HAMPTON was playing in bad luck the day they wished "Love's Penalty" upon her!

The picture, despite the presence of some really good people in the cast, is a decidedly second class offering. It is bad melodrama that smacks of the ten, twenty', thirt'—but that is not bad enough to be funny. That's lines, you know.

The characters are:

A BUSINESS MAN given to luring secretaries. Mr. Saunders is the gentleman's name and he is impersonated by Mr. Marmont, who, as a villain, seems to mean nothing in my life. The way I like my Mr. Marmont is coming, just in the nickatime, to the rescue of menaced maidens. With, if were teeth bared, ears laid back, and a pinto eye he is not popular with this department.

SECRETARY NO. 1—A dark and impressionable damsel who really believes the man is going to marry her. He weds another and she commits suicide, which in turn kills

HER MOTHER, pleasingly played by Mrs. Landau, and lights in the breast of

HER SISTER—the beautiful Miss Hampton—the fires of vengeance.

"He betrayed my sister! He killed my mother! I'll get him!" says the beautiful sister, who shortly becomes Secretary No. 2.

HER FIANCE, an innocuous young man innocuously played by Jack O'Brien, wants her to forget it and marry him. But nothing doing. The beautiful, happy hearted girl has had her heart changed to stone. Her lovely smile is a sneer. Even her hair seems to have lost its curl. Marry? Ha! Not till Mr. Stephen Saunders has been gr-r-round beneath her heel.

The grinding process is rather peculiar. It consists in taking dinner with Mr. Saunders, permitting him to fondly caress her and present her with beautiful garments—which she may later throw in his face.

And Fate is right with her. She is just in the midst of her long looked for scathing denunciation of the blonde brute when word comes that the boat on which were sailing his wife and little son has sunk and that all lives are lost.

Well, a bullet is fired. Saunders dies. The police come.

"I killed him and I'm glad!" yells the beautiful sister, who, according to the following scenes, seems to have been promptly released, for we find her wandering in the shadow of a church.

The minister gathers her into the parish house—or parsonage. In this atmosphere the beautiful sister gets back her beautiful disposition. The minister rounds up the fiancé, and—curtain!

Miss Hampton has many good points. I should say that with a fair story and direction she might make quite a name for herself. But she's never going to get anywhere with addle-pated, disjointed, illogical, trashy productions like "Love's Penalty."

You see if she does!

A number of motion picture people, including Thomas Santschi and Texas Guinan, have organized an informal entertainment committee. In other words, they have pledged themselves to furnish Sunday afternoon diversion for convalescent soldiers in and around Los Angeles.

They say that Nazimova always uses belladonna in her eyes before her closeups are taken. It's all right with us if they WILL show us closeups. I loathe the things, don't you?

Ask Me! Ask Me!

GEORGE D.: Was there ever a "titleless picture?" Yes. Charlie Ray's "The Ol' Swimmin' Hole" was that vurr' thing. I don't believe there was a title in it. You couldn't get away with that in all stories, however. Sometimes a word here and there, just has to was.

OLD FLAME: Yes, Wanda Hawley is married. Her husband's name is Hawley, too—strange coincidence—and they tell me he owns a garage in Hollywood. She does seem a mere child, I admit. Harold Goodwin? Single, so far as I know.

HELPUS: You bet! Tom Mix played in "The Road Demon." Richard Barthelmess is 25 years old. "The Love Light" was the name of the Mary Pickford play where she sheltered a German. Nope—neither did I.

F. N. I.: Virginia Lee Corbin has gone east. Y'wekkum.

LIONEL H. L.: Lon Chaney has his own legs, thank you!

ITALIAN FROM VENICE: When I see the director of "Puppets of Fate" I will tell him to go back to Venice and observe—as you suggest. But what you see is news to me. Write and tell me some more!

S. E. W. D.: I would be glad to hear just what films you think are equally suited for mother, father, and child. You might send me your list if you care to.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

TO THE MAKEUP MAN.

I bear to you with trusting hands
The Sunday Slam your boss demands,
And with a candor meant to please
I lay it on your mighty knees,
With but a simple, childlike prayer
That you will treat me fair and square.
But every week you turn me down!
Why do you slam my "Slam" aroun'?

My Sunday morns I spend in search
When I would better be in church,
In search for my unworthy skit
To find where you have hidden it.
Sometimes in a small and lonely spot
I find my Slam—and sometimes not.
It makes no difference if it is a houn'—
Why do you slam my "Slam" aroun'?

Through typographic vale and hill,
Past "Why They Laugh in Vodeyville," Above Fred Sweet, below Guy Lee,
Near Mae Tinée I look for me.
Sometimes appropriately it runs
With the "Bright Remarks of the Little Ones."
But usually so well 'tis cached
You leave me baffled and abashed.
What have I done to earn your frown,
Why do you slam my Slam aroun'?

Though I'm corroded to the core
You never heard me cry before;
You never heard me wham my lyre
To keen the death of fond desire.
But though I think you've done me dirt
I'll bind my wounds, forget my hurt,
If you'll just give my "Slam" a space
In a neat but well accustomed place.
It makes no difference if it is a houn'
You've gotta stop slamming my Slam aroun'.

Echoes of Sonorous Dance Hall Music in New Comedies

now by wise stage directors in search of new sensations for something in rehearsal. It is a rainy night that fails to produce enough of them to stock a Broadway production.

You can tell which is which of the two musical comedies mentioned by consulting their printed casts. "Two Little Girls in Blue" featured the Fairbanks twins. In addition to these two youthful hoofers from the roofs the management has engaged two other sets of twins to complicate the story of what occurred when the two little girls in blue got aboard the S. S. Empress, India bound, with but one ticket between them. It is a ship's duologue.

"Princess Virtue" has Tessa Kosta, a girl with a wistful singing voice. "Two Little Girls in Blue" has had the most money spent on it. It talks in two artful mechanical effects, in one of which you see the insides of the S. S. Empress to the accompaniment of a powerful choral finale of the second act. To end the show brilliantly there is an amazing swing of the whole deck of the Empress, which reveals a back drop, copiously painted to represent an East Indian coast village with palms, temples, and an elephant.

"Princess Virtue" represents less outlay. Its music, by Gitz Rice, is, on the whole, more finely wrought than that of its rival in the George M. Cohan. My venturesome guess is that "Two Little Girls in Blue," with the nimble, seductive legs of the Fairbanks and the costly mechanics, will survive the piece in the Central with its one singing girl, Tessa Kosta, and her several singable songs.

Said Elinor Glyn to Charles Chaplin when they met at a dinner recently: "I've seen your pictures, and you're not a bit like I thought you were. You're not a bit of a freak, are you?"

Said Mr. Chaplin: "I read 'Three Weeks,' and I can say the same of you, madame."

Do You Wear Brakes?

Trying to work your hardest, when you are conscious of burning, aching feet, is like trying to get full power from an engine with the brake dragging. You cannot win, whether the race be physical labor or brain work, if you are handicapped by ill-fitting shoes.

If you wish freedom from foot troubles, if you would enter the contest for success aided by shoes that increase your strength and ability, decide today to try the Cantilever Shoe.

It has a flexible shank that gives with every step. What freedom, in contrast with the viselike restraint of ordinary footwear! The Cantilever Shoe allows the blood to circulate and the muscles to exercise. It strengthens the foot and prevents and corrects fallen arches.

Cantilevers induce the foot to step out in its natural way, pointing straight ahead. Their comfort and freedom lessen the fatigue of walking or standing.

Good looks, trim lasts, fine leathers. Widths from AAAAA to EE.

Coming Operatic Events Cast Their Shadows Before

By Edward Colman Moore

MATTERS operatic took an upturn about as pronounced during the week just ended as though a new season were about to begin. Travel worn, but beaming with joy, Mary Garden and the Chicago Opera association came into town, having finished a record breaking coast to coast tour.

MARY GARDEN
PHOTO © MOFFETT

Since that time she has made a speech before the Association of Commerce, been presented with a jeweled emblem of the Legion of Honor, sung at an Association of Commerce Glee club concert, engaged in dozens of conferences, and made hundreds of decisions. Accounts of the old season were to be closed, plans for the season to come put under way, and a campaign for a list of guarantors launched. The last is confidently expected to make grand opera safe for democracy.

Miss Garden's first lieutenant of music, Giorgio Polacco, paused only a short time and then went on to keep other engagements of the baton in South America. Consequently the greater part of her planning for the future has been in the department run by the first lieutenant of finance, George M. Spangler.

The operatic season for which Miss Garden and Mr. Spangler desire to exchange the support of 500 guarantors is still in the making, and will continue to be so until after she has returned from Europe. Some of its high points are beginning to show over the horizon. Others will appear later.

Three Garden Specialties.

It seems quite probable that "Louise" will come back to the répertoire next season, also "Pélléas et Mélisande" and possibly "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame." All three are Garden specialties, and all are excellent reasons for attendance at the Auditorium. Others may attempt them, have attempted them, here and elsewhere, but Miss Garden is the one who is remembered in them.

LUCIEN MURATORE
© VICTOR GEORG PHOTO

The feasibility of opening the season with a performance of "Samson et Dalila" is being discussed. If this should come to pass Lucien Muratore will appear as the first half of the name part, a rôle for which vocally and dramatically he is well fitted.

The newly acquired soprano of the company, Edith Mason, will make her first appearance on the Auditorium stage as Cho-Cho-San in "Mme. Butterfly," with Edward Johnson as Pinkerton. Those who combine their opera attendance by going to Ravinia in the summer season and to the Auditorium in the winter will realize that this is good news on two counts. From this distance it looks like pretty nearly ideal casting.

MISS EDITH MASON

Lydia Lipkowska, not quite a newcomer, is billed to appear in the leading rôle of Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, "The Snow Maiden," or, as it is known in its native Muscovite, "Snegourotchka." She was an important member of Henry Russell's Boston Opera company when it visited the Auditorium in 1910, and she made a few guest appearances with the Chicago organization in its early seasons. This is a long time ago, but she was something worth hearing then.

The conducting will be a bit out of the ordinary. Albert Coates has been spoken of several times because of the fame he has enjoyed from conducting Russian music abroad. He may or may not be secured for the purpose. A whisper goes about to the effect that there have been some negotiations with Sergei Rachmaninoff to wield the baton. He at least is in this country and likely to stay here. He is also as good a conductor as he is a pianist.

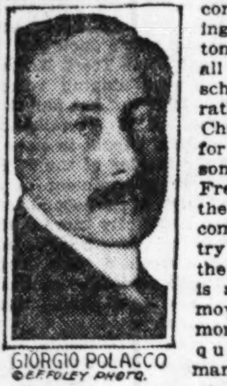
To Resume German Librettos.

Miss Garden has several times indicated a limited degree of patience with translated operatic librettos. It seems quite likely that the "Lohengrin" and "Valkyrie" that held the Auditorium stage last winter in real and approximate English will come back next season in German.

But there will be others. They are getting ready for "Die Meistersinger" down at the Auditorium, if gossip is to be believed. The talk indicates that Georges Baklanoff will devote part of the summer to learning the rôle of Hans Sachs, and that the same Edward Johnson just mentioned will be obliged to interrupt his vacation long enough to get up in the part of Walter.

Mr. Polacco will continue to be, as he has been on the tour, the leading conductor, wielding a potent baton over operas of all periods and schools. It seems rather likely that Charles Dalmorès, for several seasons a leading French tenor with the company, will come to this country to engage in the staging. This is a fairly canny move, since Dalmorès is well acquainted with many operas.



GIORGIO POLACCO
© E.F. FOLEY PHOTO.

Beginning now, and during all the time that Miss Garden is in Europe, it will be the open season for guarantors. All is prepared to sound the horn and engage on the merry chase. If it should happen that the hunters desire to use a few figures of income and liabilities for bait, it is possible that a more attractive statement can be assembled than would have been the case a season or so go.

For the western tour was a matter not only of artistic honor, but financial success. Just how great a success, only the keepers of the records and ledgers can state, and they will not. But it would seem as though the profits of the tour came somewhere near balancing the losses in New York, leaving whatever may have happened during the ten weeks in Chicago as net result.

The complete accuracy of such an estimate may be only surmised. It may be off several thousand dollars either way, which in operatic financiering has never heretofore made much difference. Andreas Dippel used to say that a loss of $1,800 on a single performance was not a deficit, but a great triumph. Anyway, what is a few thousand dollars between opera directors?

What Gotham May Expect.

While Chicago plans its bigger and better season, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, down at the Metropolitan, is also making a few announcements of his own. "The Snow Maiden" is also among the coming events of the New York opera house, and Lucrezia Bori will sing the part that Mme. Lipkowska is going to do here.

Keeping up the resemblance, the Metropolitan prepares to drop its English translations of Wagner, and "Parsifal," "Tristan und Isolde," "Die Walküre," and "Siegfried" will appear in their original tongues as in former years. Richard Strauss' "Rosenkavalier" will also be sung in German. Verdi's "Ernani" will be revived for the use of Galli-Curci during her Metropolitan stay, and Massenet's "La Navarraise" will be turned over to the use of Geraldine Farrar, who is singing more mezzo-soprano than soprano rôles these days.

Probably Titta Ruffo will be included in the "Ernani" cast with Galli-Curci. For the first time in his American career he is being referred to in New York as a baritone extraordinary, though there will probably be hot denial if any outlander from Chicago has the temerity to point out a connection between the adjective and his Metropolitan engagement.

NEWS OF THE MUSICIANS

Tamaki Miura, the little Japanese soprano who ornamented the name part of Puccini's "Mme. Butterfly" for several seasons while she was with the Chicago Opera association, is coming back to the United States next autumn. She has been giving eight performances in the opera at Cairo, Egypt, is now with the San Carlo company at Naples, and plans to go to South America during the summer.

Jascha Heifetz has ended his series of recitals in London and is now on a tour around the rest of the world. Presumably he is keeping up the same course of procedure that he began in this country and continued in London, of making two patrons appear at a violin recital where only one appeared before.

Lydia Lyndgren, remembered by those who used to go to the Auditorium as one of the most pictorial elements ever contained in the Chicago Opera association, is back in this country after some time spent abroad.

Although 71 years old, Jean de Reszke is still keeping up an active career as a teacher, making headquarters at Nice. It is his tenorial mantle that, according to enthusiasts, has slipped over the shoulders of Lucien Muratore, though Muratore has never gone into the variety of rôles that De Reszke used to sing as a matter of course each season.

Geraldine Farrar, it is said, has been signed by the Metropolitan for five more years at a fee that, according to the same rumor, is quite a bit in advance of her former $1,800 per performance. The reason is obvious enough. Since Caruso was taken ill Miss Farrar has been the best money getter on the Metropolitan roster, and box office attractions are scarce in any company.

Philip Hale remarks thus in the Boston Herald: "Brahms is one of Dr. Einstein's favorites. We suspected it. Something in our heart told us it would be so. No doubt Dr. Einstein finds relativity in the music of Johannes."

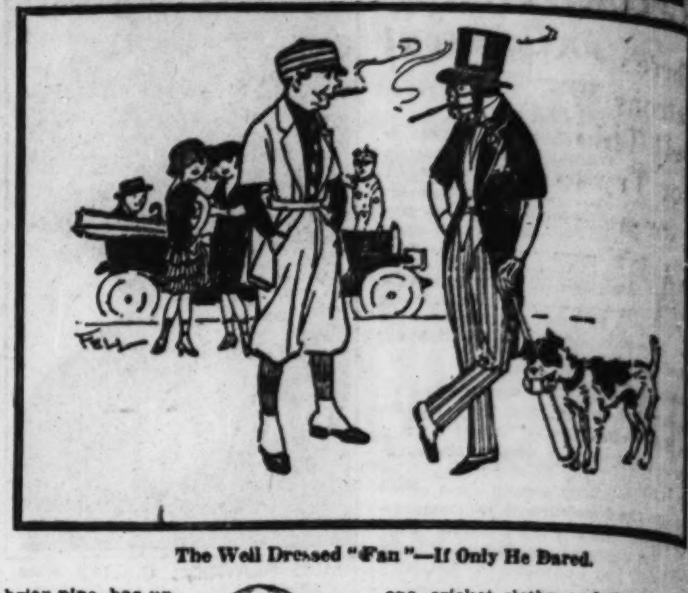
Josef Holbrooke has composed and introduced a set of "Sporting Songs" to lyrics by G. K. Chesterton. When they were brought out in London a program note said that they were intended "to cheer up the dismal concert room." Just how well they functioned in that capacity has not got across the ocean yet.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

Jackets and Knickers for Country and Course

By Alfred Stephen Bryan

NEW YORK.—They tell a droll story about a grizzled hunter who, after buying a hat, always fired a charge of buckshot through the crown to take away that "pesky new look," as he put it, with stout scorn. A quaint and quizzical tale, though one which reflects the attitude of not a few men toward clothes—they shrink from having them seem overly spick and span.



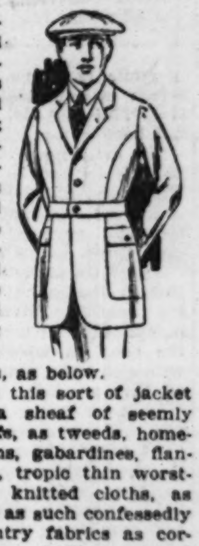
The Well Dressed "Fan"—If Only He Dared.

This is all in the mind, as was the case of the woman who said she didn't believe in ghosts, but was terribly afraid of them. In these days when designers plan with forethought how to put smart wrinkles into a suit and when the traditional squeak is taken out of your shoes before you wear them, the danger of looking blatantly "dressed up" is quite remote.

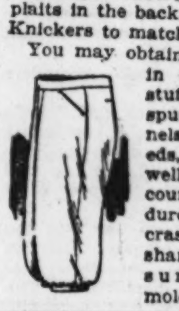
"Among the common mistakes to avoid is that of getting clothes which are too tight in the misbelief that these make one look slenderer. Tightly fitting suits were never in fashion—the drape of a coat should be body tracing, and no more. Nor should the shoulders be excessively narrow. The proper shoulder is natural and follows the contour of the figure.

Trousers should hang easily and rather straight, obviating the need of shaking out the folds when one rises. Everything that is uncomfortable is unfashionable, particularly in summer. The well dressed man never looks as though he were forced into his clothes, as tooth paste into a tube. The present season mode inclines toward easy drape rather than snug fit.

The first week or so a coat should always be worn completely buttoned, so that it will mold itself, by gentle pressure, to the lines of the shoulder, chest, and waist. Thereafter it may be left undone, or only the top or bottom buttons may be fastened, as one prefers.



The Norfolk jacket, as dear to the Englishman as his tweed cap or his briar pipe, has undergone a revival this year, and various spruce types of this standard sporting garment are again procurable. The one portrayed here has the all around belt, the deep patched side pockets with flaps and buttons, the free swishy skirts, and the expanding plaits in the back. Knickers to match, as below.



You may obtain this sort of jacket in a sheaf of seemly stuffs, as tweeds, homespuns, gabardines, flannels, tropic thin worsteds, knitted cloths, as well as such confessedly country fabrics as corduroys, twillettes, wool crashes, stockingettes, shantung, pongee, and surah silks, doeskins, moleskins, tropical linens, cricket cloths, and the like.

Individual preferences and cli[illegible] conditions differ so widely that [illegible] color, cloth, and cut must be left to the judgment of the wearer and the specific purpose for which the garments are intended.

Unusually Roomy

Chicago people who view, for the first time, the new Dort touring car are agreeably surprised at the great abundance of room.

In designing the exquisite new body types Dort engineers paid close attention to bodily comfort.

Doors swing open easily and wide. There are no incumbrances getting in or out of the car.

The position of the driver has been carefully studied so that far-distant touring does not fatigue and the roomy tonneau gives the impression of a much larger car.

For these reasons Chicago people tell us that the new Dort touring car is more comfortable than any car they have ever known of the Dort size and wheel base.

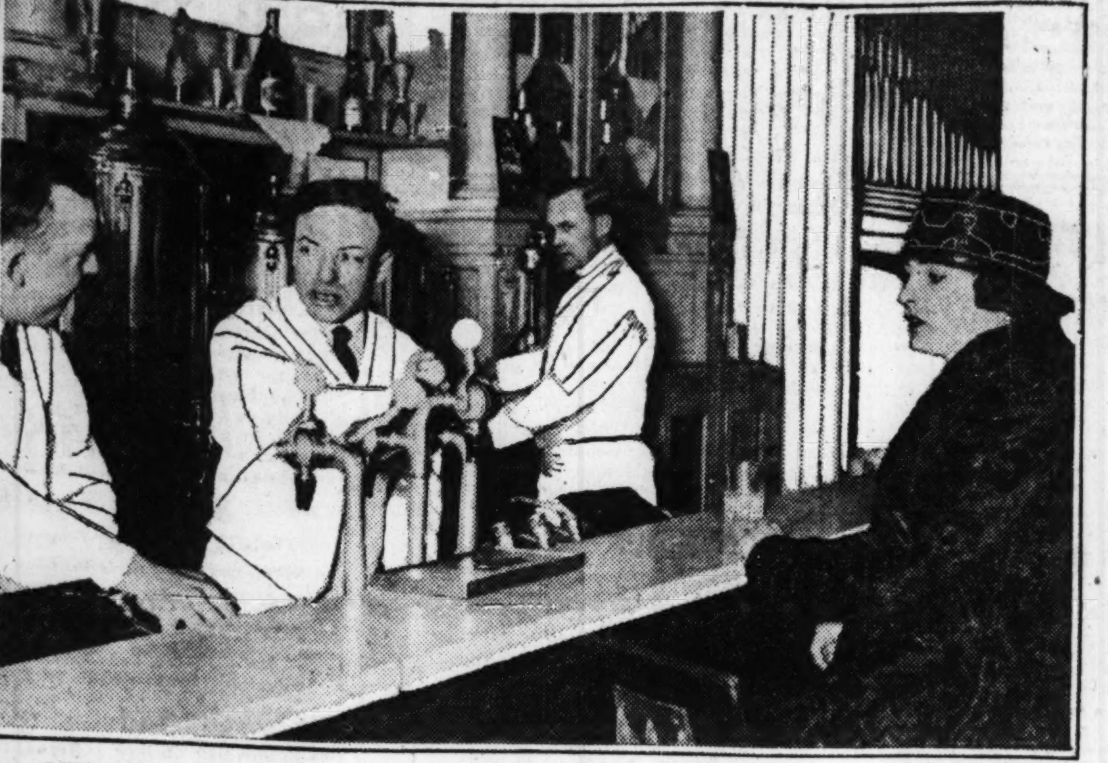
Back of What Used to Be a Bar

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

There's a New Lot of Patrons Who Neither Tell Their Troubles Nor Try to Bum You for a Cream Puff.



"WHAT'LL IT BE? NAME YOUR POISON"—It's the same bar where in ancient days kindred spirits reveled and drank deep; but the up to date answer is, "chocolate fudge sundae!" Fred Sweet, front and center, found in his day of service that patrons have even forgotten to bemoan the old, wet days.

AINT much like she used to be." You'd think a fellow jerking soda in a place that not long ago was a saloon uld hear this remark frequently. As atter of fact, I only heard it once day that I mixed banana splits in Rose Coffee Shop, formerly the hwels bar. And Juddy Chambers, is chief soda dispenser there, says hears the phrase less and less. f course, the Rose is merely typical many another location in the loop re French pastries hold the place the windows and on the shelves that once maintained by bottles of Old . You wander again to the spot the man in the song did "to the Maggie." It still says "buffet" the tiled entrance, but be ye not de- ved—the gang's not there. The nowadays is filled with women. has the atmosphere of a millinery . And time was when—

The Buzz of Feminine Voices.

I'll tell you what they've done. They've cut about ten inches off the bar and substituted marble for the mopped mahogany top. And the rail—once all sufficient—they've ed chairs on to that. The back has been painted white. The floor is filled with tables, and the where the free lunch—in the where the free lunch was there (you might say, as symbols) two inverted water bottles.

There are lace curtains in the windows and the lights are dimmed by red paper flowers. No baseball arguments, no one relating in loud voice what he told the boss, no one attempting to sing—none of the jokes to which the walls beneath the coat of white listened to so oft. There is simply the buzzing effect that comes from the sound of feminine voices in low ed conversations.

Soda and a Cream Puff for Lunch.

The girl wearing the black spotted veil, who is making a lunch of a chocolate soda and a cream puff, takes her lips from the straw and says: "I saw a red hat last night that I'd love to have had."

And her companion (they enter in pairs now instead of in gangs as in the days of yore), she answers, "Red would look well on you."

That's about all I could make out of their line of talk. Of course, I was being kept pretty busy back of the counter with the different kinds of slops all new to me and worrying lest somebody kick on my concoctions. There wasn't any kick in the concoctions. When I was in doubt about the accuracy of my mixtures, I camouflaged the ingredients by putting a dab of whipped cream and a cherry on top of it.

Concocting a Lover's Delight.

You'd think to hear Juddy and Chuck and those other Tennesseeans talk, that in order to be a soda jerker one should have taken about six years in college and a post-graduate course in the art. I say Tennesseeans because that's where nearly all of the soda jerkers in the place had come from. It was all southern dialect back of the marble topped.

According to tradition, their grandfathers may have been experts at mixing mint juleps, but I discovered that many a lad from that section had left the broad verandah that overlooked the cotton fields and come to the loop to dispense Lovers' Delights. A Lover's Delight is composed of lemon ice, ice cream, raspberry fruit, and pecans, garnished with Hawaiian pineapple, whipped cream, pecans, and cherries.

A Lover's Delight may have meant but little in the lives of those who thronged the bar when it was mahogany, but the fair clerks and office girls and shoppers know how to order it and what to expect. And Juddy and Chuck were right—you've got to give service. Didn't matter so much in the old days, just so something was served. At least after a few drinks it didn't matter.

John Was There B. P.

It was John Preston, the colored porter, and the only person in the place who had stayed on from the old régime to the new, who first seemed to notice that I was awkward at squirting the carbonated water. Manager Wyckoff was at the cashier's desk, fortunately. John paused in his scouring of the coffee urn.

"Ain't I doing all right?" I asked, answering the expression on his face.

"Ah didn't say nothin', did ah?" he replied, indifferently.

One of the motherly looking waitresses took away the glass bowl of fruit pudding, ice cream, and nuts that I had been gathering together, carried it over to one of the tables, and I turned again to John.

"So you was here and remember the night when the bar closed—the last night," I remarked.

"Ah remember the fo' paht of it."

"And since then?"

"Like changing to a new earth."

* *

Don't Make You Feel Diffrunt."

"How do you like the change?"

"No chance to pick up change any mo'. Nobody believed it was going out. 'No, it ain't goin' out.' Heard many a one stand around heah and promise that. Then they say, 'It'll be back in a few days.' Ah notice it ain't back this mawnin'."

"Ever see any of the old gang in here?"

"They may come to the do' and look in. Mebbe one'll come in and try a soda, but he makes a long face over it. Used to have the baseball ticker ovah theah. Ain't no baseball talk now. Jes clothes, that's all. Another drink of chocolate don't mak you feel any diffrunt than the one befo', and ice cream don't do nothin' but fill you up."

From the table just beyond the counter came:

"I saw the prettiest tricolette dress in the window over on State street today."

"How much was it?"

"O, it was reduced way down."

"What shade?"

Then the one in the furs told what shade it was, and the two got up from their chairs. They took a good deal of time getting fixed before they left the table. Gazing, blankly, toward the women at the other tables, they first adjusted their waists. Then they touched their hats and veils and hair. Then, slowly, they picked up their gloves and other belongings.

At the adjoining table, a girl in a green feathery hat lifted her veil to take a bite from a pickle, her companion wearing a pink straw hat took a dainty nibble from a cinnamon cake, and a gray haired waitress began picking up the dishes with an unoffending click.

No More Old Reliable.

Just after the noon rush was over a man came in. I noticed him because he stood at the counter without taking one of the stools, and he paid no attention to the menu card. You order from a menu card under the new régime. The porter told me that in the old days folks knew exactly what they wanted before they got past the entrance.

Well, this bird stood looking at me for a moment, peered back and forth behind the marble top, and then told me he was feeling sick. I told him that I thought he wasn't looking any too well. Then he cleared his throat and asked me just above a whisper: "Can you give me some of the old reliable?"

John, the porter, paused again at his polishing.

"If we had any I'd a had it myself long ago," he informed the both of us. And when the party started away with the remark that he knew where he could get it, John, watching his departure, shook his head and said:

"Some of 'em still think that by some kind of a funny wink or somethin' they kin git results. Wink all day and use trick words cain't make nothin' but carbonated water sizz out of them faucets. Out of town folks that ain't been heah since, 'it went out.' The best we kin do fo' 'em now is French pastry."

Selling Gasoline Instead of Gin.

Suddenly, John's face lit up. "See what jes' come in. Well, sah, if it ain't Mister Herbst! Long, long while since I seen you in heah, Mister Herbst."

"Who is it?" I whispered.

"Mean to say you don't know Sid Herbst who tended this heah bar fo' years?"

"Is that true," I questioned, "that you tended bar here until 'it went out'—that you used to be back here where I am now?"

"I was here ten years."

"What are you doing now?"

"Managing a garage—selling gasoline instead of gin."

"And the other bartenders?"

He thought a moment. "Two of them are working in the postoffice. One's out at a country club. I don't know where the others are."

* *

The Old Place Is Changed.

"How would you like to be back behind here now?"

He shook his head. "It wouldn't do. I'd forget and be sure to ask 'em if they wanted 'light or dark,' 'rye or bourbon.' Wouldn't do. I seldom drop in here."

"All different?"

"Different? Say, the war was won and lost a thousand times at the old tables over there against the wall—the salt celler, France, and Germany the mustard jar. Now it's as though the old place never was. Now do you like soda jerking? Tell me, do they ever say 'have one on me'?"

"Nope."

"Try to bum you for a drink?"

"Nope."

"Treat each other?"

"Nope."

"Tell you their troubles?"

"Nope."

"Nor they don't stick around all evening? Don't have to say 'it's 1 o'clock, have to close up now'? You don't have to turn out the lights on 'em?"

"Well, we have our closing hour."

He sat for a time, wholly occupied with reflections.

"Try some of this ice cream with fruit dressing and cherries," I tempted, stirring the contents of the dish before me with a spoon.

He waved it away.

"O, come on," I urged. "One little drink won't do you any harm. It's some that I mixed up a moment ago, but the lady sent it back. I was going to finish it myself, but I guess I put too much sirup in it. Here, you finish it."

"No, I don't want to get started."

"Want some cream puffs, fruit tarts, butter twists, cinnamon cake, layer cake, cookies, lady fingers——"

"No. There was just one more question I wanted to ask. Is it necessary for you fellows, under the new order of things, to keep up a conversation with the customers?"

No, I assured him. Not unless we were spoken to first.

The Last Word in Soda Jerking.

And yet, later in the afternoon, long after Sid Herbst had gone back to the garage, I did observe that Chuck, who was the last word in professional soda jerking, did seem to have a broad acquaintance among the patrons. No one telling him their troubles or the story of their life or anything like that, but there were certain conversational requirements. A snappy answer to a joking question as he jumped back and forth from the faucets to the ice cream tanks.

I tried to pick up some of Chuck's stuff, but I didn't have any demand for it except once, and then all of a sudden I seemed to be struck tongue tied. I thought of something clever after it was too late.

* *

One More Peach Melba.

That night we had after-theater crowds, and my dogs were so tired I was looking forward to closing time.

I got to thinking of all the literature that dealt with the saloon question in the old days. Remember "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," where the daughter of Joe Morgan used to sing, "Father, dear father, come home with me now, the clock in the steeple strikes one?"

Memory of the scene was apropos of nothing, except——

There didn't appear to be much difference in their ages, but the girl who had just approached the table did say to the woman who had been sitting there for some time, "Haven't you finished that Peach Melba yet, mother? I've been waiting up in front for you for the longest time. You haven't ordered another one, have you? They'll be closing up in a minute. We ought to be starting home."

Hupmobile

It is not hard to determine the worth of the Hupmobile, or any other motor car.

The qualities that make motor car value are fixed.

The Hupmobile, like any other car, can be put out of commission by accident. Otherwise it keeps on going every day in the year. Thats one requirement of value.

Another is low repair costs. (Our opinion is that Hupmobile repair costs are lower than those of any other car in the world.)

If a car is known to be well built, long-lived, a good performer, and consistently economical, it will always bring a high price when resold.

It is common knowledge that the Hupmobile has a record in this respect so remarkable that at least it is not surpassed by any other car in the market.

AVIATION

Pioneer Airmen's Dreams of Long Flights Come True

First Non-Stop Coast to Coast Flight This Week

BY MORROW KRUM.

THE day of the long distance airplane seems to be on our threshold. With every mail comes a story of a proposed coast to coast nonstop flight by some aerial monster — some 3,000 mile jaunt by a new sky leviathan—or a trans-Atlantic and return journey by a new dirigible. The dreams of Langley Chanute, Wright, and Curtiss are coming nearer to fulfillment every day.

The latest news of a long distance flight came Friday in a letter from Los Angeles, Cal., to Floyd Smith, manufacturer of a life pack for aviators. The letter, besides ordering six life packs, states that the long distance flyer, a new ship just completed in California, will some time this week hop off for the Atlantic coast.

The Long Distance Flyer has been structed by D. W. Douglass, a designer who was formerly associated with Glen Martin in his Cleveland factory. The ship has a fifty-six foot wing span, is powered by one Liberty motor, carries 1,000 gallons of gasoline and an additional useful load of at least 2,000 pounds. hTe first nonstop coast to coast flight will be attempted this week.

Weather conditions and red tape held up Ralph Diggins and the four Chicagoans who were to fly to Chicago from New York last Tuesday. The trip was to be made in eight hours. A new Ansaldo limousine was to have been used in the flight. Heavy storms prevented the departure on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

The Ansaldo ship comes from Italy. It is powered by a 300 horsepower Fiat motor and, according to Mr. Diggins, can travel 118 miles an hour normal speed. Four business men paid $300 each for the trip.

A new company in St. Louis is busy building a dirigible which will ply the air lanes between that city and Chicago when completed. The officials of this company believe they will establish rates that will compete with railroad fares.

Another company, with offices in New York, London, Paris, and home offices in Berlin, has announced that the German dirigible of the war has been perfected and will within a year be flying between Berlin and Chicago, with stops at London, New York, and Cleveland.

The Italian air service has announced a dirigible which will fly for ten days without alighting. The United States army air service has let a contract with an English aviation company for a dirigible that will have a cruising radius of 6,000 miles. This ship is under construction.

There are hundreds of other companies announcing long distance airplanes and dirigibles. Some of these are but dreams of spirited inventors. Others have the sound of reason. Yet it all points in on direction—that of the arriving era of successful long distance aircraft.

Must Wear 'Chutes

The government of Switzerland has passed a law requiring aerial passenger carrying companies to provide parachute life packs for all passengers. This legislation follows a similiar action by Holland officials, who several months ago established a national precedent by requiring all aviation companies to carry life packs for both pilots and passengers.

Aircraft Station.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the air passenger service of San Diego and Los Angeles aviation companies will exchange landing rights. Business men and pleasure seekers can now make the trip in approximately an hour and three-quarters.

WIND STUDENT

These days when the air mail service ships are becoming more and more standardized the pilot "who knows the winds" is the man who makes the most mileage at the highest speed. Winds vary with altitude. On some days a pilot may encounter seven different currents on a climb of 10,000 feet. One of those air currents will aid the pilot as much as eight additional cylinders. His knowledge of winds and how they may be employed to his advantage has helped to make E. G. Leonhardt one of the crack pilots of the postal service. Leonhardt finished fourth in the newspaper prize contest.

Flying Circus to Be Staged at Rantoul May 30

CAPT. H. E. STURCKEN and Lieut. B. E. Gates, military aviators, arrived at Ashburn field last Friday afternoon, prepared to fire the opening guns of a publicity campaign to inform the middle west that the "world's greatest flying circus" will be presented at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., on Memorial day.

The circus to be presented at the downstate field will, if the present plans are carried out, be most unusual and spectacular. There will be parachute jumps, parachute dives, and parachute "pull-offs," which in the new language of the aviation world means that men, perhaps six or ten, will be jerked from wing panels by the opening 'chutes. There will be bombing tests in which the flyers will show how they would destroy a battleship.

The purpose of the flying circus is to raise a $20,000 fund to build an athletic field and swimming pool at Chanute.

New U. S. Airship to Have 6,000 Miles Cruising Radius

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 6.—Plans for a "return call" on the R-34, Great Britain's monster dirigible, which visited America in 1919, by a United States navy navigable balloon of even greater dimensions, have been abandoned, at least for the coming summer.

Work on the largest and fastest dirigible ever designed continues at the Philadelphia navy yard, but has been retarded through lack of appropriations, and those in charge of the construction of the great craft of the clouds say it probably will be a year before it is completed.

The airship is usually referred to as being "built" here. As a matter of fact it is being fabricated. Metal parts are being made in the navy's local aircraft factory—metal parts which will be neatly numbered or lettered, and then put in cases for shipment to the place decided upon for assembling them.

The airship will be 806 feet long, 85 feet wide, and will have a possible cruising radius, when unequipped with guns, of 6,000 miles. This will enable it to cross the Atlantic and return without refueling. When fully equipped the cruising radius will be reduced to 1,800 miles.

Naval officers declare the ship will be superior in every way to the British R-34, the first lighter than air machine to cross the Atlantic. The speed of the craft has not yet been definitely determined.

Seldom, we believe, has a new car ever been introduced to the American public with better credentials for acceptance.

Because of the unmistakable evidence in favor of the Oldsmobile Four, that the public are generously rewarding exceptional values, we have equal faith in their reception of the new Oldsmobile Eight.

For it is not an extravagant statement to say of the Oldsmobile Four, that no new car of the present season has been accorded a more completely nation-wide approval. Its unqualified success can only be attributed to public recognition of greater excellence in size, in appearance and in performance.

Our own confidence in the superiority of this new eight-cylinder design has led to the addition of practically an entire new group of buildings and $2,000,000 in specially designed machinery to insure the precision required for its better performance and the volume essential to its low-cost production.

You will see at a glance in this modish, compact car all the elegance of form and finish that distinguishes truly fine cars.

And yet its distinction of appearance cannot equal the amazement you will experience in its unusual power and in the dependability and economy of its performance.

You will find it a beautiful, well-balanced piece of mechanism that will accomplish everything you can ask of a high-powered, smooth-running eight-cylinder car, no matter what its price.

And the price of the new Oldsmobile Eight is so sensational that you must personally experience its riding and driving qualities to realize in full the new measure of value that it has set for medium-sized, high-powered design.

What Gives Owners Such Faith in Essex?

The people who know Essex rely on it chiefly, for the simple reason they have never encountered a situation of which it was not master.

More than by any other factor men have been guided in their preference for the Essex by the endurance and reliability which unmistakably sets it apart from other light cars.

Yet the confidence of Essex owners that their car will go anywhere, with a possibility of trouble so remote that it does not even enter into calculations, contains something more than a feeling of absolute assurance in its mechanical reliability.

No car could possess a more sincere belief in its goodness, its every-day dependability, and its capacity to do the task assigned without fret and fuss, than that which 50,000 owners bestow upon the Essex.

REO

This Reo Speed Wagon Displaces Heavy Trucks!

That is the actual experience of at least one concern—and in carrying heavy steel forgings too!

This concern was using 3-ton trucks, but finding them only slightly more efficient than horses, had about decided to go back a step when the idea occurred to try a Speed Wagon.

Results were astounding. It proved the solution of the problem.

That's only one of hundreds of similar cases that prove the same thing.

Concerns that used to consider a two or three or a five ton truck necessary for their use, are now discarding the slow, cumbersome, solid-tired trucks, for the faster, more versatile Speed Wagon mounted on pneumatics.

It will deliver three one-ton loads while the big three-tonner is "getting started."

You can depend upon it, that for transporting any product or materials that can be divided into ton-loads or less, the rapid Reo will do the work better and cheaper.

In city, suburban and rural service; on short and long hauls; over concrete, mud or sand roads—or mountain trails—this Reo is adaptable to 90 per cent of all kinds of hauling and delivering.

Tell us what your needs are—and we'll tell you why a Reo Speed Wagon will fulfill those needs better than a heavier (and slower) truck.

Better, in fact, than any other motor truck ever built.

That's a strong statement but there is a "Best," you know, in every line.

Among motor trucks that distinction, undisputed, belongs to the Reo Speed Wagon.

Harding's Highway Demands Produce Compromise Bill

State Officials Help to Draw Measure for Huge System

BY J. L. JENKINS.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S forceful demand for a practical highway policy to govern the construction and care of all federal aid trunk lines brought the two most powerful road factions in the country together last week to draft a compromise bill for national road building.

The finished product, perfected jointly by the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials and the interests which for several years have backed the Townsend highway bill, is based on continued federal coöperation with the states in building national thoroughfares of interstate importance to be maintained by daily care with state funds. It is believed that the revised bill as submitted to congress, will meet with instant support and will clear away all remaining barriers to the colossal project which will make 7 per cent of the roads in each state integral parts of a national network of paved highways.

The highway armistice was signed following a three days' conference between committeemen representing active engineers and superintendents of each state department, Senator Charles E. Townsend, chairman of the post roads committee of the senate, and author of the widely discussed Townsend bill, and Congressman Dowell, ranking member of the house roads committee. President Harding was personally consulted, and the measure submitted to congress is said to be an administration favorite. Its champions believe that it will both care for the current construction situation and make operative a system not only to market the nation's crops but also to augment transportation facilities of interstate commerce and aid in national defense.

Among other things, it proposes that the secretary of agriculture, now charged with the expenditure of federal road funds, shall concentrate the funds on the construction of the connected system of national roads designated by each state highway department. As in the past, the states will match the amount of money allotted by the government with an equal amount of state funds and will be charged with the constant care of the federal aid roads the moment they are built.

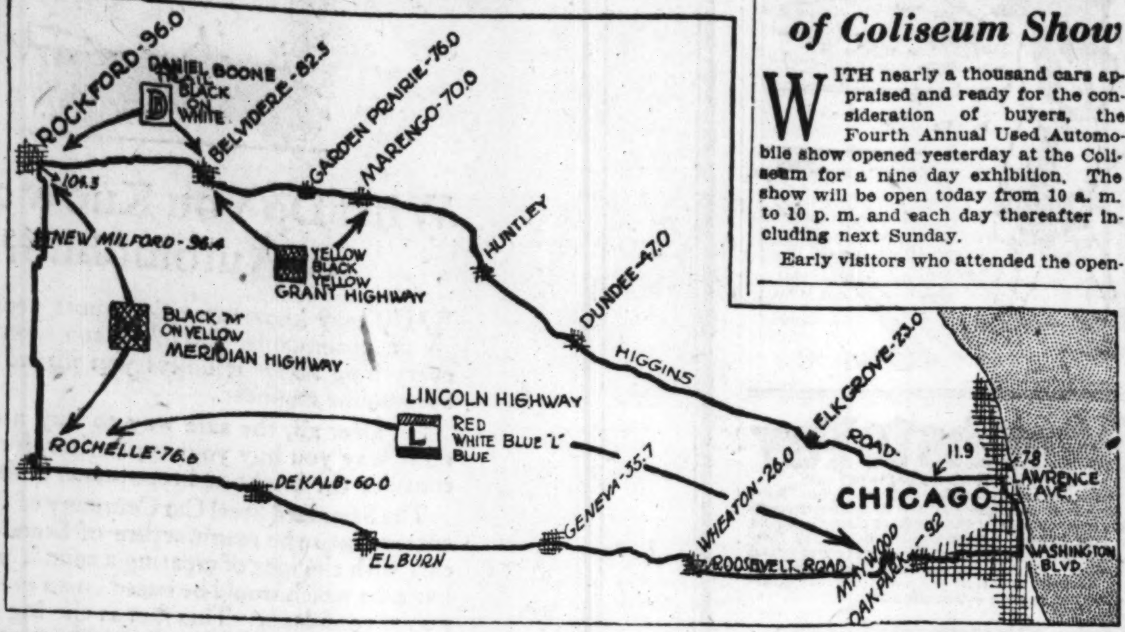
In order to guarantee to the government that its roads will be given proper care by the states, the maesure proposes that each state must show funds sufficient for maintenance before federal road building projects are approved in Washington. If any state fails to properly maintain its part of the system, the secretary is empowered to refuse further approval for highway construction within its boundaries and, as a last resort, to pay for repairing the road out of federal funds and charge the costs against the state in question. It also provides that where land along the federal system is owned by Uncle Sam, the government shall pay a just ratio of the building cost.

For months state highway officials have fought the Townsend bill proposal that a commission of six men be chosen to have full charge of national highway building and the expenditure of federal funds under the direction of the president alone, instead of allowing the department of agriculture to continue handling the huge funds. Under the "armistice" state leaders have announced that they are not so much concerned about who shall administer these duties as they are that the government shall continue to recognize each state department as the direct builders. They reported to the president that the bureau of roads has made an entire success of its work, but that the creation of a separate federal department of highways will be acceptable.

"We have passed the period in our national life when it should be necessary to prove that highways are arteries of trade of national importance," says the announcement. "Our only concern should be to see that such legislation is enacted and enforced as will conserve the public funds, guard against political abuses and serve the common good."

Tribune Tours

V. Chicago to Rockford.



NORTHERN Illinois unfolds a delightful story to the highway adventurer who accepts the challenge of 100 picturesque miles lying between the loop and the Rock river valley.

Two good routes offer themselves this season to make up for the years past when a trip to Rockford and its sister cities proved a mud splattered ordeal.

The first and shortest begins at Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard and leads north in Michigan and Sheridan road to Lawrence avenue (mileage 7.8). Turn left in Lawrence to Milwaukee avenue (11.9). Go north in Milwaukee one block and turn left in Higgins avenue. This avenue becomes Higgins concrete road. Follow it through Elk Grove (23.0) and to the end of the concrete at the Cook county line. From this point fair gravel surfacing runs through Dundee and north and west to the little town of Huntley. From Huntley a little used but all weather road winds over to Marengo (70.0). Local markings show the way. At Marengo, pick up the Grant highway markings, yellow, black and yellow stripes on telephone poles, and follow them through Garden Prairie (76.0) to Belvidere (82.5). Leave the Grant highway at Belvidere and take the State street road, marked by Daniel Boone trail markings, black initials on a white ground, into Rockford (96.0).

An option fully as good uses the Lincoln highway to Rochelle and the Meridian trail into Rockford through Camp Grant. Go west in Washington boulevard to its end in Oak Park. Turn left one block to Madison street and follow Madison right to First avenue in Maywood. Turn left to the concrete Roosevelt road and follow it through Wheaton (26.0) to Geneva (35.7). From Geneva follow the marked road over the gravel to the cemetery south of Elburn. Turn right with the markings through Elburn to the four corners one-half mile north. Turn left on concrete and follow it through De Kalb (60.0) to Rochelle (76.6). There pick up the Meridian highway markings due north to New Milford (96.4) passing through the eastern limits of Camp Grant to enter Rockford (104.3) on the 11th street paved road.

Thousand Cars in Stalls a Feature of Coliseum Show

WITH nearly a thousand cars appraised and ready for the consideration of buyers, the Fourth Annual Used Automobile show opened yesterday at the Coliseum for a nine day exhibition. The show will be open today from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. and each day thereafter including next Sunday.

Early visitors who attended the opening yesterday were impressed generally with the excellent appearance of the cars offered for sale. Representative dealers, members of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, who are exhibiting, have spared neither money nor pains to place on the Coliseum floor exceptionally attractive automobiles. Cars which have been repainted, their bright parts renickled and their upholstery refinished are the rule, rather than the exception at this show.

Buyers are quick to notice the green tag of certification which is sealed to the lamp brace rod of each car. This tag bears the signatures of the three chairmen of the inspection and appraisal committee. Each car, before being allowed in the Coliseum underwent a rigid test on the inspection field at 2220 Michigan avenue.

Out of oil again:—

Why ordinary oil is so rapidly consumed

HAVE you had this tough old motoring experience? Have you run out of oil miles from help, when you thought you started with supply enough for the hardest trip?

Whenever your engine consumes oil too fast, it is proof that you are using ordinary oil. Under the intense heat of the engine—200° to 1000° F.—inferior oil forms great quantities of black sediment. The thin oil remaining evaporates rapidly.

You can avoid this trouble. You can stop using up oil at such an expensive rate. Sediment is reduced 86% when you use Veedol, the lubricant that resists heat. (See the two bottles above). Veedol lasts for twice as many miles as ordinary oils.

Have your engine flushed out. Fill up with Veedol. Leading dealers have Veedol in stock. Ask for a supply to-day.

Ten to One

Not just one outstanding feature combined with others of obscure origin and unestablished quality, but each and every one of its ten principal units is the product of specialists. That's the wonderful thing about the Moon. Consider its powerful six-cylinder Continental Red Seal Motor, which the best engineering skill of a generation has made the accepted standard of motor efficiency.

And just as it embodies the talent of the world's foremost specialists, unsurpassed in their particular field, so every one of the other nine principal units has been established by demonstrated excellence of quality. Delco Starter and Ignition; Timken Axles; Spicer Universal Joints; Brown-Lipe Transmission; Borg & Beck Clutch; Rayfield Carburetor; Exide Battery; Fedders Radiator—Nickel-Silver; Gemmer Steering Gear—these are the exceptional units of specialists whose work no single plant or factory, however great, could equal.

Their selection by Moon engineers is backed by an experienced judgment of sixteen years. The record of Moon accomplishment in engineering and coach work is expressed in this wonderful car. No one feature dominates at the sacrifice of others. There are ten units of equal merit in the Moon, each one of proven quality, guaranteeing goodness through and through and resulting in a car that hasn't a shortcoming to trifle with the judgment or confidence the owner puts into it.

The Rochester-Duesenberg Motor

THE Rochester-Duesenberg motor used in the record-breaking Roamer speed test is the latest refinement of a motor produced for over seven years. This Rochester-Duesenberg motor is a tremendously powerful, dependable and efficient engine of a design radically different from the ordinary type of automobile motor.

It is manufactured by the ROCHESTER MOTORS CORPORATION, an organization famed for precision of workmanship for two decades, and who have brought it to its present state of tremendous power and silent operation, and remarkable fuel and oil economy.

It incorporates the well-known horizontal rocker arm valve action characteristic of all Duesenberg type engines, and develops close to 85 horsepower, its surplus power enabling road speeds far in excess of the ordinary motor. In addition, its quick, snappy pick-up makes it a delight to operate in heavy traffic.

Roamer
Breaks World's Stock Chassis Speed Records

Traveling at the rate of 105.1 miles per hour over the beach at Daytona, Florida, a Roamer with Duesenberg motor smashed all existing stock chassis records on April 22.

Chassis used was a Roamer Standard Speedster model (Model F-85), which was officially checked by the technical committee of American Automobile Association.

The Roamer's time for a measured mile (34.25 seconds) is officially attested by the contest board of the American Automobile Association.
New records were also established for kilometer, two, three, four, and five miles. Time for five miles, 2 minutes 53.48 seconds, or at the rate of 103.7 miles per hour.

The Roamer has long been rightfully termed "America's Smartest Car." After this sweeping victory at Daytona, Roamer unquestionably assumes pre-eminence as America's fastest car.

Roamer cars are built to maintain higher road speeds with safety than any other make. The long wheelbase and low body, the Roamer double cantilever spring suspension, the unusual strength in frame, axles and steering arms, together with extra large brake drums, gasoline tank and cooling system, are all factors contributing to the speed, stamina and comfortable touring qualities which appeal so greatly to the motorist.

Ask your dealer for a demonstration of a Roamer and see how it holds the road at high speed. Observe the absence of side sway, skidding and rebound. This same record-breaking chassis is also to be had in the Roamer 4-passenger sport model.

ASTRONOMY

A CRASH FORECAST.

A MOST unusual comet is in the sky. No one can see it without a large telescope, and yet the earth is predicted to cross its orbit, and the prospects of running into pieces of it are very good.

The comet is at present in the constellation of Hercules. The point where the meteors will rain down—for such will be the probable result when the earth crosses its path—lies in the constellation of Bootes, not far from Arcturus. The earth, according to astronomers' calculations, will encounter the meteors in its wake on June 7.

The main bulk of the comet will have passed ten days earlier, and so we will miss the intense display of shooting stars that might otherwise be seen if we hit it squarely. The comet will be 12,000,000,000 miles from the earth at its nearest, which is exceedingly near for celestial bodies, but this is only a mediocre comet, and so probably will never be seen by the naked eye.

No harm need be anticipated from this heavenly visitor. There was a time when the superstitious were deathly afraid of comets, but those times are happily past. Some scientists claim that they have found cyanogen, the poisonous principle of prussic acid, in comets' tails, but even if we were to go squarely through the head of the comet it is doubtful if any one could detect its faint peach kernel odor.

The reason why astronomers expect to see a shower of falling stars when we cross the comet's path is interesting. A comet is a loose knot cloud of fragments, having no internal forces of its own.

Each rock, pebble, grain, and molecule flies in its own little orbit, entirely dependent upon the power of the sun for the path it is to follow. The members of the swarm lie near together and so follow approximately equal paths, but only approximately.

* * *

Those pieces nearer the sun always move a little faster than those farther out, and so in the long run with a periodic comet—and this comet is periodic—that is, it goes around the sun in a closed orbit, like the earth, the rather solid head gets scattered out into a long, loose cloud of fragments.

In the course of time they make a complete oval ring about the sun, and whenever the earth touches this ring a shower of streaking meteors results.

What Do You Know about an Automobile?

YOU may know more than most people about an automobile, but life is too short to learn everything about it unless you intend to be an automobile engineer.

So, after all, the safe way to buy a car is the same way you buy your typewriter, for instance, consider the intent and reputation of the makers.

The Standard Steel Car Company of Pittsburgh entered into the manufacture of Standard Eight cars with the idea of creating a sound, permanent business which would be based on an ever-growing public confidence. This fact is the big feature of Standard Eight Cars.

Other features are power, easy gear-shifting, double ignition, lightning pick-up, effortless hill climbing, extremely low speed possible in high—and other points that make motoring a pleasure. All cars have some of these features; the difference is in degree—and that can only be expressed by a trial.

See for yourself the difference by taking a trial ride in a Standard Eight.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

A Car With Personality

There is an air of distinction about the New Series "Glenbrook" that you will find in no other moderate priced, five passenger car. That is why it has been adopted by really smart people who will not tolerate the commonplace.

Then, remember, it not only looks but acts the thoroughbred. Under the hood there is a marvelously efficient motor that accelerates from five to twenty five miles per hour in nine seconds flat. This means giant energy for hills and every test of the highway.

Last, but not least, the "Glenbrook" is a rigid Economist. It extracts every atom of power from a gallon of gasoline and turns up surprising mileage on a set of tires. It is a thrift car with a keen sporting personality—a very hard combination to find.

But we ask you to establish these facts for yourself. Take just one ride in the "Glenbrook" and discover what actually lies hidden under the hood. It will prove a revelation, we believe, and a liberal education in strictly modern engineering.

FARM AND GARDEN

Jobless of Steel Mill Belt Turn to Community Garden

By Frank Ridgway.

LESS than a year ago South Chicago's industry hummed. Workers swarmed in and out of the steel mills by the thousands. There was work for all—off with one shift and on with another—and "to their store a little more they added each day and hour." Anly a few months ago hundreds of stacks belched billows of smoke, tons of ore rolled in from the mines, tons of molten metal flowed into the molds, and carloads of products rumbled away from the mills, furnishing work for all comers.

Almost the reverse is true today. The smokestacks, strung like beads in horseshoe shape around the border of the steel belt, are now standing lifeless, plumeless, silhouetted against the sky. Twenty thousand workmen are eagerly waiting for the furnaces, with their long, red tongues of flames, to light up the clouds again.

Cutting the Grocery Bill.

But these men are not all idle. While they are waiting for industrial activities to loom up again, hundreds of them are becoming interested in gardening; they are instinctively reverting to their pesant racial trait of working the soil. Many of the laborers, with large families to provide for, have been out of work for several months, and their accounts at the local stores are rapidly increasing each day, some of them owing as much as $500. Men, women, and children are going into the community gardens to farm this spring, and with spades and hoes they plan to slice their summer's grocery bill in two.

More than forty acres of vacant lots, waste land along the railroad tracks, and similar areas in the steel mill districts have already been converted into gardens. Several more acres will probably be added to this before the planting season is over. This does not include the many home or back yard plots.

With the liberal support of the schools, parks, industrial, and community organizations along the south shore, the Y. M. C. A. has, up to this time, arranged to supply 500 applicants with gardens. If the season is normal there will be enough vegetables produced to supply many thousands. Temporary permits are issued to allow the gardeners to use city water in case of dry weather.

Women Make Fine Showing.

The land is furnished free by the owners. The plots are 25x125 feet and the gardener pays a registration fee of 50 cents. Ofter as many as three or four families help plant, hoe, and care for a single plot, which furnishes all of them vegetables. At least a fourth of those out of work will draw upon these community gardens for fresh vegetables from early summer until cold weather.

Last year about 400 plots were used, but this year the acreage had to be greatly increased on account of the labor situation. The 1920 gardens were cared for by the women, but this time so many men are out of employment that few of the women will need to work outdoors.

It is conservatively estimated that the women raised an average of more than $20 worth of vegetables on each plot—or a total of approximately $10,000 worth of products, in spite of the fact that they were handicapped with a late spring. With much more ground to plant this spring and with plenty of time to carry on the work in a more intensified way, the local committee members who are managing the project believe there is a chance for this record to be almost doubled.

Good Things to Eat.

In many basements and pantries on the south side the laboring men's wives are able to show dozens of quarts of corn, beans, beets, and similar vegetables canned from last year's gardens. They had fresh vegetables all summer, stored enough for winter, and still have some left. One gardener sold $50 worth of sweet corn from a single plot.

Last fall at harvest time, when the "horn of plenty" was running over with good things to eat, the gardeners tied up their vegetables in neatly arranged bunches and held an exhibit where they competed for prizes given by the business men of South Chicago. One of the gardeners was so impressed with the harvest festival that he sent a special letter to Washington inviting the President of the United States to attend the fall show. The vegetable show will be held again this fall.

Government Gives Seed.

Through the Y. M. C. A. the ground is plowed, disked, and manured without charge to the gardener. The B. & O. Railway company has given four carloads of manure. Lime is furnished where it is needed.

Those who had gardens last year were given first choice again when the assignments were made a few days ago. When the applicant registers, pays his fee, and is assigned his plot he is given a package of five kinds of garden seed, furnished by the government, to start the planting. There were twenty-one different kinds of vegetables grown last year.

All last week and for the last month new applicants have been coming for their allotment of ground. Pushing a baby carriage to and fro, hour after hour, one woman was so determined to get the plot she liked best that she waited all day long.

The gardens not only furnish a place for the unemployed to spend their time in doing profitable work, but they afford a substitute playground for the children. The larger boys and girls help their parents in the gardens; several of them manage the plots themselves. Literally thousands of children can be seen during the summer hoeing, pulling weeds, killing insects that destroy the plants, or playing along the unplanted sod strips in these gardens.

Find Time for Gardens.

Leon B. Walker, industrial secretray of the Y. M. C. A., who has direct supervision over the gardens, says he has little trouble in getting the men and women to stay with their plots from the time they are planted until the vegetables are harvested.

One of them said that out in the South Deering district, where they have the eight hour day, their daily schedule is "eight hours' work, eight hours' sleep, and eight hours' plant." Even in the South Chicago garden district, where the men have twelve hour shifts in the mills, they find time to do some work in their gardens. Some of them have been so anxious to get their plots planted that they have been working in the rain, carrying an umbrella in one hand and a hoe in the other in sowing the seed.

Many of them were so eager to get their seed sown early that they spaded up their plots. They could not wait for "Pete the plowman" to come along with his team and plow and break the ground.

The Melting Pot.

All of South Chicago recognizes the gardens as a means of developing a better community. Thirty-two nationalities are represented in the steel mill districts. The community gardens not only yield thousands of dollars every year, but they serve as social centers where there is developed friendship and sympathy between the individuals of different nationalities. The fathers and mothers visit in the gardens, exchange remarks in their own languages about the weather and crops, and later they may trade a kettle of string beans for a head of cabbage.

In their struggle to become Americans they leave the tools of the old world in the shed and use modern "made in America" hoes and rakes to work their gardens. Most of the younger generation do even better than that. Whether the children are Greeks, Poles, Lithuanians, or Norwegians they dig dirt together, make whistles out of green branches with the same knife, and practically all of them try hard to speak English to their neighbors and playmates.

Causes General Cleanup.

Business men of South Chicago have become so impressed with the good that comes from this community project that they support it in every way they can, giving their time to committee work, contributing dollars besides. The removal of tin cans, brush, and other rubbish from the vacant lots in preparation for the gardens every year has been found an effective and permanent means of keeping the town cleaned up.

C. Clemensen, a florist and member of the local garden committee, says that the money derived is not half as valuable as the moral and esthetic value that comes from the gardens; the gardening might not be profitable if money had to be paid for the work. The children, particularly the boys, develop the spirit of preservation, ne says. Working in gardens of their own they do not have that inclination to destroy other gardens, and they take an interest in beautifying the whole neighborhood.

"Since we started the community garden project out here we notice a striking difference in the neatness of South Chicago," remarked a member of the committee. "There was a time, only a few years ago, when we drove through our streets hurriedly with our friends, but now we point with pride to some of the places that were once scars."

Employer's Point of View.

Officials of the steel mills are freely coöperating in this movement, because they consider it of great value to their employés. L. A. Touzlin, assistant superintendent of blast furnaces, Illinois Steel company, says that from the manufacturer's point of view the community garden is of vital importance.

"The gardens stimulate the men to take pride in fixing up their homes," he added. "Where we used to have vacant lots covered with tin cans, we now have gardens. Our men are working only three days a week, which gives them plenty of time to work in their gardens. We furnish our employés material at cost to use in repairing their homes, and since the garden movement started their requests for cement, rods, paint, varnish, and similar materials continue to increase, indicating that they are taking more interest in their homes.

"They stay with us longer, and that means promotion for them. Then, too, it costs us from $17 to $3,000 to employ a new man, depending on the kind of work, and it is better for the men as well as the company for which they work to have permanent employment."

Canny

By Guy Lee.

As summer nears and wood and stream
  Begin to lure the city cootie,
I follow an unusual scheme,
  As viewed by fellow slaves to duty.
It is unique, and in a way
  Deserves a sort of explanation:
While other guys put off the day
  I always ask the first vacation.

For late July or August most
  Express desire, but yours sweetly
Is anxious to lay off his post
  As quickly as he can discreetly.
You see, if we got canned (ahem!)
  I'd have at least this consolation:
I got two weeks the jump on them
  By asking for the first vacation.

Special Demonstration Week!

This week—from May 9th to May 16th—we are giving a special free demonstration of Ideal Power Lawn Mowers. Without the slightest obligation on your part we want you to come in and let us show you the labor saving features of these wonderfully simple, economical, and easily operated power mowers.

If you wish we will arrange with you to give an actual working demonstration on your own grounds.

Grass cutting time is here! Now is when you should have a power mower to start the seasons care of your lawn. That is why we have set aside this special "Ideal Week"—we want every one who has a large or medium sized lawn to care for to become acquainted with the true merits of Ideal Power Mowers. We want to show you what it will mean to you in better lawn care and dollars saved!

The Ideal "Junior"
For Medium Sized Lawns

The Ideal "Junior," shown above at left, is built essentially for medium sized lawns. It is a paying investment on small lawns where there is too much grass to conveniently care for with hand mowers, yet not enough to warrant the purchase of a large power mower; and at the same time will care for grounds that cover three to four acres. As an auxiliary unit on large grounds, golf courses, cemeteries, and parks for trimming around shrubbery and cutting in close quarters, this little mower has no equal.

The "Junior" mower has a 22 inch cutting unit and will do as much work per day as four or five hard working men with hand mowers. It is surprisingly reasonable in cost and very economical to operate.

The Ideal 30" Power Lawn Mower
For Large Lawns

At the right of the picture is shown our standard 30-inch Ideal Power Lawn Mower—a machine that has no superior in caring for large areas of grass—a money saving investment that does away with several men and horses. This sturdy, powerful and simple 30-inch mower will easily cut from 5 to 6 acres of grass per day. Furnished as a walking mower, as shown, or with riding trailer if desired; also with special cutting for putting greens. Used on thousands of private estates, public parks, golf grounds, college grounds, cemeteries, etc.

Make it a point to call upon us during this special demonstration week. If impossible to come in, phone us and we will gladly arrange for a demonstration on your own grounds.

Identification: Each car, as it passes inspection, will have sealed on it, in a conspicuous place, an Inspection Card. The car thus certified has measured up to all requirements.

It indicates to the buyer that the Board of Experts has declared it mechanically right and priced right. The price will also be shown very plainly. You can't go wrong and you pick your car by an experts judgment.

Inspection: All cars must pass the rigid inspection of a Board of Experts. Competent judges, selected for their known mechanical ability and integrity by the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. They determine the price and adjudge the mechanical condition of each car.

Only cars that meet the high standards the experts set are allowed to be put on sale.

Aim and Purpose: The Used Car Show is a once-a-year event conducted by and under the auspices of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. Its object is not only to acquaint the public with the many wonderful opportunities the Great Central Used Car Market offers but to help them identify those legitimate and responsible dealers handling used automobiles, trucks and motorcycles.

Show Now an Institution

Today the annual Used Auto Show is an Institution. A convenient market for wise buyers who want to reduce time and effort and save needless steps "shopping" all over town. Nearly every style of body and type of chassis is represented. By special arrangement over 1000 cars will be shown.

Values Beyond Compare

Never before in the history of Motordom has the used car market offered so many genuinely attractive values as now. The eagerness for new models, backed with the cash to pay for them, has caused a lively exchange of many excellent cars. Result: The Coliseum filled with High Grade values!

Over 1000 to Choose From

Variety is the key-note of this season's show. Touring cars, roadsters, sport models, coupes, sedans, limousines, custom-built jobs, 4, 6, 8 and 12 cylinder models. Also some trucks and commercial cars. Motorcycles too, will comprise part of the exhibit. All conveniently housed under one roof so you can make sharp comparisons without the task of shopping.

Triple Endorsement Your Guarantee

Every car carries the endorsement of the Association—the stamp of the Expert Inspection Committee—the individual guarantee of the dealer. Cars are valued and priced at their true worth. No inflated valuations. (Note the tag opposite.)

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

A crossing cop is so called because he is always cross. The corner belongs to him, and he is put there to prevent you from getting by. He has an extensive and illuminating répertoire of elegant phrases. One of them is: "Wherethehel do you think yer goin'?" The others are: "Whathehel do you think yer doin'?" "Who thehel d'ye think yu are?" and "How thehel d'ye get that way?"

Pa Potter is guiding his new chariot through the business district for the first time. It is a trying hour. He is trying to get through; the pedestrians are trying to get out of his way; the cops are trying to scare him to death, and the car itself is trying to climb up on the sidewalk. Pa is wondering to himself what the salesman meant when he called it a "pleasure car."

Scene I.: Michigan and Adams.

COP: Can't your hear the whistle? C'mon get out of that . . .
Step on the gas and let 'em pass.
Where d'ye think you're at?

PA (who has killed the motor):
Just a minute . . . why so flip?

COP: Don't you give ME none o' yer lip.
C'mon, clear out, or I'll run you in. . . .
Why don't you start that hunka tin?

(Pa finally gets motor started, but just as he lurches over the crossing the cop whistles for the east and west traffic.)

COP (to Pa): Whathehel's the matter with you?
Whaddye mean by driving through?
Can't you hear the whistles blow?
I'll let you know when I want you to go.

PA: But you told me to go.

COP: . . . Hey, shut your head,

PA: But you did, you know. . . .

COP: Shut up, I said. . . .

(Blows whistle.)

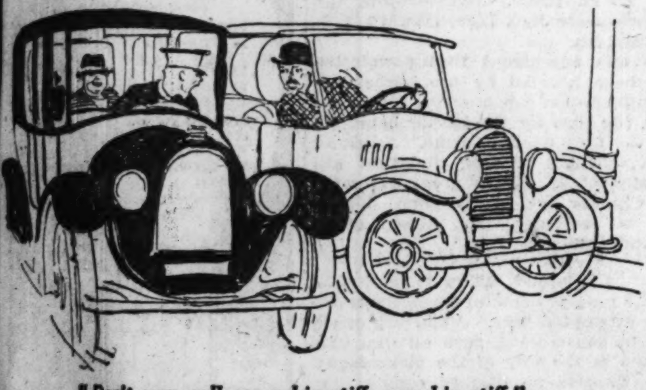
Gwan, don't give me none o' yer chin,
Step on that gas, or I'll run you in.

(So Pa finally gets by that crossing. But his nerve is gone.)

Scene II.: State and Madison.

Pa is crowded to the curb by a taxi and jams on the brakes just in time to save himself from running into a post. Pa and the taxi driver indulge themselves as follows:

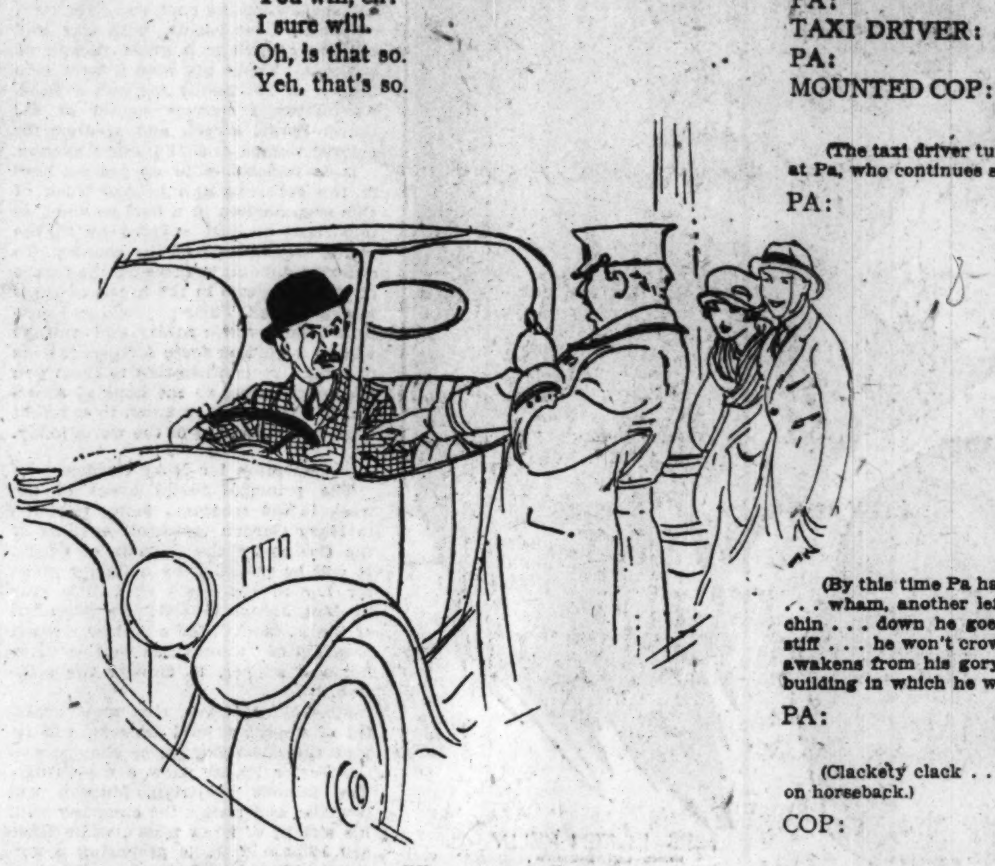
Where d'ye think you're goin'?
Who wants to know?



"Don't you call me a big stiff, you big stiff."

ILLUSTRATIONS—BY—J.H. STRIEBEL—

I'll show you who wants to know.
You will, eh?
I sure will.
Oh, is that so.
Yeh, that's so.



"Step on that gas, or I'll run you in."

Oh, YOU'LL show me, will you?
I sure will.
You and who else?
Just me, you big stiff.
Who's a big stiff?
Don't you call me a big stiff, you big stiff.
I'll bust you one in the nose.
Get out and bust me one in the nose.
Well, I will, all right.
Well, do it.
I'll do it, all right.

(Meanwhile Pa and the taxi driver have blocked the traffic—neither one has got out of the car, however—and a mounted policeman kisses himself into the proceedings.)

MOUNTED COP: Hey, what's the big idear?
C'mon, get outta here.

PA: This taxi nearly smashed my car.

TAXI DRIVER: He calls it a car—har! har! har! har!

PA: I'll har you one on the nose.

TAXI DRIVER: Oh, you will, will you.

PA: I sure will.

TAXI DRIVER: Well, do it, then.

PA: Well, I'll do it, all right.

MOUNTED COP: Hey, cut the comedy—on your way!
Beat it, the both of you . . . gwan, I say.

(The taxi driver turns the corner flinging dire threats of vengeance back at Pa, who continues straight ahead, talking to himself.)

PA: . . , another word, and I'da busted him on the nose . . . the nerve of that guy . . . didn't think I'd poke him, eh? . . . I'da poked him, all right . . . just one more word, and I'da climbed right out, and say, what I'da done to him . . . they can go too far with me . . . the big stiff . . . you'da think he owned the earth . . . say—I had him scared, all right . . . if that cop hadn't butted in, I'da landed on that guy . . . get out and bust me one in the nose, he says . . . say, I'da busted him one, all right, the big stiff.

(By this time Pa has battered the poor taxi driver into a palpitating pulp . . . wham, another left to the nose . . . zam . . . a right uppercut to the chin . . . down he goes, begging for mercy . . . serves him right, the big stiff . . . he won't crowd Pa to the curb any more . . .) About this time Pa awakens from his gory dream of vengeance and finds himself opposite the building in which he works. He will park here, he thinks, and go up.

PA: I'm glad I haven't far to go.
I'll just park here for an hour or so.

(Clackety clack . . . clackety, clack! Hark, it is an officer approaching on horseback.)

COP: Hey, you there, get outta that.
Wherethehel d'ye think you're at?

PA: I was parking here. Ain't it all right here?

COP: "Ain't it all right here?"—that's a bright idear.
D'ye see that fire plug what you're near?
It's agin the law . . . get outta here.

(So Pa "gets outta here" and goes around the block.)

PA: Well, still, I haven't so far to go.
I'll just park here for an hour or so.

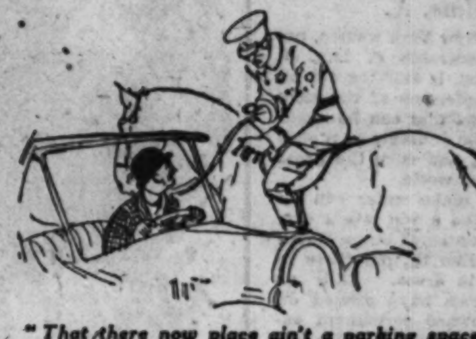
(Clackety, clack . . . clackety, clack!
It's the mounted officer, coming back.)

COP: Hey, you there! Say, waddye mean?
Get outta that zone . . . ain't you got no bean?
That's a loading zone . . . you can't park there.
Beat it . . . get out of it . . take the air.

(All of which has a ring of finality about it. Whatever you may say of mounted policemen, you cannot accuse them of not stating their views with brevity and decision. So Pa starts up and drives wearily around three or four more blocks and finally finds an opening that looks good.)

PA: I hope I can park in this bloomin' town
When the cops won't kick my car aroun'.

(Clackety, clack . . . clackety, clack—
As you may have guessed . . . it's the cop coming back.)



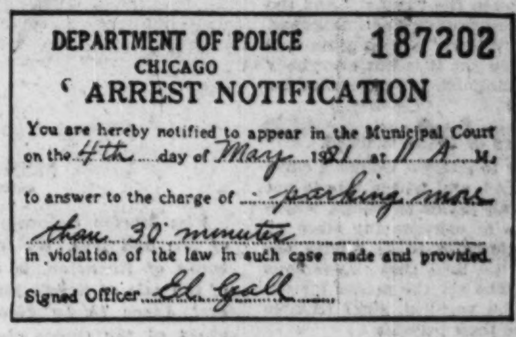
"That there now place ain't a parking space."

COP: What d'ye think you're doin'?
Gwan . . . get outta that. . . .
That there now place ain't a parking space.
Where d'ye think you're at?

PA (desperately): Ain't there no place that a guy can go . . . ?

COP: Well, you can't park here, if you want to know.
Skibooch, now, beat it . . gwan, on . . . blow.

And Pa blows. Finally he gets his car eased into a corner in a far away side street and wearily he plods to the office. . . . Then hours pass . . . it is evening. . . . Pa trudges once more block after block to where he left his car. . . . Wonder of wonders! . . . it is still there . . . it hasn't been stolen, yet. . . . Pa breathes a great sigh of relief . . . he hasn't had it long enough yet to realize the thieves have done him a great injustice by not taking it . . . but, hold, what is this . . . a slip of paper, neatly folded, sticking in the steering wheel. . . . Pa opens it with a vague feeling of impending doom . . . and well he might, for when the fatal slip is unfolded Pa reads these few but sufficient words:



DEPARTMENT OF POLICE 187202
CHICAGO

You are hereby notified to appear in the Municipal Court on the 4th day of May 1921 at 11 A. M. to answer to the charge of parking more than 30 minutes

Signed Officer Ed Gall

PA: Another summons . . . and there you are!
I KNEW I WAS GOING TO HATE THIS CAR.

(And that's that.)

"I knew I was going to hate this car."

Women League to Restrain Parisian Designers of Dress

By Mme. X.

A GROUP of New York women, under the leadership of Mrs. J. Kennedy Tod, is starting out on a new crusade, one of the most hopeless of its kind that can be imagined, because those enlisting in it seek to control, direct, and curb the great dressmakers of the world.

It is easier to make water run up hill, easier to make a wet world dry, easier to turn an autocrat into a Dutch parlor boarder, than to undertake to dictate fashions in dress. Still, as these other reforms have started on their first lap toward permanent enforcement, it is possible that this latest attempt to overcome the irresistible may succeed.

Mrs. Tod, Mrs. Hamilton Fairfax, Mrs. Edward Codman Parish, Mrs. Schuyler N. Warren, Mrs. John Greenough, Mrs. John S. Rogers, and Mrs. R. J. Hare Powel (names to conjure with in Gotham) call upon their sisters all over the country to help form the "League of American Women of the Principal Cities" to restrain the great Parisian designers from what the founders of this league consider the "prevailing license" in dress.

Their underlying motive they describe as "both spiritual and patriotic." They wish to unite in a biennial message to dress designers warning them that "we stand forever on guard." They declare that their aim is "not so much to influence the smart as to keep the country sound." (This division between the "smart" and the "sound" is interesting and intriguing, because the "smart" are so often loud that, well, you see it is not everybody who can distinguish the difference between them.)

Arbiters of Dress Warned.

The idea is to interest women's clubs already formed, and where this is not possible to call parlor meetings, which shall arange to canvass the state by mail and otherwise so to arouse the mothers of the land that the famous coutumiers who set the modes for the women of the occident shall tremble and totter on their perches.

If this happens it will be the first time in history that these supreme arbiters have ever recognized a power greater than their own. As a victory it will make the triumphs of Alexander, of Cæsar, and of Napoleon take second place in the story of mankind's evolution.

Since the beginning of time fashions in dress have been guided by profound currents, much deeper, stronger, and more uncontrollable than any that lead great generals to famous victories.

To a mere onlooker it seems as if these earnest women were striking, not at the root of the matter, but at what is simply one phase of a much more serious business. Dress is merely an outward expression of the inward spirit. It is as if they should attack the language of a people whose morals they were seeking to improve. Language may be good and morals bad, and vice versa.

General Slump in Ideals.

Should they undertake to eliminate certain other specialties of the day the matter of what they call "licentious" dress would take care of itself. There is a license in general conduct, an intolerance of authority, a lack of discipline, a dearth of good taste in manners, and a general slump in ideals which no amount of propriety in dress will cure or curb.

It is probably the inevitable reaction from a national exaltation such as this generation has never before experienced. The cure must come from within, not from outside. A spiritual rebirth is due, but vainly one scans the horizon for sign of its coming. Nothing but the prevailing darkness gives hope that it is at hand. Wherever the watcher turns he sees only evidence of a crumbling civilization.

Certainly nothing in the fashions indicates the renaissance, unless it be that the very nakedness of the styles is clearing the way for a new mode of covering and concealing the body. Certainly not in the memory of living women have the fashions in female attire been so wholesome, so comfortable, so sanitary.

In Paris the plump, large waisted woman is much more admired than here. They have no use over there for our slim, flat chested dames. Their emphasis on the "femme féconde, fertile" is but a visible expression of that tremendous desire of France today to increase her population so as to cope better with her prolific neighbor and hereditary foe. Viewed in this light, the fashion makes the heart ache, not thrill.

To us Americans there is no such call for this significant garb, and our women will continue to declare to the waiting world that by their slim figures shall ye know the leaders of the fashionable world today. The significance of this is as interesting as that of the French styles, for it testifies to the self-control of the followers of this cult. They are ever on guard. No matter how delicious and tempting a menu may be, no matter how choice the vintage offered, those who devote themselves to being slender, clear-eyed, and fresh complexioned, will resist what is one of the most potent temptations to which we are subject, that of the table.

Prevailing Hue in Paris.

The word brought back from the source of all fashions in dress is that the trend is towards the Spanish in attire. Skirts are fuller and somewhat longer. They swing from the hips à la Carmencita. The prevailing hue in Paris is black—swishing black frocks, broad black hats, and strings and strings of pearls looped around the neck and hanging down the front. If you have not pearls, there are innumerable novelties in the line of beads which are most popular, jade beads, beads of painted wood, of coral, and of crystal.

For sports suits knit dresses are much worn. They are becoming to the young and slim, but those of riper years would best beware of them. They thicken the outline and inevitably hang irregularly at the bottom after being worn some time, which is a disastrous effect for any save the most youthful.

Each year Paris brings forth some new and supreme authority on dress whose name is a guarantee for the chic and desirable. These annuals pride themselves on keeping their doors shut to visiting dressmakers, which insures to their fashions great exclusiveness and originality. But the authority of the hardy perenials among French dressmakers suffers but little from these sporadics, and the house most famous among them all still holds sway there.

From this house comes the verdict that tailor suits are not yet the mode. Ah, M. Worth, it will take more than you to separate the average American woman from her most cherished standby, her smart, neat, well fitting, well made, and well cut tailor suit. This suit is her insignia, her livery denoting the force in our American life which evolved the temperance movement, achieved woman suffrage, founded the Y. W. C. A., started the American Red Cross, created the Federation of Women's clubs, stands behind all of our great philanthropies, is the fons et origo of our social service program, is the main spring of American culture, and is responsible for that introduction of women into the business world which has been copied all over the world.

The Art of Grecian Dress.

Here, where the edict of dressmakers comes in conflict with a great underlying force, it is powerless. Where, however, fashionable women would dictate as to how long a dress shall be, how high the neck shall be cut, how much or how little of the human form divine shall be covered the artist in the realm of styles in gowns still rules supreme, because any garb is modest or the contrary according to the eye that looks on it.

The ancient Greeks' short and fluttering raiment, outlining and revealing the maiden's lovely curves and lines was not, nor is not considered indecent, while the completely shrouded form of the oriental houri has an allure to which many a wandering European has fallen a victim.

The famous dress designers study many things in their designs. The politics of the times, the history of dress, the psychology of the women of the moment, international relations, the prevailing cult in painting and sculpture all influence them. The student of human nature can tell fairly correctly the social and intellectual conditions of a people by the kind of dress its men and women wear.

Perhaps the future scholar may test us by our fashion books and, by studying their combination of gay dance frocks and stern, severe tailor suits, may arrive at the point where he or she will create from the union some such great activity as the Y. W. C. A., which has done and is planning to carry still further its splendid work among the working women of the time, a work which provides them with comforts and wholesome recreation, companionship, and counsel.

Y. W. C. A. Drive for Funds.

This coming week is dedicated to the nation-wide drive for funds to continue and enlarge the labors of this organization. The Chicago committee is working under the leadership of Mrs. N. W. Campbell. Mrs. C. C. Bullock is chairman of the metropolitan committee. Mrs. Tracy Drake is at the head of the hospitality committee, which includes Mrs. Hermon Butler, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. J. J. Borland, Mrs. J. W. Scott, Mrs. Moses Wentworth, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. James Douglas, Mrs. C. S. Holt, Mrs. E. L. Ryerson Jr, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling Jr., Mrs. Clifford Barnes, Mrs. William Douglas, Mrs. D. H. Burnham, Miss Isabella Holt, and Miss Martha Sarver.

Today many of the clergy of the different denominations have promised to make the drive a part of their regular announcements. Tomorrow at the Drake a big dinner inaugurates the campaign which, beginning the 9th, continues until the 19th. Daily luncheons will enable the workers to meet and compare notes and report on their success.

The Chicago Y. W. C. A. record for 1920 is impressive. It has housed 11,391 girls. The room registry has served 3,666 of them, while 13,667 have registered in departments of the centranl branch; 419 have been accommodated in boarding houses, 1,850 are enrolled in industrial clubs, 5,397 in the health education department, 2,387 attended the summer camps, 1,208 enrolled in the religious education department, 758,000 meals were served in four cafeterias, and 106,650 used for lounge or rest room in the central and west side branches.

An Army of Volunteers.

Enrolled in the drive are 600 business women workers under the direction of the dean of women of the Commonwealth Edison company, while 500 homeworkers bring the Y. W. C. A. drive army up to quite a formidable size.

Last year Mrs. George McKinlock headed the drive, and the money thus raised has, among other things, established a vacation home at Plano, Ill., in a charming old mill, which gives the name to the home, "Old Mill." Another summer home is that at North Hammond, Ind., known as Camp Hammond. This is for colored school girls and colored workers in business and industry. Under Mrs. William H. Hubbard, a large "girls reserves" has been formed among the students in public and high schools. Mrs. Hubbard is also head of the publicity for this drive.

A visit to the society's central branch at 59 East Monroe street is a revelation as to the manifold and helpful activities carried on there. Besides the cafeteria (where excellent food is served) there are a lounge, gymnasium, swimming pool, room registry, club and class rooms, with day and evening classes in a great variety of subjects. There are also a west side branch at 101 South Ashland avenue, an industrial service center at 432 South Peoria street, and another for colored women at 3541 Indiana avenue.

It is impossible to do justice here to the generous and helpful work of this organization in a field so wide, so important as that covered by it, the young womanhood of the country. To a degree difficult to measure the future of the race rests in the hands of these young women. Their physical and spiritual health, their sanity and courage will be a guiding force for generations to come. In contributing to them you are contributing to the hope of America, and it is not too much to say that America is the hope of the world today.

Reception for Mary Garden.

The principal social event of the week is the reception being tendered to Mary Garden tomorrow evening at the Casino by the Friends of Opera. It will be preceded by a dinner given for her at the same chic little club by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, president of the F. of O. There will be a short program of "stunts," as well as dancing and supper, to enliven the occasion.

Miss Mary Baker, that most graceful of unprofessional dancers, will repeat the charming dance she gave at the Junior league show a month ago. The famous magician, Moroni, will bewilder and puzzle the company with his sleight of hand tricks, while Richard Henry Little is preparing a surprise of some sort which promises to be a feature of the evening. Altogether a "cheerful time will be had by all." Mrs. Coleman will receive and present the guests to Miss Garden.

As she travels about in faraway China, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is doubtless rejoicing in the birth ten days ago in Cooperstown, N. Y., of her first grandson. He is the latest arrival in the family of George Hyde Clark, whose wife was Miss Emily Ryerson, second daughter of the late Arthur Ryerson. The Clarks already have four daughters, and Mrs. Victor Salvatore, the youngest of the Arthur Ryerson daughters, has two, so the advent of a son is a matter of unusual importance.

Say what we may as to the general desirability of girls, there is nothing quite so satisfying to the average parent as the appearance of "a son and heir." You never hear a daughter referred to as "a daughter and heiress," do you? It is an inheritance from the times when industrial conditions made life a problem for the parents of a sizable family, girls not being an industrial asset until now.

Arrival of a Son and Heir.

From the London Times also comes the announcement of a birth of interest to Chicagoans. In the following formal terms the "Thunderer" states that "the christening took place Monday, April 11, at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, of Michael Justin Aylmer, son of Brigadier General and Mrs. Spears. The sponsors were Gen. Sir George Macdonogh, Field Marshal Viscount French, the Rt. Hon. Winston S. Churchill, Lady Millicent Hawes, and Miss Joyce Borden."

Mrs. Spears is a sister of John Borden of Chicago and a daughter of the late William Borden, also of this city. She had a wonderful war record, having established one of the most famous field hospitals in France, directly behind the firing lines. She financed it largely herself, and it served the English army during most of the four years. It was during this period that she met her present husband. They make Paris their main residence, but went to England for the birth of their child, so as to have him born on English soil.

A Chinese Fair in June.

The first steps have been taken towards the organization of what promises to be one of the most brilliant and interesting of the philanthropical entertainments ever staged in Chicago, namely, a Chinese fair to aid the famine sufferers in China. It is being gotten up by prominent Chicagoans and Chinese.

Its success was assured when Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman agreed to accept the chairmanship of the organizing body. John Jay Abbott, vice president of the Continental and Commercial bank, is chairman of the Chicago branch of the National Chinese Relief organization.

The first steps were taken a week ago when about fifty Chicagoans and prominent Chinese men of affairs met at a Chinese restaurant on Twenty-second street and talked the proposition over as they ate mysterious and delicious Chinese dishes. A second call to a conference was answered last Tuesday afternoon in the directors' room at the Continental bank by a representative group of people, among whom were, besides Mrs. Coleman and Mr. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bennett, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Arthur Small, Mr. and Mrs. Knight, Mrs. William Scriven, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Langworthy, Miss Mary Waller, Miss Dorothy Keeley, Charles Hutchinson, J. Allen Haines, Edward Dunne [former mayor of Chicago], Patrick O'Donnell, Ben Hecht, and R. H. Little. Representing the Chinese were Jack Lem, Howard Moy, and Mr. Lu.

It was announced that permission had been granted by the harbor authorities to use a part of the Municipal pier, the time for the bazaar being set for the first week in June. Assisting Mrs. Coleman as vice chairman will be Mrs. C. M. Ely, a great authority on Chinese art. Miss Mary Waller will be secretary. Mr. Abbott offers to underwrite the fair.

Chinatown Offers Help.

The project includes much never before attempted here. A Chinese street will be constructed, with all that that means in the way of the picturesque. The Chinese promise to conduct the sales themselves. There will be Chinese restaurants and theaters. On the water alongside of the pier there will be Chinese junks and other water craft. For a week it will be as if we could step from Grand avenue directly into faraway Peking.

Although the project is only just started it has already got far on its way. Allen Haines has the posters and their disposition in street cars and other public places arranged for. Mrs. Allen Haines has designed a most fascinating poster, which we shall soon see on every billboard. The Chinese themselves are eager participants in the arrangements, and all Chinatown is humming with plans and offers of help. The time, the place, and the men and women seem all propitious.

The cause is one that can't help appealing to us all. China is an inherited friendship, a responsibility of which we are proud. Of all the nations of the world we are the only one that has not sought to make something out of China to her disadvantage. More than once we have stood between her and spoliation. Once more let us come to her aid.

Cabaret Performance at Opera Club.

Next Friday evening a "cabaret dance" will be given at the Opera club by the Volunteer Aids of the Chicago Lighthouse for the Blind. Miss Eileen Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis F. Kelly, is president of the organization, and Miss Marion Osborne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Osborne, is chairman of the entertainment committee and has charge of the sale of tickets.

Others assisting are the Misses Elizabeth Martin, Florence [illegible], Louise Hessert, Constance Root, Lillian Shedd, Louise Voltz, Edith Ware, Mrs. Everett Cook, and Mrs. Everett Wyman. Mrs. Harold Strotz will take part in the cabaret performance.

On the list of patronesses are the Mesdames Alfred Martin, Knowlton Ames, Dennis F. Kelly, C. W. [illegible], W. I. Osborne, W. B. Martin, Frank Root, John McIlvaine, Edward Cudahy Jr., Philip Wrigley, and [illegible] Kelly Jr. Besides paying the salaries of some of the instructors, many of the members of this aid society have taken courses at the Favill School

"No Tagging or Nagging" Slogan of Y. W. C. A. Drive

By Kate Webber.

"KEEP the Doors Open"—doors of health, friendship, shelter, and good times for Chicago girls—will be the watchword of the $277,000 budget campaign of the Young Women's Christian association to be carried on for ten days, beginning tomorrow.

For two years the Y. W. C. A. has been busy opening doors. The last year alone has seen seven new activity centers opened, Central branch, in the heart of the loop, with its gymnasium, swimming pool, cafeteria club, and class rooms at the service of business girls; the Industrial Service center, a club and recreation center for factory girls; the Blue Triangle house for colored girls; two Girl reserve centers for school and business girls and two summer camps; "Mill-[illegible]" for teen age girls, and Camp Hammond for colored girls.

At the request of the church women of Hyde Park the association also assumed a share in the new Hyde Park community center, with the hope that if finances permit it will eventually take over its entire responsibility.

The room registry, established a year and a half ago, to try to meet the great housing shortage by finding homes for the thousands of girls who come to the city to work, attracted by tales of high pay and "something going on" in Chicago, opened doors to [illegible] girls and women who applied to its rooms during the last year, while [illegible] more found either permanent or temporary quarters in the three Y. W. C. A. residences.

Having opened so many doors, the association now is working resolutely to keep them open. Many prominent Chicago women, with the interest of girls at heart, are devoting themselves to the campaign, which it is announced, will be one without "tagging and nagging."

Mrs. N. W. Campbell is general campaign chairman, and associated with her are Mrs. William P. Sidley, chairman of women's teams; Mrs. W. [illegible] Hibbard, publicity; Mrs. C. C. [illegible], special gifts; Miss Lois Wild[illegible], distribution; Miss Martha Sarver, [illegible], and Mrs. Tracy Drake, hospitality.

The list of district chairmen, each of whom will head up the collection of funds in her own district, includes Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Miss Emma Folsom, Hrs. Herbert F. Good[illegible], Mrs. R. M. Reed, Mrs. A. H. [illegible]umbach, Mrs. Robert S. De Goyer, Mrs. William Douglass, and Mrs. J. Harry Jones.

There will be more than a thousand volunteer workers in the campaign, [illegible] in the home women's division, and [illegible] in the business and professional women's division. The former group will be led by Mrs. W. P. Sidley, and the latter by Miss Helen Norris.

The Drake will be the scene of the opening dinner tomorrow evening, where with songs and speeches enthusiasm and determination will be engendered to carry the campaigners triumphantly through the next ten days.

Campaign headquarters will be at Central branch, 59 East Monroe street, where daily returns will be brought in and luncheon served to the workers. These luncheons are in charge of the hospitality committee, Mrs. Tracy Drake, chairman, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. Charles S. Holt, Mrs. James H. Douglass. Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. C. N. Caldwell, Mrs. John Jay Borland, Miss Isabella Holt, Mrs. Clifford W. Barnes, and Mrs. C. Barney Goodspeed.

Mrs. James A. Campbell, the club's president for the last two years, has been elected president of the Tenth district, I. F. W. C.

Chapter A, Illinois P. E. O., has just closed one of the most successful seasons in its history. Organized in 1869 by seven young women students at Iowa Wesleyan university, the association has grown until it is the largest independent secret organization for women in the world. Its work is along social, literary, and philanthropic lines. The outstanding feature of the organization is the maintenance of a fund for the education of young women. Chapter A is the largest contributor to this fund, and at present is assisting three young women to obtain higher education. Mrs. George E. Tobey is the new president.

THE Sheridan Plaza---easily the most perfectly appointed residential hotel in Chicago---was conceived and carried to completion with one thought in mind ---Service.

Service in the completeness of the architectural plans---Service in the thought given the selection of every detail of the furnishings---Service in the extreme care with which the clientele was chosen---and, finally, Service in the building of a complete organization.

And in the restaurant, Service expresses itself in surroundings of quiet beauty---in unsurpassed cuisine supervised and served by experts---and in concert music by the best obtainable talent. Yet prices are moderate in the extreme ---both a la carte and table d'hote service.

The growing popularity of the restaurant---already the rendezvous of those with whom dining is a fine art---bespeaks a real appreciation of the Sheridan Plaza standards.

On Board the U. S. S. Commodore.

The boxing match on the Commodore next Friday evening for the benefit of the Lawrence Hall, a home for otherwise homeless boys, bids fair to be one of the smart affairs of the season. Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss is largely responsible for the enterprise. She is enthusiastically aided and abetted by Capt. Wurtsbaugh of the Naval Training station. The boxers will be selected from the best boxers of the station.

As it is to be staged on the U. S. S. Commodore it is outside the jurisdiction of the city, and the onlookers need feel no fear that they will be "pinched" by our ever vigilant police. There will be 100 ringside seats, a so-called "royal" box, and standing room for 1,000 spectators.

In the royal box it is planned to have as guests of honor Miss Mary Garden, Judge Landis, Capt. Wurtsbaugh, Mrs. J. G. Coleman, and others. The naval band will play during the evening.

It should be a gala night on the old training ship, which lies at anchor at the east end of the Randolph street viaduct.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Children of All Creeds Welcome at Daily Bible School

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

FROM the present outlook, more than 25,000 boys and girls will be enrolled in the Chicago Daily Vacation Bible schools opening June 27 and continuing for five weeks through the summer. There will be approximately 200 schools fostered by 250 churches in representative locations all over the city and a staff of 2,000 teachers trained in music, the drama, story telling, manual training, craft work, organized play, as well as in kindergarten, primary, and secondary school work.

As in the past, the Daily Vacation Bible schools will mobilize as large a number of children as the equipment of buildings and teaching staffs of the schools can accommodate, so that they will do much toward reducing juvenile delinquency, which Judge Victor P. Arnold of the Juvenile court attributes to the large number of unoccupied and unsupervised boys and girls in Chicago.

The most cheery and harmoniously equipped rooms of the church buildings and parish houses will be thrown open to the children, in keeping with the vacation spirit, to provide congenial surroundings and a happy atmosphere where the children may be profitably engaged under trained leaders.

Emerson O. Bradshaw is the secretary of the Chicago Daily Vacation Bible School federation, with offices in the Church federation headquarters, 19 South La Salle street, with the following members of seven churches acting as a general committee in charge of the summer schools: The Rev. Messrs. A. H. Gage and Charles T. Holman of the Baptist church, the Rev. Omer B. Maphis of the Church of the Brethren, the Rev. Messrs. C. S. Laidman and John Lambrecht of the Congregational church, the Rev. S. C. Kinchloe of the Disciples church, the Rev. E. P. Sabin of the Episcopal church, the Rev. Messrs. Warren N. Clark and W. J. Schuerman of the Methodist church, and the Rev. Messrs. George J. Searles and Peter W. Fischer of the Presbyterian church.

Last summer there was a total enrollment of 21,400 in the 164 schools conducted with the coöperation of 200 churches. The average enrollment of pupils in each school was 134, with an average attendance of seventy children. Each school was conducted at an average cost for the five weeks of $125. Thirty-five nationalities were represented in the total enrollment.

The schools are centers of value in the promotion of loyalty to the nation and to the flag which is kept ever before the pupils and is saluted daily with reverence and respect, while the children of all nationalities repeat together: "I pledge allegiance to the American flag and to the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Children of all races and religions come together in the daily vacation Bible schools, where the spirit is so broad and cosmopolitan that for the most part the schools are nonsectarian and thoroughly democratic.

In some localities two or more churches combine in conducting community schools, and in all the churches coöperating in the daily vacation Bible school movement children of any and all churches are welcome to attend the school and receive credit for the classes they attend and the work they accomplish.

The Rev. Hugh Millikin MacWhorter, S. B., priest in charge of St. Andrew's church, Downers Grove, will entertain the clergy of the northeastern deanery of the Episcopal church at their annual spring meeting tomorrow.

The Rev. Mr. MacWhorter has been in charge of St. Andrew's for the last three and a half years, following five years' service in the Church of the Atonement at Kenmore and Ardmore avenues, one year of which the parish was without a rector.

His ordination to the diaconate took place on June 6, 1915, in the Cathedral SS. Peter and Paul, and a year later he was ordained priest by the Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson, D. D., bishop of Chicago, in Emmanuel church, La Grange. The Rev. The alumni dinner will be served at 1 o'clock and an alumni conference under the leadership of the Rev. George Craig Stewart, rector of St. Luke's church, Evanston, will be held during the remainder of the afternoon. Officers of the alumni association are the Rev. Messrs. Kenneth O. ART AND ARCHITECTURE

Portraits by Abram Poole at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

The silver moon swung low one night
And paused beside a silver stream
Where lilies raised their sails to float
The whispered burden of a dream
Down the smooth water by the light
From Cupid's candle all a'gleam.

The roses in my garden blushed
The sweeter on that night in June,
For down the scented paths there trod,
Lit by the slumbrous silver moon,
The lady of my dreams—that night,
My dear, my dear, was fled too soon.

The fingers of the summer dawn
Folded the sails of Cupid's fleet,
The dancing sunbeams swept the stars
Away with all the dreams so sweet—
And she who trod my garden path,
Stilled by day were her silver feet.

A GROUP of paintings which has received much attention from a discerning public is that found in gallery 16 of the Art institute, where are hung the decorative portraits by Abram Poole. The first impression one gains from a rapid survey of the walls is of a distinctly Spanish atmosphere pervading the majority of the canvases.

A second glance makes one realize the liberty the painter was allowing himself by the insertion of the word "decorative" before the summing up of the spirit of his show in the title "portraits."

The paintings are portraits, inasmuch as they are paintings of people. More definitely, the paintings are decorative. Just here comes in a fine point. Is likeness necessary to a portrait? Is a painter justified in painting a portrait that puzzles people to discover the resemblance between it and the presumable sitter? What do we want in a portrait? A beautiful picture or an unmistakable replica of ourselves, providing, of course, we are not beautiful, and the artist cannot combine beauty and truth in one?

Bringing this down to Mr. Poole's portraits, the most remarkable feature about the theory and the paintings is this: Where he has had the opportunity of combining beauty and likeness he has denied both; where he has had a not particularly attractive personality to present he has presented it faithfully—and with rather beautiful accessories; where he has had simple beauty to express he has expressed it in the inanimate portions of his portrait rather than in the body of his model. For example, in "The Yellow Fan" the artist had for a model Mrs. David Adler. Yet the portrait is not like Mrs. Adler. It is only after several minutes of close inspection that the realization slowly dawns upon you that the figure in the white sheet arrangement, with a tiny hat upon its head, and a folded yellow fan in its hand, is Mrs. Adler, one of the greatest beauties of Chicago society.

The realization brings a pang at the thought of the marvelous opportunity for a striking piece of work, which the painter has lost by his choice of this method of presenting her gold and white loveliness. It seems as though he could have done so much with her—and has done so little. Rather, indeed, done nothing but drag out her charm to a thin thread and paint in her piquant face a plaintive, wistful, lisping cadence of spirit as far unlike the cheerful roundelay of her natural self as the mists of a November dusk are unlike the red hot flush of a deep, still August dawn.

In "Sylvia Pankhurst" Mr. Poole had an excellent subject, but one not beautiful. Therefore he has presented it faithfully, omitting not even the detail of the wart beside the truly British tilted nose. But perhaps because his sitter lacked the charm of beauty Mr. Poole has helped her with the best in his palette and the best in his brush, and has succeeded in giving us a portrait which remains in the memory as one of the most successful renderings of a difficult and interesting subject that we have seen.

The impression of homely features is held under by the treatment of the hair, by the details of the dress, and by the authentic English atmosphere which pervades this heroine of the woman's suffrage movement. She looks as though she had brains enough to realize her rights, and was fanatic enough to go through fire and water to gain those right for herself and her sisters. The tenacity of the bulldog is self-evident in her portrait.

In the case of "Miss Vouletti Proctor" and again in the "Mannequin," Mr. Poole has given us great beauty. His touch, which seems happiest in the play of fine materials and delicate colors, has in these paintings fulfilled itself.

The portrait of Miss Proctor is so exquisite as a picture that you do not care in the least whether or not the face is really hers, or is a face of imagined beauty. The face and figure of his model is the least important part of the conception. The beauty lies in the marvel of the costume, the grace of the skirts, and the arrangements of the bodice, the shimmering folds of butterfly materials, the delicacy and sweetness of the color combinations.

So the words "decorative portraits" are justified. One may like them or not; be disappointed or delighted; approve or deprecate—it does not matter. The paintings will give pleasure to many, and are, besides, a variation from the more common run of pictures.

One could look far for a more striking canvas than the portrait of his wife, "Mercedes De Acosta"—a startling, impressive presentation in black and white. One could look far for a more lovely conception than is found in "Cassandra," a slip of a girl in black.

The two decorative panels are of interest. Lacking in soul as they may be, they are yet full of romance, rich with story. They are like fiery lines of free verse swept into being on a tide of vehement color.

Among the other portraits are "Betty," "Serbian Girl," "Bianca—Maria," "Margaret Ware," and "Miss Virginia Lane."

In the print room of the Art institute has been hanging a collection of etchings and wood engravings by Jean François Millet, loaned by Cyrus Hall McCormick. They present many of the points of view with which Millet's paintings have made us familiar.

They deal for the most part with the peasant life of France. In the majority of the scenes it is the woman that works. The saying, "It is the woman that pays," needs but to be swung to "The woman that works," and you get a rapid fire vision of the peasant life abroad. It is still the woman who works, while the man smokes, drinks wine, plays cards, sleep in the sun, or occasionally, gallantly stretching himself, goes into the garden or fields for the planting or plowing. The man's job has an end to it; the woman's goes on forever.

In these engravings and etchings we find "The Woman Shearing Sheep," "The Woman Crushing Oats," "The Woman Baking," "the Woman Pulling Flax," and the "Woman Spins." Of course, she does more than this, too, but by the time I had jotted down these branches of female toil the overpowering importance of woman in the world of labor struck me so forcibly that I decided not to put down more of her tasks lest the incredulous disbelieve the ones already noted.

An exhibition which will close May 15 is that of "The First Annual International Exhibition of Water Colors" in the east wing of the Art institute. This exhibition has been a great disappointment to many people. It is not up to the standard set by our former water color exhibitions given under the name of the "Rotary"—an American exhibit entirely.

There are, of course, good points about it. As a whole, however, it has the appearance of a patch work quilt, to use a homely simile. The various pictures do not seem to hang together. They are disjointed, incoherent, and unrelated. Not one of them is of sufficient size to make of itself a focus point. There is no beginning and no end to the show.

You like this, that, or the other, but you can not state your likes in orderly sequence. It is difficult to grasp appreciatively any one bit of work because of the crowding proximity of its neighbor. The uniformity in size has something to do with this, and it is a great obstacle in the way of approving criticism.

Some of the pictures which command attention are the water colors by Gifford Beal, Hilda Belcher, Edmund S. Campbell, Paul Cezanne (though his note of futurism is not to be approved), Charles John Collings, Arthur B. Davies (particularly his "Resovled Pearl), C. H. B. Demuth, Paul Dougherty, Howard Giles, Charles Hopkinson (his "Desolation" is lovely), Johann Barthold Jongkind, Dodge MacKnight, Maxine Maufra, Francis McComas, Alexander Robinson, John Singer Sargent, Maurice De Vlaminck, and William P. Welsh.

The exhibition of photographs by the Chicago Camera club is also a bit disappointing this year. At first glance the pictures make a strong appeal, but a more careful examination adds nothing to their first message—in fact, it rather detracts from the impulsive wave of admiration that the earlier view induced.

There is so much to be taken into consideration when discussing photography as an art that unless the photograph carries some message or has a special beauty it seems impossible to rank it much above an average picture—the kind we all take on our vacations—pleasant glimpses of places we want to remember. Painting and retouching do not always improve a print. Often they weaken it.

In several of the most charming of the pictures in the present exhibit the retouching has been overdone with the result that the strength of the print is lessened. They are soft and indefinite and lacking in something—just what you scarcely know, yet if it were there (this intangible quality) you would feel it.

Among the photographs are work by Gordon C. Abbott, C. N. Bowen, George H. High, K. A. Kjeldsen, Frank E. Rich, Bernard F. Rogers Jr., Paul Wierum and W. F. Wienecke.

INGROWN

NAIL
Will Turn Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing toe nail reduces inflammation and pain at once and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, any druggist will sell you a small bottle containing directions.

SALESMEN— We have the exclusive sales rights in Cook, Kane, Dupage, Willard, and Kendall counties for the Protex Automobile Traffic Signal. This signal is absolutely automatic—is positive in its action, and is thoroughly satisfactory. It is honestly manufactured and is honestly merchandised. It is a permanent proposition, amply financed both in the production and distribution departments.

We are desirous of engaging the services of eleven salesmen, who are of the aggressively determined type—who recognize a good proposition when they see it, and who have had experience in retail sales.

From experience we find that a man who works can make not less than $60 a week while developing his territory. In two or three weeks this will increase to from $150 to $300 a week. This is not a theory—this is now being done.

FOR SALE — 182-63-100 ACRES LOCATED in Section 7-29-17, East Oconto county, Wis., unimproved, i. e., hardwood cutover lands, bearing very fertile quality of heavy sandy clay loam soil with gravel and clay subsoil, well drained with fresh water, bearing a very considerable amount of maple, red oak, white oak, hickory, ash, etc., some of which is 12 inches in diameter in excellent condition, there being considerably more than sufficient for the erection of all necessary buildings, thus providing for a liberal reserve as well.

This land is located immediately adjoining highly improved farms, whereupon the raising of corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley, red and white clover, alfalfa, etc., and dairying are conducted most successfully by progressive farmers who own the land upon which they operate. Some of these farms have sold in the past for from $100 to $200 per acre with personal property. And as the general market, church, school, excellent road conditions, as well as a live, progressive village with banking, grist mill, elevator and railroad facilities are of the best, such advantages being situated within a few miles from same. This offering represents unexcelled attractions for an improved farm home, or profitable investment. Price $50 per acre, liberal time and terms.

EVERY PRICE IN PLAIN FIGURES—THE LOWEST!

During this sale we will not make any trades—these cars are marked so low that there is no margin for "trading."

This Sale for One Week.

We are determined to reduce our half a million dollar stock and can do it to the best advantage to the public by putting prices down to the very bottom by eliminating trading. THIS IS AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY FOR DEALERS.

World's Largest

We are the world's largest high grade car dealers—our business has been built up by underselling all others—by purchasing in large quantities for cash at bargain prices and passing them on to the public at bargain prices. Thousands of cars have been bought from us by some of the most prominent and wealthy people in Chicago and elsewhere who feel safe in spending their money here—they know that they can obtain utmost value in a high grade new or used car from us.

Startling values will be offered—"challenge values." Never were such bargains in used automobiles offered before in the classified columns of the Chicago Tribune.

Remember a car from Harris & Rodgers is a perfect automobile—that it is a late model—that is a standard make—that it presents the appearance of new and carries a new car guarantee; that every car passes a rigid examination of our expert engineers and mechanics and is made perfect and reinspected and O. K.'d before it is placed on our salesroom floor.

EVERY CAR MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES—WE WILL BE OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY AND SUNDAY EVENING AND EVERY DAY AND NIGHT UNTIL 11:30 P. M. NEXT WEEK.

CADILLAC'S 8 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SUBURBAN SEDAN. This is the latest and current series. Delivered new today would cost over $5,700. This car has had but very little mileage and does not look like a used car. Is equipped with a new set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, etc. Upholstered in beautiful velour. This car is guaranteed by us. Here is an opportunity to save some money on a Cadillac car that is nearly new. Special for this sale, $4,750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, VICTORIA COUPE. This is the latest and current series and the same car as we are delivering new today for $5,085. This car is painted a dark Cadillac blue, with hardly a scratch on the paint. Has an excellent set of Royal cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Velour upholstering, that shows practically no wear. In fact, this car was only delivered to the owner about three months ago. Mechanical condition is guaranteed by us. If you want a comfortable, roomy 4 passenger coupe, with a saving of over $1,000, in a car that cannot be classed as a used car, here is your opportunity. Special for this sale, $4,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. This car is painted a dark Cadillac blue and the paint is in excellent condition. Mechanical condition is exceptionally fine and guaranteed. Upholstering and top look like new. Equipped with an excellent set of tires, one extra bumper, etc. The owner of this car has not driven it a great many miles; in fact, it has not had the usual mileage of a car of this series, and to one who gets this car he will have the advantage of a carefully driven, well lubricated car, with a remarkably low mileage. Rarely do we have the opportunity to offer such a car. Special for this sale, $2,350.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a roomy 4 passenger coupe and probably the most popular model ever built by this company. It is equipped with an almost new set of cord tires and one extra. Painted a dark Cadillac blue. Upholstering and paint in good shape. Mechanical condition will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. Equipped with a spare tire, bumper, clock, and seat covers. Considering the general condition of this car and its equipment and the care and attention it has had by the original owner, this is by far the best bargain we have ever offered. Price $2,450.

STUTZ TOURING CAR, MODEL H, 1920. The original purchaser of this car has not driven it very far, and it has had very careful attention. The original paint is in excellent condition. Equipped with Silvertown cord tires that show practically no wear, and bumper, etc. Mechanical condition on this car we believe to be almost as good as new. This is the first opportunity we have ever had to offer this popular model at the price of this car. Your immediate action will be necessary. Price $2,150.

HUDSON TOURING SEDAN. This is Model 7-0, which is a very late car and has practically the same lines as the new car today. The upholstering, body, and general coach condition on this car are exceptionally fine. Mechanical condition will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. This has been a privately owned car and has received the attention that a motor car should. Tires on it are exceptionally fine. We believe this to be the best bargain we have ever offered in this late series Hudson Sedan. Same model costs new today over $4,000. Your immediate action will be necessary if you want to avail yourself of this bargain. Special for this sale, $1,850.

MOLINE-KNIGHT, 4 CYLINDER CHUMMY. This is the 1918 series and a car that has had very little mileage and wonderful care. In fact, it does not show but very little wear. Equipped with a practically new set of tires and extras. Paint, upholstering, and mechanical condition all that you would expect in a slightly used car. This car is equipped with the Knight 4 cylinder motor, which is noted for its endurance and economy. We believe this to be the best bargain we have had to offer in this make of car. Special for this sale, $800.

SCRIPPS-BOOTH TOURING CAR. This 1919 light 5 passenger 6 cylinder touring car will sell quickly because of the fact that the upkeep will be very small and its mechanical condition is exceptionally good. Has a good set of tires, one extra, bumper, and clock. We believe this bargain to be the lowest priced of any high grade touring car offered today. Price $650.

REO

WHY IS IT

That there are so few REO cars advertised in the classified columns of the Chicago newspapers?

This question is asked of us every day—and it's a perfectly natural question. When you take into consideration the large number of cars in use in this city and vicinity it would be reasonable to suppose that there would be many used REOS for sale. Yet, as a matter of fact, there are very few REOS offered for sale—except by this Company and its dealers.

We think we know the answer. Once a REO owner always a REO enthusiast, you know. When a REO owner gets ready to dispose of his car he comes back to us for another REO. He knows the satisfaction that REO dependability, REO service, and REO durability—all based on sound REO engineering—have given him; and so he has just naturally become a member of the REO family.

In our Used Car Department 90% of cars are REOS. Many of these are rebuilt—and all are sold with a guaranty. Nearly every person who buys a used REO from us eventually comes back and trades it in on a new REO.

We now have on hand a large assortment of used cars and trucks. If you are contemplating the purchase of a used car, buy a used REO. A small deposit will secure one—pay the balance as you like.

Buick users in Cook County in 1920, nearly double those issued to any other make of automobile except one.

There is only one answer to that—the buyer has found that the Buick goes along through trouble, neglect, and abuse year after year, and keeps running, and is backed up by the best service guarantee of any car in the world.

That's why we let you take them out and try them for a week. Does any one else let you do that?

We have every model for immediate delivery, all priced very low.

We are also able to make deliveries on all new Buick models.

ELCAR.

You will be astonished at the wonderful values in rebuilt cars which we are showing today and all this week at the Coliseum and our showrooms. They come at all prices and easy payments can be arranged.

These cars have passed the rigid inspection required by the Chicago Automobile Trade Association which means the best in used cars.

Your money returned if the car is not all that we say it is.

The best values will go first—don't lose out by slow action. Look 'em over right now.

By the way the new 6 cylinder Elcar selling for $1,700 is well worth looking over. Immediate delivery. Terms if desired.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

HARDING MAY BE GUEST AT BIG REALTY MEET

President Says He'll Try and Attend.

BY AL CHASE.

President Harding is expected to open the fourteenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate boards, at the Auditorium on July 12.

This statement was made yesterday by President Fred E. Taylor of the national organization, at a luncheon given in his honor at the Chicago Real Estate board. Mr. Taylor arrived in Chicago from a visit to the White House with Ivan O. Ackley, Fred Upham, and seven others.

"While President Harding couldn't state definitely that he would be here to open our big convention," said Mr. Taylor, "he stated positively that he would come if it were a possible thing and he seemed to think it would be possible. He stated, however, that in the event of the special session of congress preventing his coming he would send us a special message to read at the opening session of the four days' convention.

Hoover a Certainty.

"Although the president couldn't state positively he would come, Secretary Hoover has promised definitely that he would. I imagine he will talk along the line of reorganizing the housing situation."

President Taylor said he understood that there would be about fifty special trainloads of realtors coming to the convention from all parts of the country.

Start $100,000 Campaign.

A campaign to raise the $100,000 fund with which Chicago is to entertain the visiting realtors started officially Friday evening, when seventy-five teams to cover the entire Chicago district were organized at a dinner held in the board rooms. More than a hundred realtors were present.

Charles M. Nichols, chairman of the finance committee, and John R. McGill, vice chairman, are to handle the loop. William B. Cousin is vice chairman of "outside the loop"; Mark Levy, vice chairman of "outside interests" and Herbert E. Cole is secretary of the entire committee.

The captains chosen are as follows: Arthur S. Carruthers, north side; Axel S. Ruud, northwest side; Edward D. Le Tourneux, west side; Arthur C. Kussmann, southwest side; Winfield H. Schendorf, south side; Murray Wolbach, north central district; Earle G. Krumrine, mortgage bankers; William Zelosky, subdivisions; John A. Carroll, Cook county bankers; George R. Hemingway, Oak Park; James R. Smart, Evanston; L. M. Nicholson, industrial; Charles W. Hubbard, loop banks; J. Percy Strickland, office buildings.

Varied Entertainment Planned.

Although an official program has not yet been completed, a good many of the entertainment features of the convention already are planned. The Municipal pier has been secured for a big reception with dancing and firework on the evening of July 12 and two of the largest passenger boats obtainable have been chartered for excursions along the water front. On one afternoon all the visiting realtors will be entertained at the South Shore Country club. A trip to the Great Lakes Naval Training station will be made on another day.

The entertainment committee is planning a gigantic fête at one of the show places along the north shore for the entire convention on the afternoon and evening of July 14.

"The eyes of the real estate world are on Chicago," said General Chairman Ackley of the convention committee. "As the parent organization and as the oldest and most influential board in the world, big things are expected of us. We need $100,000 to meet those expectations."

Building Tradesmen Buy Stone Residence for Club

Members of the Masonic order who are also members of seven different building trades, recently formed the Chicago Craftsmen Temple Building corporation and have bought the stone residence at 6333-35 South Ashland avenue, lot 48x148, for an indicated $16,000 and will use it for a club house. The organization is for social activities only. Mrs. Jennie O. Shepard was the grantor and Benson, Fitch & Heinemann negotiated the sale. James H. Keand is president of the corporation.

Loop Dairy Lunch Man Buys Lake County Farm

Charles Weeghman has bought the 250 acre farm at Prairie View, in Lake county, three miles southeast of Lake Zurich and six miles northeast of Barrington, from Hugo Pick, trustee for the Jeanette Pick estate. The Pick estate recently purchased it from Charles F. Bunte, of Bunte Bros. The price paid by Mr. Weeghman, according to the brokers, Chandler, Hildreth & Co., was $110,000. It is understood Mr. Weeghman will use the farm to supply his chain of restaurants with dairy products.

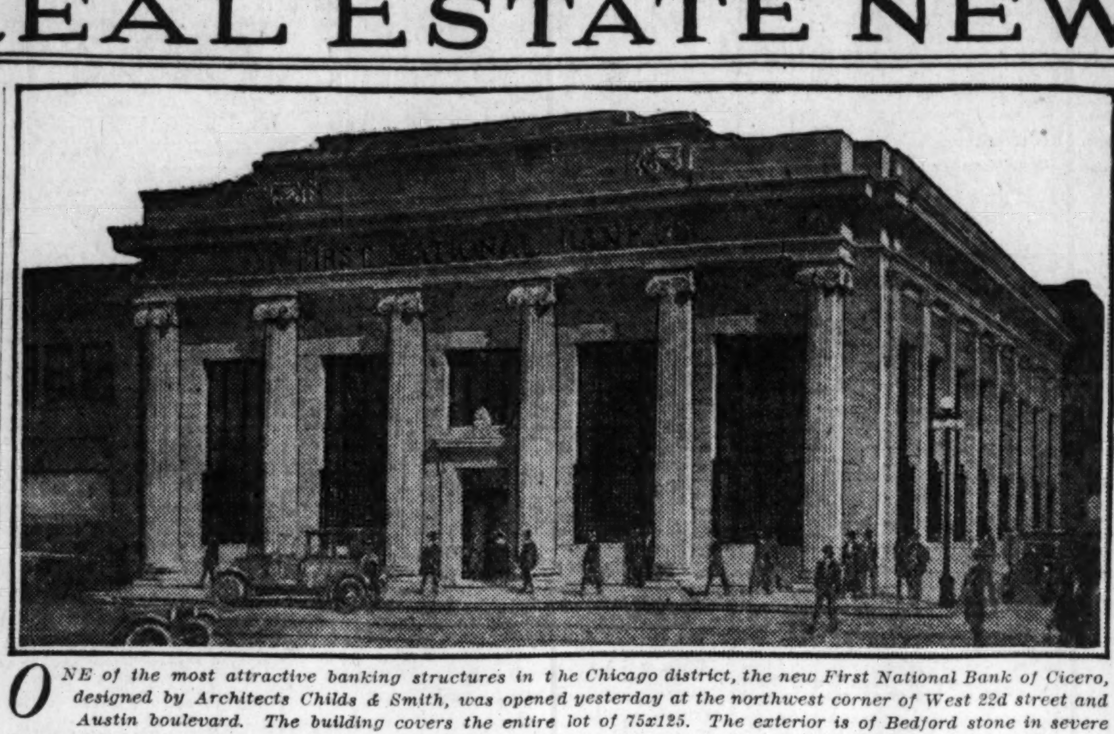
APRIL TRANSFERS SHOW BIG LOSS.

According to Joseph F. Haas, county recorder, real estate transfers for April were 1,135 less than the same month in 1920. The decrease in consideration was $6,757,762. The decrease in consideration in trust deeds and mortgages was $6,757,762.



ONE of the most attractive banking structures in the Chicago district, the new First National Bank of Cicero, designed by Architects Childs & Smith, was opened yesterday at the northwest corner of West 22d street and Austin boulevard. The building covers the entire lot of 75x125. The exterior is of Bedford stone in severe Greek style, Ionic order. The interior is of Italian white marble with walls faced from floor to ceiling. There is little ornamentation either inside or out. The cost was $250,000. There is a central lobby 40x75 with central stairs leading to the unusually large safety deposit vault, 25x75. William Kaspar, president of the Kaspar State Bank, is president of the First National Bank of Cicero.

$400,000 MOVING STAIR SYSTEM FOR 'THE FAIR'

Approximately $400,000 is being spent by The Fair installing a system of escalators from the first floor to the seventh, from plans by Architects Mundie & Jensen. The first of the moving stairways will be in operation about the middle of August and by Oct. 15 Mr. Jensen expects to have the entire system in operation.

"We have made a careful study of escalators and expect the new stairways will give a maximum of service," said Architect Jensen. "Escalators are rapidly growing in popularity with shoppers."

For some unexplainable reason Chicago stores have been slow in using the escalator to relieve elevator congestion. The Boston store is the only one at present with a system covering all its retail floors. They have handled as high as 60,000 daily during the holiday rush and with none of the manhandling one gets in crowded elevators. Mandel Brothers have a few escalators for employés only. When the present Leiter building was occupied by Siegel-Cooper, an escalator system was used with much success.

Charles G. Mollan Heads New Pershing Road Body

Charles G. Mollan has been elected president of the Pershing Road association, the organization back of the movement to make former 39th street a magnificent boulevard from the lake to the McCormick zoo. B. H. Heide was elected secretary; John Blair Whidden, assistant secretary, and William N. Jarnagin, treasurer. Vice presidents are: Congressman Martin B. Madden, H. C. Dana, E. A. Munger, Frederick H. Bartlett, George F. Harding, Harry W. Olchner, Charles E. Springer, A. A. Walters, and Charles C. Fitzmorris. The executive committee will include L. M. Smith, president of the Chicago Real Estate board; Col. Edmund R. Tompkins, representing the government; Halsey E. Poronto, Mr. Mollan, and Mr. Heide.

Plan $80,000 Business Block for South Halsted

Plans have been drawn by Architects Alexander L. Levy and William J. Klein for an $80,000 two story business block at 6032-46 South Halsted street, for K. Sidder, who has a cloak and suit store at 6242 South Halsted street. The new building will have a 150 foot frontage, with a depth of 118 feet, and have eight stores with lofts on the second floor.

Former Residence of Chauncey Keep Is Sold

Frederick S. Jensen of Evanston, of the Sherwin-Williams Paint company, has paid $18,000 for the eleven room residence at 1127 North Dearborn street, formerly the home of Chauncey Keep. Miss Frances Keep, his sister, was the grantor. She is now living at the Drake. The lot is 25x150. The Upper Michigan avenue office of H. O. Stone & Co. negotiated the sale.

Realtor Notes.

Frank H. Lang & Son, now on the bank floor of the Real Estate Exchange building, 40 North Dearborn street, are enlarging their offices by taking over the space formerly occupied by E. & S. Loewenstein, mortgage bankers. They also intend opening branch offices on the north and south sides.

M. E. Wood, for nine years with H. O. Stone & Co., is now in business for himself as M. E. Wood & Co., with offices in the Federal Life building, 168 North Michigan avenue, phone Central 4577. In addition to doing a general real estate business, he has the management of the Federal Life, the Benz and the Blatchford buildings.

Herbert H. Schoenlank and Fredric P. Kirschner, formerly manager and salesman for H. E. Henderson & Co., have formed a real estate partnership under the name of Schoenlank & Kirschner and have opened offices at 6570 Sheridan road. Their phone is Rogers Park 4008.

Sixteen to One Banquet

There will be sixteen speakers at the next meeting of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, which has been postponed from May 10 until Tuesday, May 17. Secretary Edwin H. Clark bases his belief that this imposing array of eloquence will be on hand by the fact that the sixteen delegates to the national convention of the American institute at Washington on the 11th, 12th and 13th will be back and all eager to tell about the convention. Dinner will be served at 6 p. m. as usual at the Art institute.

Zachary T. Davis is the latest recruit to the fast growing Upper Michigan avenue art center. Architect Davis announces that he has moved from the Steinway building, at 64 East Van Buren street, to suite 406 in the new Wrigley building. His new phone is Randolph 3236.

$2,000,000 PROJECT FOR SHERIDAN ROAD AND LAWRENCE AVE.

Here we have the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Lawrence avenue coming forward again with a contemplated improvement which, with the cost of land and buildings, ultimately will involve in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. In February of last year Herman Emerman, who owns the 250x150 property, had plans drawn for a magnificent hotel and theater. It failed to materialize.

Now, however, all signs point to the actual carrying out of the present project—when the building situation is adjusted. Architects Fugard and Knapp, associated with B. Leo Steif, are drawing plans for a four story store and office building to front 250 feet on Sheridan and 150 on Lawrence, with foundations capable of carrying several more stories. It will cost $700,000.

An entrance will be provided for a large theater to be erected in the rear probably some time next year, to cost probably $500,000. There will be twenty-one stores fronting on the two streets, with forty shops on the second and third floors and thirty-four offices on the fourth floor. The wrecking of the apartment buildings now on the property already has started.

Straus & Co. practically have negotiated a loan of $850,000, twelve years at 6 per cent, on the property. The value of the land is shown by two offers Mr. Emerman has received, one for $750,000 and the other an offer of a $5,000 option on the property at $1,000,000. Both were refused.

$700,000 FLATS FOR EDGEWATER

As soon as the labor situation gets ironed out work will begin on a $700,000 six story apartment building at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Balmoral avenues, fronting 85 feet on Kenmore and 150 on Balmoral.

According to Architect Eric E. Hall, there will be thirty apartments of three rooms each, twenty of two rooms each, and twenty flats of one room each, all furnished. There will be eight stores. Work is being rushed on the plans so the day the labor situation gets settled work can begin. Samuel J. Shaeffer and associates are the owners.

Illinois Masons Start Great Hospital Project

Preliminary to erecting one of the finest hosptials in the world, the various Masonic bodies throughout the state have financed the purchase by the Illinois Masonic Hospital association of the Chicago Union hospital at 834 Wellington avenue. The indicated price was $100,000, subject to $75,000.

According to Dr. Elmer E. Vaughan, former president of the board of directors of the Chicago Union hospital, and still in charge of the hospital, the institution, while operated by Masons, will be a charitable institution open to all.

The property covers two acres of ground and in addition to the four story fireproof main hospital building, erected in 1912, has four other structures in the group. There are sixty beds.

Dr. Vaughan states that it is the intention of the hospital association ultimately to erect a magnificent new main building.

OAK PARK'S WAR ON HUGE FLATS REACHES COURTS

Builders Seek Legal Aid to Get Permit.

Oak Park's fight to save its residential districts from big flat buildings has reached the courts. Mills & Sons, Chicago builders, have begun mandamus proceedings to force Commissioner of Public Works Charles E. White Jr. to issue them a building permit for a fifty-two apartment house at the northeast corner of Euclid avenue and Pleasant street, which is in a strictly residential district. The hearing is set for Tuesday before Judge Morrill. The village will be defended by its attorney, Frederick B. Hovey, and J. L. Vette will represent the protesting home owners.

"It is the policy of the village board to fight this matter out," said Capt. White. "This case will be a test of zoning, and Mr. Vette has made a special study on zoning. Permits for some big flat buildings have been granted because they are in districts zoned for such structures.

To Be Made a Test Case.

"We purpose making a test of the Mills case, and on the outcome depends the success of the attempt to keep certain parts of Oak Park strictly residential. We've commenced the proceedings to zone the district in which Mills & Sons wish to build their big apartment."

The zoning commission of the village has fixed Wednesday, May 18, 8 p. m., in the Municipal building, for a public hearing on the village zoning proposition.

Another Battle Started.

Meanwhile another battle has started over the proposed five story hotel at the southeast corner of Washington boulevard and Oak Park avenue. The building line in Oak Park avenue is forty-five feet back, and the hotel plans, it is claimed, call for a set back of only five feet. The boulevard building line is thirty-five feet, and the hotel is to set back only fifteen feet. Property owners have retained Attorney James V. Cunningham and threaten an injunction to stop the building unless the permit is revoked.

Railway Exchange Buffet to Be Made Into Tearoom

The buffet opening on the rotunda of the Railway Exchange builing has been leased by Gertrude Hastings for ten years at a reported $100,000 term rental and will be converted into a tearoom. Warren A. Cahn was broker. Aldis J. Browne of Moss & Co. represented the lessor, the Standard Office company.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

"BRASS TACKS" ON BUYING FURS.

Two and two make four. You can't make two and two equal three, or five, no matter how clever you are in arguing the matter.

The Resale Shop regularly and consistently undersells all other Chicago stores on high grade furs.

The reasons for this are just as simple as two and two making four. The store which attempts to persuade you otherwise is trying to make two and two equal three, or five. And they are not clever enough to do it.

Listen here!

The price you pay for a fur depends on three things, and only three things. Number one is the original wholesale cost to dealer. Number two is overhead expenses, such as rent, selling costs, credit losses, etc. Number three is profit.

The Resale Shop price to you is lower than that of any other store because each one of the three things making up the price is lower.

Number one, wholesale cost is lower because we buy in huge quantities and by having ready cash we pick up bargains which an ordinary fur store doing a credit business could not handle. Number two, overhead expense, is lower because our out-of-the-loop location means a low rent, selling expenses are kept at a minimum, and there are no credit losses, such as the average fur store has.

Number three, profit, is lower because we consider it better business to make less profit per sale and make more sales through our reputation of giving the best fur values in the city.

This is why we did a record breaking fur business this last year.

The Resale Shop handles bargains for cash, and bargains in first quality furs is our specialty. We have furs made in our own factory, and a written guarantee goes with every purchase. We do not handle poor quality furs, nor furs that have been worn. We resell manufacturers' samples, which are always of the best quality and fully guaranteed.
